After June the saucer depression around the tree is filled with well decayed stable manure, or lawn clippings or straw or dry litter. This is called mulch to prevent the soil from drying. Immediately after planting any shade tree—should be supported with a stout stake well driven in the soil, two inches away from the trunk and in tying the tree to it a band of straw should be used to hold the stake away from the tree so that it does not rub against the bark. If the tree is very tall, we resort to guying instead of staking. We take three pieces of old rubber hose each about a foot long, and through each we run a fairly heavy wire and place each hose around the trunk about two-thirds up the height below the branches and we drive three pegs about six feet away from the tree in a circle of even distances and fasten the wires very tightly to them. In this way no storm or wind can shake the tree or loosen the roots. The guys must remain there for a full year, and every once in a while examine them to see that they have not loosened. If they have we must tighten them again. Every tree requires some pruning. How much depends entirely on the variety, form and age of the tree. If the tree planted is young and has not attained its real shape it might be best to cut all branches back to within a foot of the trunk and the very tip back to the top set of branches. oYung trees, as a rule have simply a few out-stretched thin branches. In this instance it is considered best to cut all branches back to within six inches of the trunk, for this would hasten the true formation of the crown; while allowing it to grow as it came from the nursery would retard the true form for three years and the tree would never be as symmetrical in form.

Every variety of tree must have its own treatment and amateurs would do well to call in an expert for advice before attempting the top pruning on their own accord, but top pruning is absolutely essential and because the newly planted tree makes its start on the food stored up on the roots there is not enough sap in the beginning to run to the tip of every branch, and thus only part of the tree comes to leaf the first year and the rest dies. While if the branches are shortened the sap can reach the top and the whole tree starts to grow at once.

The planting of shrubs and evergreens differs very materially from the planting of other trees and invite special consideration of their own.

Yvonne Primps Up For Birthday Party

This might suggest that the miracle of the Dionne quintuplets was done by mirrors. But it's really only the pretty Yvonne primping up for her first birthday party on Tuesday, May 28. The vanity of these women!—(Photo Copyright by Central Press Canadian.)

The many friends of Mrs. James Baxter will be glad to learn that she is recovering nicely from her recent critical illness.

Mr. Mossom Walker has resumed his position with Warren Paving Company at Prince Edward Island.

Mrs. John Shea has returned from a pleasant visit with friends in Lindsay.

Mrs. Charles Deyell and Mrs. Mervin Armstrong were guests of Mrs. James Naysmith, Lindsay, one day recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stinson and daughter, Helen, also Mrs. Bradburn and Mrs. Shields, of Omemee, visited Mr. and Mrs. Sam Stinson on Sunday.

Mrs. Charles Deyell, Russel Deyell and Helen Deyell visited Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McNevin, of Reaboro, on Friday last.

IN MEMORIAM.

HARRINGTON.— In fond and cherished memory of a dear husband and father, Bernard Harrington, who passed to his eternal reward on May 24, 1934.

Gone but not forgotten.

Oh, how we miss the loving face
That always wore a smile,
The kind and gentle words
That scattered sunshine all the while.

More each day we miss you, father;
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within our hearts concealed.

—Sadly missed by his loving Wife and Family.

KEENE.

Miss Helen Weir entertained the Tillicum Class at her home on Thursday evening. An interesting program on "Home Decorating" was prepared by Muriel Thompson and Alberta Comrie and was much enjoyed. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Miss Helen Gillespie, of Apsley, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Gillespie.

Miss Marjorie Brown left on Wednesday last for Guelph where she enters Homewood Sanitarium as nurse-in-training.

Miss Isobel McCarthy, of Buffalo, and Miss Mabel McCarthy, of Marmora, were week-end guests at the Victoria House.

Peterborough's Possibilities

By HOMER MOORE

ARTICLE 32

It has been said that the only thing that can't fall down—is a worm. So it is no disgrace for us if we "fall down" with any effort as long as we make another attempt.

1935 Will go into the records as the year all the physically and mentally-well citizens of Peterborough city realized a glorious future awaited them if they tried to help it come true.

There are about twelve months in which we can get out into our rocky areas to see what is waiting there for our development program, before other matters demand our attention. In this calculation, the months of snow and ice which seal tight those treasures, are left out.

The Bible carries the statement that a message in stone would be found which would be a guide to the British race. That "message in stone" has been found and translated and has been correct so far.

There is also another "message in stone" which could be used as a "Key" to the development of our own and nearby mineral industries which of course would have a beneficial influence on every business and industry in Peterborough city and county.

In the Township of Lake, at the narrows of Trout Lake in the County of Hastings, which is adjacent to Methuen Township in Peterborough County, is, in my opinion, an impressive rock formation. From a few hundred yards away, it appears to be a huge stone-book. This book of stone is in a vertical position and has the appearance of leaves like found in a story book. What kind of a story do you suppose this gigantic stone book tells? In my opinion it is not a book of fiction but a book of facts because nature never makes a mistake. Who can read this stone book which is so near Peterborough city? Can the students of our schools or their teachers read it? Can our doctors or other professional men read it? Can our business men understand it? What about our theologians—can they read it? It is one of God's stone-books, can bible students interpret its message? How much of it has been read by our geologists? Perhaps every type of God-given mentality, could help throw light on its contents! The writer found the fact of the existence of this stone book from a report issued by the Geological Survey, Dominion Government. But the contents of those stone pages have not been acted upon. Some geological professors have looked at it through their microscopes and found what the leaves of that stone book are made of.

When a person wants a drink of water, he is not interested in the fact it is made up of hydrogen and oxygen. On the contrary he wants to know that water will benefit him. This stone-book we have found in our district is known to be made up of quartz, pyroxene and hornblende, but will that information be of later benefit to our city and country? I think so, if we act on it. That information, which the microscope found through the mentality and observation of those geologists, is a "key" to future developments.

The leaves or pages in this book of stone are in some cases light-grey in color. Other leaves are nearly black. Some are only a fraction of an inch in thickness, while others attain a maximum thickness of about six inches.

Books made of paper are everywhere. We know some books are not worth reading. They are filled with harmful thoughts—thoughts which develop destructive ideas. There are other books which are worth their weight in gold because they are full of constructive ideas—ideas which develop progressive attainments. The existence of books indicate they have been made for some purpose. We know they are made to be looked into to see what the contents are. So a book draws our attention.

God knows everything. Did He cause that Trout Lake rock formation to appear like a book so we would look into it? Did He place anything in that book which could never be interpreted correctly? I don't think so. There is a person or group of persons somewhere with the "right" mentality to see what that rock-book really indicates. God made the proper material and placed it in the right places to enable some person to make the high-power microscopes to read those rock pages. Already the information has been found to be connected with quartz, pyroxene and hornblende.

Going into it further what do you suppose quartz, pyroxene and hornblende indicate? I believe they were placed in that rock-book as "keys" to unlock the secrets of the surrounding territory which includes the County of Peterborough. The majority of geologists and business men and citizens generally, have up to now, failed to see what those industrial materials really are. It is my opinion that astounding revelations will come from the right interpretation of that rocky formation made like a book. How will that come about? By using rightly the material nearby which God put there to make the reading of His stone messages, easy. The material I refer to is of course "lead" and it is found in abundance in the same township as the stone-book—the Township of Lake.

"Lead" is the material which is so important in the making of optical glass. It increases the magnifying power, enormously. Thus with the help of lead, the courses of stars and comets are revealed. The length of days and seasons, the tides, even the weather can be known in advance. With the help of the magnifying lenses, man has developed the serums that protect humanity against diphtheria, typhoid and other diseases. The same lead is used in the making of the moving picture lens and the glass lens of ordinary cameras, spectacles, eye-glasses, and reading glasses. The microscope lens, containing lead has enabled science to count and classify bacteria so small that millions can live in a drop of milk. The use of lead in lens making has made the planets in the universe objects as familiar to astronomers as the chickens in a barn-yard to a farmer's wife.

There is lead in the telescopic lens of the sextant with which the navigating officer determines his latitude and longitude."

"Rule Britannia, Britannia rules the waves," with the help of lenses containing lead.

Is it becoming apparent to you now, that Peterborough County and adjacent areas are destined to become, with your help and God's help, a very important part of the British Commonwealth of Nations?

That stone-book with its colored leaves at Trout Lake, holds a message beneficial to the city of Peterborough and the lead to make the glass of high power to read it, has been placed by God—nearby. What a wonderful opportunity that gives to our optometists who can establish in Peterborough a lens manufacturing enterprise and produce THE lens to read all of that rock book as I believe it can be read.

The fact it contains hornblende, quartz and pyroxene and a few other materials are of interest only to a geologist but what do those things indicate? Another very valuable, at present overlooked, material.

FIRES ARE BAD TIMBER LANDS OF 5 PROVINCES

Rain Brings Relief to Northern Ontario and Manitoba Areas.

QUINTS ARE SAFE.

Homes of 45 Settlers Are Destroyed by Fires in Province of Quebec.

(By Canadian Press)

Fire fighters in five provinces today continued their efforts to check bush fires that blazed through timber areas and swept away buildings in sparsely settled country. No loss of life was reported.

Rain brought relief to Northern Ontario and Manitoba but farther eastward some fires were still out of control.

More than 800 men fought 24 hours against a fire in the Haliburton district of Ontario. The town of Haliburton and the village of Eagle Lake were threatened and 800 cords of wood fell before flames that cut a five-mile swath. At noon it was believed the two places were out of danger and the fire subsiding.

Fire near the Dionne quintuplets' hospital home outside Callander was burned out today. For a time yesterday it was feared the blaze might strike poles carrying power wires to the hospital.

A fire in the Gogama area of Northern Ontario was believed of incendiary origin. Three others in the district were under control. Fire claimed 1,500 acres of bush near Falconbridge, 1,500 at Chapleau and 1,000 at Capreol.

Rain aided fire fighters in the Sault Ste. Marie district where five blazes kept 200 men busy yesterday. The most serious was at Pancake Bay.

Fires at the head of the lakes in Ontario and in Northeastern Manitoba were checked by rain.

In Nova Scotia fires were burning

"BLIND" BEGGAR REGAINS SIGHT

Bottle of Rubbing Alcohol Effects Swift Recovery.

IN WELLAND COURT.

WELLAND, Ont., May 27 (C.P.)—Police brought James Cole into the station for questioning regarding his eyesight. He had been begging on the strength of an "I am blind" sign.

"Lost my eyesight fighting for King and Country," said Cole. A doctor was called and after a brief examination expressed the opinion Cole could see.

The beggar still insisted he was blind. A constable then produced a bottle of rubbing alcohol and was gazing at it reflectively when he was almost bowled over as Cole rushed at him and wrenched the bottle out of his hands.

Cole was arraigned on a charge of begging, and remanded until June 3rd.

Grand Old Man Dead

ANDREW FAIRBAIRN

Grand old man of Lakefield and one of the oldest resident native sons is dead in his 93rd year.

GRAND OLD MAN OF LAKEFIELD DEAD 93RD YEAR

BORN IN SMITH TWP.

LAKEFIELD, May 27 (Examiner Correspondence). — Andrew Fairbairn, one of the oldest and most respected residents of Peterborough County is dead.

He passed away at his residence here this morning in his 93rd year following a brief illness.

Numbered among the venerable company of old-timers whose memories could recall inspiring tales of pioneer life in the early settlements, he was a native of Smith Township, having been born on the old family homestead.

His parents were the late Andrew Fairbairn and Eliza Ann Hagerman, the former having emigrated from his native Scotland when an 18-year-old shepherd lad to subsequently take up land in Smith township and hew for himself and family a home out of the wilderness.

Very Short Illness

Despite his advanced years, the late Mr. Fairbairn retained all his faculties almost to the end of life. As recently as ten days ago he was down to the village post office as was his daily habit, and until illness prevented him from leaving the house he had been a regular attendant at church and Sunday school.

Throughout his entire lifetime, the late Mr. Fairbairn held staunchly to the Presbyterian faith which was so forcibly impressed upon him from his earliest days. At the time of his death he was clerk of the session of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church: an office he had held continuously for over a quarter century.

Three times he represented Peterborough Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church in Canada at General Assembly. Once at Victoria and twice at Halifax.

The late Mr. Fairbairn acquired

MALLET MURDER BLAME ASSUMED BY TWO LOVERS

Trial of Woman and Youth of Eighteen Opens in London.

ATTRACTS CROWD.

Elderly Husband, Formerly of .. Canada, Was "in the .. Way."

LONDON, May 27 (C.P. Cable).—Remarkable public interest in the Anglo - Canadian "Bournemouth triangle case" was exemplified today when 31-year-old Alma Rattenbury and 18-year-old George Stoner, her chauffeur, went on trial at the Old Bailey.

They are charged with the mallet murder of the woman's husband, 67-year-old Francis Mawson Rattenbury, distinguished architect who spent many years on Canada's Pacific coast and designed the British Columbia Provincial Parliament Buildings. Mrs. Rattenbury spent her childhood in Kamloops, B.C.

One hundred persons were waiting outside the Old Bailey hours before the opening, most of them women. Some unemployed waited all through the night hoping to sell seats at $2.50 apiece to the would-be spectators. A coffee stall-keeper established himself and supplied coffee and rolls.

Mr. Justice Humphreys presided. R. P. Croome-Johnson, K.C., and Anthony Hawke appeared for the prosecution and T. J. O'Connor, K.C., and E. S. Montagu for Mrs. Rattenbury; J. D. Cassewell for Stoner.

Stoner Only a Boy.

Mr. Croome-Johnson said the charge was the two accused murdered Rattenbury by an attack on March 24, which resulted in injuries causing his death March 28. The said feature, he said, was that Stoner was little more than a boy, aged 18.

Croome-Johnson told how Mrs. Rattenbury and Stoner occupied adjoining bedrooms in a hotel in Kensington, London, March 19, passing as brother and sister.

The prosecutor submitted the relationship between the accused was adulterous, and that Rattenbury was "in the way." He contended the crime was committed about nine o'clock on the evening of March 24, with a mallet, produced in court, which Stoner had borrowed from his grandfather, a carpenter.

Two Confessions.

In a signed statement to the police, Mrs. Rattenbury said her huband dared her to kill him as he wanted to die. She hit him with the mallet and hid it outside the house, the statement said. "I would shot him if I had a gun," it read.

After his own arrest Stoner told police, according to the prosecution, that he "did the job."

Known To Be Lovers.

The first witness, Miss Irene Riggs, Mrs. Rattenbury's companion, declared Mrs. Rattenbury was always "perfectly friendly" with her husband, but she added she had known the two accused were 'lovers' for some time.

Mrs. Rattenbury had told her Stoner "more than once" threatened her life, she added.

Witness told the story of a quarrel between the two last February. She went to Stoner's bedroom at midnight, hearing the noise, and found Stoner holding Mrs. Rattenbury. She separated the pair, and Mrs. Rattenbury appeared "scared," she said.

Miss Riggs declared Stoner used to carry a dagger. She had asked him why, and he replied it was because he had seen Rattenbury with his wife that afternoon. On one occasion, witness testified, Rattenbury had showed her an injury to his arm and said his wife had done it.

The trial was adjourned until tomorrow.

LLOYD GEORGE IS BASIS OF ATTACK

Indignant Because News of Armistice Not Broken to Commons by Himself.

DENIES STORY.

(By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, May 27.—(CP Cable).—A pungent attack upon the attitude of David Lloyd George, then Prime Minister, towards the late Baron Wester Wemyss, First Sea Lord of the Admiralty at the time of the Armistice, is contained in a biography of Baron Wester Weyss by his widow, published to-day.

Lloyd George was represented as indignant because the news of the Armistice became public before he had announced it officially in the House of Commons Nov. 11, 1918. The War-time Premier last night denied this as a "preposterous story."

Member of War Cabinet.

Lord Wester Wemyss became First Sea Lord in 1917 in succession to Admiral Jellicoe and signed the Armistice with Foch in that capacity. He also was a member of the War Cabinet in 1918.

"When the Armistice, which entered into force at 11 a.m. had been signed at 5.10 a.m." says the biography, "Wester Wemyss telephoned the tidings to the King and the Prime Minister. On his return next day he was immediately sent

"They tell me there was one here in our high school not many months ago among the students with one of the teachers in on it."

PARENTS READY TO PAY $200,000 TO KIDNAPPERS

Family Pleads With Officials to Let Abductors Return Boy Unharmed.

TEXT OF KIDNAP NOTE.

Twenty-one Rules to Follow Were Set Out By Kidnappers.

TACOMA, Wash., May 27.—(AP)—Fearful for the life of George Weyerhaeuser, all law enforcement agencies today heeded the pleas of the boy's distracted family and gave the abductors every opportunity to return him unharmed.

The family pleaded with officials, apparently because of the sinister warning in the ransom note, which gave them five days to comply with demands.

Third Day Since Crime

This was the third day since the child was kidnapped and the note gave detailed instructions on how he would be returned.

The family indicated its willingness to make the $200,000 ransom payment immediately and sought a new means of contacting the kidnappers.

The kidnappers gave the immensely wealthy timber family five days to comply with the ransom demand, which contained 21 specific instructions for payment of the money. The boy was kidnapped Friday.

Lansbury Compliments British Intermediary in Ethiopian Conference.

TENSION LESSENED.

LONDON, May 27 (C.P. Cable).—The entire House of Commons cheered to-day when George Lansbury, leader of the Labor Opposition, congratulated Anthony Eden, youthful Lord Privy Seal, on his success in getting Italy and Ethiopia at Geneva to settle their quarrel by arbitration.

After reviewing what the League had done, Mr. Eden said: "Without suggesting that the Council's action finally disposes of the tension which unfortunately has arisen between Italy and Ethiopia as a result of the Ualual and other (frontier) incidents, I am confident it represents an important advance towards a friendly solution."

Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary, told the House reports from Rome that Great Britain was strengthening its forces along the Ethiopian frontier were untrue.

Replying to a question from a member, Sir John said: "I am glad to have the opportunity of stating publicly the whole of these statements are absolutely without any foundation whatever."

LABOR PROGRAM OF SOCIALIZING TEXTILE PLANTS

Proposes British Cotton Corporation to Control Entire Industry.

TRADES UNION SCHEME.

Suggests Compensation to Shareholders by Government Bond Issue.

LONDON, May 27 (CP Cable).—The general council of the Trades Union Congress to-day issued its scheme for the socialization of the British cotton industry.

Under the plan the industry would be controlled and operated by a British cotton corporation which from the appointed day would take over all business undertakings engaged in the spinning, manufacturing, finishing, packing and marketing of cotton goods and mixed fabrics.

The basis of compensation would be the reasonable net maintainable revenue of the undertakings concerned.

The form to be taken by this compensation might be that of terminable annuities, or of redeemable government bonds bearing interest paid out of the proceeds of the industry. In no case, however, would shareholders have any voting rights or rights of foreclosure. An arbitration tribunal would be established

800 MEN BUSY FIGHTING FIRES HOMES ARE LOST

WAR VETERAN MISSING.

Eagle Lake Settlement in Path of Flames—Many Narrow Escapes Recorded.

LINDSAY, Ont., May 27.—(CP)—At 1.30 p.m. today a report from Haliburton stated a high wind that was gathering momentum hourly was fanning the embers of the fire-swept forests around Haliburton into a raging inferno again. Few men were left in the village following almost hourly appeals from the fire area for additional recruits to fight the onrushing flames.

A family by the name of Stoddart who reside on the edge of the village have had to move out of their home because of the nearness of the flames.

Fred Jones, reeve of Dysart township, has taken charge of the fire fighting crews and under his able direction some 200 men from the village are doing their best with shovels and axes to fight back the flames.

Hopeful of Saving Homes

The latest threat of the raging forest is the village of West Guilford, eight miles north of Haliburton, where some 30 homes are directly in the path of the flames. The attack on the fire is centered at this point at the present time and the men are hopeful of saving the homes of the inhabitants.

The slaughter house of J. Robinson, butcher, rumored as having fallen prey to the flames, was later found to have escaped the fire working all round the vicinity of the slaughter house but not harming it in any way.

Some anxiety is felt in the village regarding James Parsons, trapper, who resides in a lone cabin in the fire-infested area. No word has been received from Mr. Parsons

NEW CONTACT IS BEING SOUGHT WITH KIDNAPERS

$200,000 Ransom is Asked From Wealthy Parents of Child.

MONEY IS READY.

Child Was Snatched While on Way Home From School.

TACOMA, Wash., May 27.—(AP)—New contact with the kidnappers of nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser was sought today by his distressed parents in the face of an ominous warning the boy would be killed unless $200,000 ransom were paid. A threat that death awaits their son unless his kidnappers are paid within two days was in the hands of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser, parents of the victim.

In an advertisement in the personal columns of a Seattle Sunday newspaper, the parents asked the kidnappers indicate "another method of reaching you" because of "publicity beyond our control."

The army of federal, state, county and city authorities seeking the boy's safe return meanwhile relaxed its policy of "lying low" until the abductors release the young member of the wealthy Weyerhaeuser lumber family.

Detectives grimly paced through the Tacoma postoffice in the hope "the egoist" who sent his first ransom demand by a special delivery letter, might again use this means to communicate with the parents.

Two federal agents took up stations in the office of Detective Captain Cliff Osborne to advise on courses of action relating to 'tips' in the case, which has aroused the entire Pacific Northwest.

Late last night all lights in the square white Weyerhaeuser home overlooking Commencement Bay were out except in one room on the second story.

CHICAGO WHEAT

Distressed selling by holders of May delivery contracts led to a general tumble of grain values Saturday, breaking numerous low price records for the season.

With but a few days more left before the expiring of the current month's contracts, May corn and May oats bore the brunt of the selling, and each suffered an overnight maximum drop of 2 cents a bushel, taking May corn to about 7 cents below high points reached earlier in the week. In some quarters the gold crisis in France was responsible as having had much to do with emphasizing grain market unsettlement.

Wheat closed nervous, ⅝c to 1⅛c under Friday's finish, July 87⅝c to 87¼c; corn ⅝c to 1⅛c down, July 78⅝c to 78¾c; oats unchanged to a setback of 2 cents, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents higher.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, May 27 (C.P.) — Truck hogs rose 15 cents to $9.25 on the Toronto Livestock Market to-day to feature the early afternoon session. Cattle were fairly active after a shaky start, with prices mostly steady. The calf, sheep and lamb divisions were steady to firm.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle, 3,500; calves, 1,000; hogs, 970; sheep and lambs, 530.

Prices were steady on handyweight butcher cattle. Weighty steer prices were weak but prices were seady on all other grades of killers. The few weighty steers in the early sales sold at $5 to $7.60 cwt. Choice butcher cattle went at $6.25 to $6.75 cwt., with plains downwards to $5. Good cows sold firm at $4.50 to $5. Bulls were steady at $3.25 to $4.50. Choice fed calves sold at $7.25 to $8, with medium ranging down to $6.75. Common to medium stockers sold from $4 to $5.50.

The calf market sold choice vealers at $7 to $7.50. Common vealers sold mostly at $4 to $5, with some at $5.50.

Hogs, unquoted in the early market, showed a 15-cent gain at $9.25 for bacons. Prices were still unsettled on car hogs.

Choice Spring lambs brought $10 cwt., with commons at $7 to $8 cwt. An offering of 200 feed-lot lambs received a bid of $8 cwt. Sheep were firm at $1.50 to $3.50 cwt., according to quality.

Buffalo reported a Kosher boycott against the high prices of meat and the market there was nearly at a standstill to-day. It will likely have a later effect on the Toronto market.

LETTER TO SUBSCRIBERS

Dear Subscribers:

We have been asked by the members of the Travel Club to write to you and explain a few points that have somewhat confused both Club members and subscribers.

First, subscribers want to know if renewal subscriptions count for votes in favor of the candidates. Yes, renewals certainly do count and they count greatly for the members. Another thing subscribers ask is: "Do back subscriptions count?" By all means, YES. A payment of six months or a year back subscription counts just the same as a renewal. This week ONLY, a six months renewal subscription counts 10,000 votes and a full year renewal subscription, 24,000 votes. A new six months subscription counts 12,500 and a full year new subscription counts 20,000 votes. With exception of new subscriptions, which receive a special bonus, the votes are the same on renewals or back subscriptions.

Another matter that has caused both candidates and subscribers

Fish And Game Club Organized At C.G.E.

A Fish and Game Club under the auspices of the C.G.E. Social and Athletic Club was organized last week, when twenty anglers gathered in the gatehouse. The object of the club is to stimulate interest in fishing and hunting, and to educate the members in the value of conservation and the observance of the fish and game laws. Prizes will be given for the best catches of the season for different varieties of fish with the executive of the club acting as judges.

Clinton Heath was elected president, with Stan Adamson as secretary, and the executive will also include Harold Foster, Max Meinerel, and Pete Hutton. Every employee who wishes to join this club should send his name to the secretary. There is no entry fee.

REDS BLAMED FOR TROUBLE IN VANCOUVER

ALSO BLAMES BANKERS.

Men Who Want to Work Will Be Permitted to Do So, He Says.

VANCOUVER, May 27 (C.P.). — Work along Vancouver's waterfront must go on and, if necessary, 10,000 men will be mobilized to keep the waterfront in operation, said Mayor G. G. McGeer in accepting a challenge which he said came from organized Communism.

Assails Communists.

The fiery Mayor assailed both International Communists and dictatorships by money in an address last night. Mayor McGeer anticipated a state of strike on the waterfront to-day when longshoremen put into operation the despatch of their own workers to ships instead of permitting the Shipping Federation of British Columbia to select those who get the jobs.

International bankers had worked hand in hand with Radicals before to create a condition where martial law had to be declared and a dictatorship established, said Mayor McGeer.

The same thing could occur in Vancouver and "certainly there is no reason on the part of international bankers to complain of revolution and chaos should set off the need for a military dictatorship," he added.

Permit Men to Work.

Men who want to work on the waterfront, said Mayor McGeer, are going to be permitted to work.

"Since I came into office," the Mayor continued, "sentences in penal servitude amounting to more than 80 years have been meted out to white slavers. I consider the Communist agitator of the type we have to deal with in Vancouver just as great a menace and I propose to make this city just as unhealthy for Communistic agitators who incite their fellow-men to riot and rebellion as we have made it for members of the underworld."

Change in Government.

"The international bankers know a change of government in Canada is imminent, and that both Liberals and Co-operative Commonwealth Federation are committed to a policy which provides for establishment of a publicly-owned and publicly-controlled national bank. They have every reason to fear the results of the coming general election.

"Therefore," said Mayor McGeer, "it is not beyond the limit of possibility that the price probe (the Royal Commission which inquired into mass buying activities) and all the conflict and disagreement that has developed about it constitutes nothing but a glorified red herring that is being drawn across the trail of the Bank of Canada as an effective means of concealing the establishment of that institution, as the controlling power of the Government of this nation."

his education in the little rural school located over two miles from his early home.

Father of Five Children.

At the age of twenty-seven years he was united in marriage to Sarah McKee. The ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Mr. Sloan of the Methodist church on June 1, 1870. It took place at the residence of the bride's father at Selwyn on the eve of her nineteenth birthday. There were five children of the marriage. Four children survive.

William Fairbairn, one of the sons, is living on the old Fairbairn homestead, located near the County House of Refuge. The three daughters are Mrs. Hugh Kidd of Smith township; Mrs. Charles Bickell of Toronto, and Mrs. John Hampton. A son, Bruce Fairbairn, predeceased many years ago at the age of ten.

The old gentleman lived for seventy-eight years on the old homestead before going into retirement at Lakefield thirteen years ago, and he and his wife lived to see their golden wedding anniversary together. Mrs. Fairbairn died five years ago last October.

Notice to Travel Club Members 150,000 Extra Votes for Every $10.00 Turned In This Week

The Travel Club office has been besieged with requests by the candidates that the EXTRA VOTE offer be continued. It is our earnest desire to conform with any requests made by the members as far as is humanly possible. However, we have previously stated that at no time during the contest would the votes be greater than during the first week, and have also stated that the votes would decline each period of the contest and to comply with the urgent requests of the members and at the same time keep faith with them, we are this week offering 150,000 votes for every club of $10.00 turned in. Any portion of last week's clubs of $12.00 remaining to the credit of the candidates will be credited to the candidates on their $10.00 clubs of this week.

Padlock Is Stolen From Police Gate

ALBANY, N.Y., May 27 (C.P.). — To the tune of "Who stole the lock off the henhouse door." Albany police are warbling, "Who stole the lock off the headquarters gate?"

The gate is an iron one in the corridor leading to Police Court. What's more, the padlock was pilfered while court was in session.

PUBLIC WORKS FIRST ON LIST

Commoners Will Continue Debate on Public Works Measure.

$15 Millions For Railways.

OTTAWA, May 27. (CP).—Fortified by a long week-end, members of parliament will to-day resume consideration of the Government's public works bill which has for its chief object the furnishing of employment to Canadians who need it. When the House rose on Thursday night that part of the bill wich provides $18,000,000 for public works and undertakings had passed. Its career through the Commons was a stormy one, but finally, after holding up votes for the Toronto tunnel to Hanlan's Island, and an approvriation for harbors and rivers, the opposition let them go through.

Consideration will now be given to that portion of the bill which would authorize the Government to guarantee an amount of $15,000,000 for the two great Canadian railway systems. The money is to be used for equipment purchases, and it is intended that the placing of orders for what the railways need in this respect shall result in employment for a large number of people.

Three More Relief Bills

In addition to the public works bill, the House now has before it four measures based on recommendations of the Royal Commission on Price Spreads and Mass Buying. It is understood that three more bills are in the making and will be brought down as soon as

Canadian Soldiers Buried in US Honored

FORT WORTH, Tex., May 27.—(AP).—The only British soldiers of the Great War buried in the United States rest in a little plot in the Greenwood cemetery here.

Tribute was paid to their memory yesterday when several score of persons gathered at the plot and saw the flags of the British Empire and the United States draped around the central monument that maks the graves of 11 men and the baby daughters of a British soldier.

The soldiers were Canadians, members of the Royal Flying Corps, in training here at Benbrook Field when they lost their lives.

LINDSAY, Ont., May 27 (Special to The Examiner).—Miss Cynthia Warner, bookkeeper in Flavelles Limited, met with a painful accident Saturday night when she was crossing Kent street, being hit by a car driven by Mansell Fleming, of Bobcaygeon. Miss Warner had her right wrist broken, the ligaments in her right leg injured, besides other minor injuries. She was rushed to Ross Hospital and to-day is resting comfortably. The accident was investigated by Police Officer Alf. Hodgson, which he found was purely accidental.

FIRE IS BURNING NEAR HOSPITAL OF QUINTUPLETS

Not Slightest Danger to Building and Least of All to Babies Officials Say.

BIRTHDAY TUESDAY.

CALLANDER, Ont., May 27 (AP).—Bush fires crackled to-day along a zig-zag front in the direction of the little hospital where the Dionne quintuplets' first birthday anniversary will be celebrated to-morrow.

Billows of smoke rolled from the burning second growth stand of spruce, birch and poplar across the back acres of the farm of Oliva Dionne and in sight of his house, where, one year ago to-morrow, the five babies were born.

Not Any Danger.

Because there was no wind during the night to whip it forward, the fire moved slowly. Officials in charge of the hospital said there was not the slightest danger to the building, and least of all to the babies themselves, for they could be quickly moved if an emergency required.

A dozen or more men fought to check the fire throughout the night, seemingly with little success. Fire breaks were made by setting new fires in the path of the flames. Fences of dry rails were being torn down.

The Dionne homestead is in the path of the fire should a strong wind blow out of the west, but the house and barn are at least 200 yards from the timbered areas and a quarter mile from the fire.

Last evening one could stand on the hill where site the home of "Grandfather" Legros, father of Mrs Dionne, and see the smoke from three brush fires.

Birthday Tuesday.

The observance of the birthday anniversary—the first in history ever celebrated by quintuplets—will take place at 7.45 p.m. E.D.T., at the hospital, with David Croll, Minister of Welfare for Ontario, as principal speaker. The event will be broadcast.

A solemn high mass will be celebrated to-morrow morning at the church at Corbeil, where both Oliva Dionne and Elzire Legros, who was to become his wife, attended mass as children.

The Distinguished Conduct Medal League of England is demanding a pension of 12 cents a day to all holders of the D.C.M.

Even a Robin Will Change Her Mind

ALBANY, N.Y., May 27 (C.P.). — Two robins started to build a nest, dropped the project, moved two feet along the rafter, and started again. Soon they quit this job and started a third, and then a fourth, completing both of the last two.

Then to cap the climax Mrs. Robin with the age-old privilege of changing her mind laid four eggs in one nest, reversed her field, and dropped two in the other.

"Mere man" interceded, lifted two of the eggs from one of the nests and left Mrs. Robin apparently satisfied. She's hatching the other four.

RECORD 5 DEATHS MONTREAL AREA

MAN FALLS 35 FEET.

MONTREAL, May 27.—(CP)—The weekend death toll in the province of Quebec today stood at five. A plane crash at Village St. Laurent, Que., caused the death of Henri Vien, 35, an employee of the city of Montreal, and injured the pilot, Lucien Gauthier, 30, cousin of the dead man.

James Randolphe Schultz, 25, engineer on a merry-go-round, died from burns received when his clothing caught fire after he had filled a tank with gasoline and then lit a cigarette. Henriette Raymond, 6, of Ste. Genevieve de Pierrefond, Que., met a similar fate when she fell into a bonfire prepared by her brothers and sisters.

A fourth victim was F. Moczycha, 58, window cleaner, killed when he fell 35 feet from the skylight of an uptown hotel.

Philippe Brodeur, M. was killed and Georges Gedies, 10, critically injured at South Stukely, Que., when they were struck by an automobile as they ran from behind a buggy. Police recovered from the St. Lawrence river the body of a man believed to be Patrick Hughes.

Conscription by ballot of all youths between 16 and 18 on the Isle of Jersey is favored.

Just Between Us Women

A daily chat with Examiner neighbors conducted by Anne Wilcox

Do the next thing is one of those sayings which by frequent repetition has become trite, notwithstanding its eminent truth. It should not be interpreted to mean, do the next thing you think of to do; but the thing of next importance. Just what this may be, is sometimes difficult to determine. If much thought is necessary, then the thinking period may be filled-in with trifling tasks of such accustomed attention that the mind is not diverted from the main consideration. So much depends on doing the thing of next importance, that a little time spent in assuring oneself what it is, is time well spent.

* * * * * * *

It is because doing the next thing may mean the squandering of precious time on unimportant tasks which come to mind, because they are so obvious, while the essential ones slide, that it is wise to have one's attention rounded up occasionally. For example it may be more important to go down town early and shop while stores are not crowded, and one's mind is fresh and decisions can be quickly and soundly made, than it is to make the beds and do up the kitchen work first which are tasks that apparently are the next things to do. The beds can be left to air longer than usual which isn't a bad thing. The dishes can be scraped and piled neatly, ready for washing after returning from the shops, and they will be none the worse for waiting a bit.

* * * * * * *

It is assumed that the rooms will have been tidied up at night enough to permit of their remaining as they are without reflection on the homemaker. It takes but a few moments before going to bed, to fold up newspapers and put them in a pile, straighten out magazines, and put chairs in their accustomed positions. Most homemakers do this as it is one of the obvious next things which it is well to do immediately.

* * * * * * *

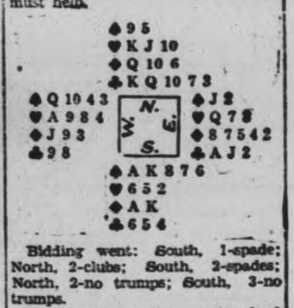
One of the greatest aids in being prompt is this performing of tasks in the sequence of importance. It is wise to let unimportant tasks wait, even though they appear to be next things, while the essential ones gets done, lest a last minute rush makes you miss a train, be late to a dinner engagement, a card party, the theatre, or some function where promptness is required.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. Shepard
"Teacher of Teachers"

IS IT IMPOSSIBLE?

When 10 players state that a thing is impossible the burden of proof that it can be accomplished must lie with a player taking an opposite view. An eleventh player made a small bet with numerous clubmates that North can go game at no trumps, against an opening lead of the 4 of diamonds, against and defence subsequently intended to establish and utilize diamonds, but he offers no solution, so we must help.



Bidding went: South, 1-spade; North, 2-clubs; South, 2-spades; North, 2-no trumps; South, 3-no trumps.

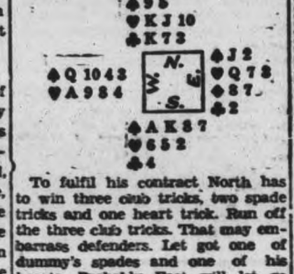
The odds are 65 to 35 that spades cannot be established before diamonds are, even by giving opponents the first spade trick. The odds are 68 to 32 that clubs can be established by giving opponents two tricks, before diamonds can be established. Perhaps the 10 men played for spades. We will try clubs.

Win the opening lead with dummy's K of diamonds. Lead a club. West will play the 8. As a successful finesse more often comes on the second lead than the first put up the Q of clubs. East's ace will win and he will lead another diamond. Win with dummy's ace and lead back another club. When West plays the 9, finesse declarer's 10, as the one best hope of losing no more tricks in the suit. East's J will win and he will lead his third diamond, hoping to gain entry with the Q of hearts. Win the trick with declarer's Q.

Declarer has won three diamond tricks. Opponents have won two club tricks. North holds three established clubs and East has two established diamonds. To go game the declarer has the following simple eight-card problem to solve, as shown in diagram.



To fulfil his contract North has to win three club tricks, two spade tricks and one heart trick. Run off the three club tricks. That may embarrass defenders. Let go one of dummy's spades and one of his hearts. Probably East will let go both his useless spades, which will indicate plainly enough that he hasn't the ace of hearts, or he would be more likely to hold his spades, although declarer has no idea how major suit cards are divided. West must let go a single spade and two hearts. Win a trick with dummy's K of spades. Lead back a heart If the ace does not go up win with the K, then take ninth trick with the good spade.

Hominy Cooked in Milk—Drain two cups canned hominy, put through fine food chopper. Add one-fourth teaspoon salt, seven-eighths cup hot milk and cook in double boiler for 30 minutes. Serve with cream and sugar. Serves four.

Orange Cream Pie—One and one-third cups (one can) sweetened condensed milk, two tablespoons lemon juice, one-fourth cup orange juice, one cup sliced orange sections, two egg whites, two tablespoons granulated sugar. Blend together sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice, orange juice and drained orange pulp. Chill. Pour into pie shell which was baked in an eight-inch pie plate. Cover with whipped cream or meringue. Chill before serving. If meringue is used, beat egg whites until stiff and add sugar. Spread pie and make in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until brown. To prepare orange pulp: Peel oranges, removing all white membrane. Remove sections, cutting free from membrane. Cut each section in half crossways.

Be Beautiful

By GLADYS GLAD

Down in the West Indies, I am told, women often use avocados for cleansing their faces. These huge alligator pears, they claim, contain a great deal of oil, and consequently, they consider them excellent for cleansing and lubricating the skin. Of course, for the average individual in this country avocados are a luxury, and used for eating purpose only. But at this time of the year the skin usually does need softening and lubricating, for the cold, dry air of winter and the warm, dry air of heated homes tend to leave the skin flaky, dry and leathery.

In order to put the skin in perfect condition for the balmy spring and summer days, therefore some sort of lubricating treatment must be used. According to the golden-voiced Shirley Howard of radio fame, there's nothing better for this purpose than a hot oil facial. Shirley generally gives her skin a hot oil facial every week. She first pats the oil into her skin with her fingertips, and then applies an oil-soaked gauze mask. And she firmly believes that these facials are responsible in part for the satiny-smoothness of her complexion.

Hot oil facials really are most effective in rejuvenating the skin after the winter months. Such facials help to restore to the skin the natural oils that keep it smooth and supple.

Before you administer a hot oil facial, cleanse your skin well. If your skin is exceptionally dry, a cream cleansing is best. While if your skin is unusually oily it is better to do the cleansing with a pure, bland soap and tepid water. Then warm a quantity of the chosen oil to blood temperature, and pat it generously into your skin with your fingertips. Apply as much of the oil as your skin will absorb.

After this, take narrow strips of gauze or cheesecloth, dip them into the heated oil and arrange them over your face and neck. Make a mask out of a larger piece of gauze or cheesecloth, cutting holes in it for your eyes, nostrils and mouth, and bind it about your face to hold the strips in place. Then lie down and relax for a while, if you can. Allow this mask to remain on as long as possible. Then remove it, wipe away all excess oil very thoroughly, and as the final step, apply a good skin tonic or mild astringent, in order to close the pores and tone up the skin.

ROBERTA'S CHAT

A column conducted by a reader of The Examiner for her other reader friends. Address all mail to Roberta in care of The Examiner.

"Our lives are songs; God writes the words,
And we set them to music at pleasure;
And the song grows glad, or sweet, or sad,
As we choose to fashion the measure."
—Anon.

Dear Friend:

How are you setting the measure? Is the tempo slow and sad or is it sweet and glad? Is it shrill with the clamour of every-day things, or has grief written the score? If it has, we have to keep step with it for a time.

We don't need to be a Pollyanna sort of person, suggesting to everyone that a smile is best, when in reality tears are more appropriate.

If a person is suffering, if life is a struggle against odds, if friends betray, then the song is bound to be sad.

Some people say, "that life is what we make it," but it is not true in everything. Other people can ruin our happiness, can make us feel bitter and inferior, by the sharp unkind words they use.

No matter how we sympathize with a sick person, we cannot take even the least of their pain, and suffer it for them. They must go through it alone, so their's must be a sad song for awhile, but later when pain has fled, then the glad song of returning health is theirs.

The blue sky, the rushing wind, the sound of the birds, can inspire a song, and speed up the measure.

Even the most common-place task cannot stop our song, especially if we think of the far places our daily food came from.

Rice from Japan, tea from China, oranges and grapefruit from California, don't they form a song of adventure? The long journey in ships, the different races of people who handled them, all the work before we received them, does that not make a song of achievement?

There is pep in jazzy music, annoyance in exaggerated crooning, beauty in a man's tenor voice, and the deep majestic music of the organ.

All these, pep, sentiment, beauty, annoyance and majesty, can be in our own lives, "as we set the measure."

If we let ourselves get off-key, our song is shrill and unpleasant. If you can't sing, then whistle or hum. When the day stretches out interminably, and the work piles up just start a song and before you know it, it is finished.

"Life is a song, let's sing it together."

Your friend,
Roberta.

THE PROPER MOVE.

Hon. Hugh Guthrie's announcement of a change in the Criminal Code, making a jail term necessary in convictions for drunken driving and doing away with the suspended sentence option which some magistrates have been exercising, will be widely approved.

The accident situation, with April showing double the number of fatalities reported in the same month last year, and with the first quarter of the present year registering an 80 per cent. increase in motor killings, certainly calls for action, and one effective contribution toward safer conditions would be the elimination of the drunken driver.

The man who thinks that he can drink and then safely operate a motor car is a menace to the public, and if he persists in his foolishness the only remedy is to punish him as a deterrent to others, and at the same time to make sure that he will not be for some time in a position to bring death or injury to others.

The Toronto authorities are showing the way.

In the last two weeks over a score of motorists, convicted of reckless driving and nearly all of whom were found to have been drinking before their arrest, have been given jail terms, fined heavily and had the privilege of driving taken away from them for three months and in some cases for six months.

If Ontario courts generally were equally firm in dealing with such offenders there would be few drunken drivers on the roads in a short time.

WAITING FOR THE DETAILS.

Until full details of the legislation are made public it is impossible to discuss with any degree of authority the measures that are being brought forward by the Bennett Government to implement the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Price Spreads and Mass Buying.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, who is responsible for launching the investigation, is not satisfied with the legislation that is proposed; in his opinion it does not go far enough to correct the weaknesses that have been uncovered.

On the other hand, there will doubtless be many business executives who will declare that the proposed program goes too far, that it is an unwarranted interference with business, and that too much government in business is bound to result in disaster.

The old bugbear, the constitution, of course, bobs up again with the introduction of these measures.

There will be criticism on one hand that the Government has infringed upon provincial jurisdiction in much of this law-making; on the other, there will be those who will complain, and Mr. Stevens is one of them, that the constitutional objection has been used by the Government as an excuse for not making its legislation more drastic and more effective.

When the full text of these bills is revealed it will be possible, of course, to deal with them much more incisively, and in the meanwhile most people are reserving judgment.

AN ENCOURAGING OUTLOOK.

The latest business summary of the Bank of Montreal makes good reading, for when such a conservative authority is able to point to better conditions there is every reason to feel confident in the outlook.

The bank's statement declares that business improvement, after showing a halting tendency in some departments in March, was resumed in April, and with the commencement of the second half of the present month it reached higher levels than for some months past.

Farm and metal prices have stiffened and forestry indices have advanced, giving an improved tone to basic industries, while manufacturing generally, the statement says, reveals increased activity.

Wholesale prices reached a new recovery peak in April when the index of the Bureau of Statistics rose to 72.5 from 72.0 in March.

A five per cent. rise in wheat prices was the largest single factor, but livestock, silver and tin prices contributed materially, with other primary commodities fluctuating within narrow limits.

An important factor in the general outlook has been a marked improvement in agricultural prospects in the western wheat-growing provinces following general and abundant rains of which the dried-out areas have had their full share.

Soil conditions in each of the three Prairie Provinces is now excellent, and although seeding operations have been delayed to some extent, the loss of time is not regarded as likely to be serious, particularly in view of the compensatory moisture conditions.

THE 4th BATTERY'S REUNION.

Peterborough was happy on Saturday night in playing host to the members of the 4th Battery Canadian Field Artillery, who held their reunion in this city as guests of the local members of the unit.

The 4th Battery should have a permanent place in the affections of Peterborough citizens, for it was the artillery unit in which many of our citizen soldiers served during the World War, and it is gratifying to think that this community has some share in the wealth of tradition that surrounds this very fine battery which from its first appearance at the front until the armistice ended the long conflict distinguished itself as a courageous, durable and highly efficient artillery force.

The boys behind the big guns did not get into the headlines so frequently as members of other branches of the service during those trying years, but it is a matter of history that Canada's artillery played a big part in the success of the Canadian corps, and no single unit had a more creditable record than the good old 4th Battery, many of the survivors of whom gathered here on Saturday night.

It is interesting to recall that Peterborough's artillery quota were the first volunteers to leave here on the outbreak of war, and that nearly all of these men found their way into the 4th Battery and acquitted themselves nobly with that very fine unit in France.

The 4th had many casualties, and since the armistice death has further thinned the ranks; however, let us hope that those who remain will be spared to attend many more reunions to live over again the stirring times in France and Belgium.

ARGUMENT FOR UNION.

Many countries have had their backs to the wall in recent years, the Hon. Ernest Lapointe said in an address at London, and have tried various experiments; whatever degree of success has resulted is because the rulers had united peoples behind them.

"It has been said," the former Minister of Justice continued, "that Roosevelt, with his new deal, has contributed considerably to recovery in the United States. He has done a great deal. And why was he able to do what he did? Because he had behind him the people of the United States. . . . Canada's trouble in making any great progress in economic recovery is because the people have no confidence in the Government." In this connection he cited results in various by-elections; adding, "The people of Canada have not only signified their distrust for the Government—but they have shown contempt."

* * * *

We quite agree with Mr. Lapointe that any Government hoping to achieve things, especially in abnormal days such as these, must have reasonably well united public opinion behind it. Herein, we submit, is one of the strongest arguments for national government at this time. No purely party administration can hope to command public opinion on a general scale. The average administration is in office with a small majority of the popular vote, even though it may have quite a preponderant number of House seats. As an example, the Conservative party in Ontario last summer secured many more votes than its small House showing would indicate. Where a national government is chosen, however, the situation is likely to be altogether different.

Ordinary party rule in times of great national stress does not work well, no matter how good the intentions nor how efficient the administration of the party in power. Purely political considerations are always entering in. Oppositions oppose merely because that is their traditional role, and they hope, by making opposition sufficiently strong, to undermine the Government and have a chance for power. That is what Mr. King, Mr. Lapointe and the Liberals generally have been trying to do at Ottawa in recent years. Mr. Lapointe's speech at London was for the same purpose. He was not there in any attempt to assist the Government in lining up public opinion in order to have that popular backing so essential to a ministry in adopting stern measures for the settlement of pressing problems. He was there, instead, to add something to the tearing down process, to make it more difficult for the Government to carry on, and thus, if possible to help bring about its defeat in the fall elections.

We are not criticizing Mr. Lapointe for presenting the speech he did. It was a straight party affair, just the same sort of a speech that Mr. Bennett, Dr. Manion and others are making on behalf of their group. It was a defense of Liberalism and a condemnation of Conservatism, just as Mr. Bennett and his friends condemn Liberalism and praise Conservatism. One side is no better than the other in this respect. What we have in mind is that it is too bad to see Mr. Bennett, Mr. Lapointe and others wasting their time in the delivery of partisan speeches, when all hands should be devoting full and complete attention to the solution of national problems that mean so much to the people of this country.

Every moment, these days, given over to party warfare is just a moment wasted so far as Canada's recovery is concerned. It may be compared to a team of horses attached to a wagon and each horse attempting to pull in a different direction, also doing its level best to kick the other one at the same time. Obviously the goods on the wagon are not going to reach their destination very rapidly under such circumstances.

* * * *

Nothing, we suppose, can be done to stop this useless political battle just now. The Conservatives are in power and will fight desperately to stay there. The Liberals, in opposition, will fight just as desperately to lift themselves into the seats of the mighty. And in the background will be the C.C.F. striving to be as important as possible in the electoral picture, and even having hopes of constituting the balance of power in the next Parliament. After the ballots are counted, however, after the smoke of battle dies away we do hope that the leaders of both major parties will see their way clear to forget politics for a while and get down to the serious business of settling Canada's problems, a settlement that is more or less impossible under present conditions. Whether Mr. Bennett is returned or Mr. King comes back to office, something of this kind should be done. It should have been done two or three years ago when Mr. Bennett's political position was stronger than it is to-day and he was in a better position to address an invitation to the Liberals and other groups to co-operate with him. If he is re-elected he will again be in a position to open negotiations for the formation of a national ministry. On the other hand, if Mr. King is successful it will be his chance to do something important for the nation. It is obvious that moves of this kind must always come from the man on top.

National government is a live issue in Canada despite the efforts of certain politicians to laugh at and discredit it. We have no doubt that at least 75 per cent. of the serious-thinking citizens favor it. And they would like to see something worked out, some expression given to their view that it is time to call a truce to party warfare, to put all personal and political considerations aside.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Getting on the voters' lists is the most effective contribution the average citizen can make at the present time toward a full expression of public opinion when the election is called.

It is announced that Mr. Hepburn has made a $20 donation to a baseball team. However, the Government will get that all back when the new amusement tax goes into force next week.

Mr. Duff, M.P., is a candid politician. He was opposed to the vote for the Toronto tunnel, he declared, because it was something for "Tory Toronto." There's nothing like being frank about it.

It would be interesting to know just how many of those representatives and senators who voted for the United States veterans' bonus bill did so because they counted upon President Roosevelt to veto the measure.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

The new mother quite naturally regards her suddenly acquired responsibilities with considerable dismay. What is she going to do with this little living creature in order to keep it in the pink of condition? How is it to be fed, and how often? What is the technique of bathing it? What kind of clothes, and how many, should it wear? How long should it sleep? How much air should it have?

Well, all these things are important, and there is a right and a wrong way of doing all of them, although for the mother's comfort it may be said that Nature is able to do pretty well with the slightest amount of encouragement, provided the baby is healthy from the beginning. Natural food, enough water, some sunshine and air, plenty of sleep, a cleansing bath, even if not too regular, and enough clothes to keep it warm, and it will thrive surprisingly.

Danger of Infection

The greatest danger to which the baby is exposed is one that is not frequently thought of—that is, the infectious diseases. And there is one thing that the new family must plan to do, which is to set a time for vaccinating the baby against smallpox and diphtheria.

The summary of all rules for the purpose of keeping the baby healthy, are laid down by an eminent children's specialist, is as follows:

"1. Skilled medical and nursing care of the mother before, during, and after the birth of the baby, and especial attention to its physical examination, nutrition and daily hygiene.

"2. Establishment of breast feeding, and its continuation for at least six or seven months at regular nursing periods of three or four hours.

Supplementary Feedings

"3. Supplementary feeding with simple mixtures of cow's milk, pasteurized or boiled, when prescribed by a physician after a thorough effort to carry on breast feeding.

"4. Fresh air day and night.

"5. Regulation of body temperature by suitable clothing and proper heating apparatus.

"6. Scrupulous daily attention to cleanliness of the baby.

"7. Regular hours for sleep.

"8. Formation of good habits from the very first."

To many of these there will be some exceptions. Especially in the way of feeding, because the mother cannot always nurse the baby. Others need amplification—what, for instance, is "suitable" clothing? It will be the purpose of the articles this week to enlarge upon this simple summary, and explain the technique of the different procedures.

What's in the Name of Canadian Cities and Towns?

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

MINUDIE, NOVA SCOTIA

The historic old village of Minudie was originally the Indian village Menaudie. Then followed the Menoudie of the French regime. Prior to the fall of Beausejour in 1755, the Acadian village of Menoudie was one of the most prosperous and picturesque settlements in the new world.

But this Utopian state was not to last long. The inhabitants were dislodged by the British under Col. Monckton and the village destroyed.

In May, 1765, Joseph Frederick Wallet DesBarres received Minudie as a military grant, but was unpopular among the Acadians, and was glad to sell it to Amos Seaman, who afterward made a fortune in shipping between Boston and the West Indies.

Seaman did much for the place of his adoption, and made it an ideal place in which to live, but with his death in 1868 the prosperity vanished and the town reverted to its former status.

MARRIED COUPLES LOOK ALIKE

Next time you see a picture in the paper of an old couple celebrating a golden wedding, look closely and see for yourself how much the husband and wife resemble each other.

He may be a Scot and she may be Irish. He may be Italian and she German. And he may be long and lean and she a nice, wide, comfortable old lady. But if you were in a room with these two and a dozen other old people of their age, you could pick them out, I think, without being told that they had been married to each other for half a century.

They didn't look alike 50 years ago. And their features may not be even similar....But you can see that they belong in the same family now.

They've been through so much together. In grief and joy, patience and quiet desperation, they have lived their lives side by side. They have shade hope, suffering, turmoil, pride and peace. And this common experience shows in their faces. It is marked in the lines of mouth, in the expression of the eyes, in the way they hold their heads....You see a quiet smile on one old man's face; you will find the same smile on the face of his wife. Old Jim's mouth turns down at the corner; Mrs. Jim's mouth sags, too. There's bitterness and distrust in an old husband's eyes; and in his wife's as well. And you will find peace in two old faces.

They never meant to grow old alike. Neither tried to copy the other's expression....But it happened, and neither of them could erase today what is written in their faces.

You don't need to live to be 70 or 80, either, to have this happen to you. Fifteen or twenty years is enough. Even less than that will do the trick. Sometimes it's startling to see how a father and son carry much the same expression. The father is cheerful, and his son is a merry lad. Or the mother is discontented and the daughter has a sullen look, too.

It's a heavy responsibility, being married, rearing children....And it's a great piece of luck, indeed, that we can take it as easily, as lightly as we do. Otherwise, we'd all be carrying solemn faces around.

Letter To Subscribers

some thought, is payments of subscriptions that are not yet out. This too, is easily explained. If a person pays a subscription to a candidate and still has part of his old term yet to run, the payment made to the candidate will continue on from the expiration date of the old payment. Many have taken this attitude: "I know I am going to renew my subscription when it expires so I might just as well do it now while I can assist one of the ladies in her effort to get to one of the glorious holiday trips." It really does not cost you anything extra to pay up your subscription in favor of one of the girls, who are working hard for the trips and by doing so now, you will not have to worry about it later. It would be too bad if you let the matter slip by and then a few days or a few weeks after the Travel Club closes you called to pay your subscription and began to realize how much your payment would have meant to a candidate during the Club.

To new subscribers, in answer to the question that is invariably asked the candidate: "When will my paper start coming to me?" we would say that the paper will be sent within a day or two from the time the candidate brings the subscription into the office. We are speeding up these new subscriptions to the best of our ability and your paper will come to you as quickly as possible.

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

A HEROINE OF THE NIAGARA

On this date (May 27) in 1813 Mary Henry of Niagara, won a place among Canada's heroines, worthy of being kept in remembrance. The wife of Dominic Henry, the keeper of the lighthouse, has been a Mary Madden, of Halifax, where she had married Henry, then in the Royal Artillery. On the morning of May 27, 1813, a small party held Fort George, their only arm a 24 pounder, not in the best of condition. The fort was under double fire, from Fort Niagara and from three United States vessels out in the lake. The small garrison had little ammunition; all they could do was to hold out until that was exhausted. Through the night they sent back a shell now and again but when dawn broke, cold with fatigue and hunger, they were in sad plight indeed. Suddenly she saw a vision. Through the shower of iron hail came Mary Madden Henry with hot coffee and food, seemingly as unconcerned as if in her own small garden at the foot of the lighthouse. Time and again she went and came back with more sustenance apparently guided by some unseen angel from the peril which menaced her every step. Through the day until darkness brought respite she was caterer and nurse, binding the wounds of those maimed in the fight.

Later in that year when on that cruel December night the Americans burned Niagara, throwing the women and children out into the bitter cold, Mary Henry opened her small home—the lighthouse had not been destroyed because it was a beacon for enemy shipping—provided hot drink and food for the hungry, resting places for the aged and sick and cosy corners for young mothers and their bairns.

Five years later she was presented by the Loyal and Patriotic Society of York with £25 sterling as a testimonial which described her as "a heroine not to be frightened". She and her husband lie in graves not far from the scene of her heroism. Perhaps some day a monument may be erected to this gallant Irish woman who transplanted from the Atlantic coast to Niagara, showed her loyalty to the end. Is not her story worth being put into the school books alongside with Laura Secord, that other Loyalists unseen angel from the peril which would not be frightened.

SOFT TREND MINE MARKET

Hollinger and Lake Shore Work Lower—Base Metals Hold Fair.

SILVERS SLIGHTLY WEAK.

TORONTO, May 27 (C.P.). — A dribble of selling appeared in a thin buying market and gave the mining section of the Toronto Exchange a soft trend to-day. Hollinger worked lower, Lake Shore sagged about $1 and smaller recessions came out for Bralorne and Teck Hughes. Base metals held better than other groups, while silvers were not helped by the modest advance for bar silver, the leaders closing a few cents down each.

Selling of McWatters brought a drop of about 15 cents but the stock came back and part of the loss was erased. Little Long Lac sold back to 5.25 while recessions up to 5 cents were boarded for Pickle Crow, San Antonio, Siscoe, Sylvanite and Central Patricia.

Noranda chalked up a gain of close to half a dollar but failed to hold. Sherritt and Falconbridge registered minor losses.

The oils were mainly steady. Acme selling at 24. Home Oil at 60½ and Midwal at 38½.

Pay Last Tribute To Dead Social Worker

Thousands of associates and friends of the late Jane Addams, social and peace worker, came to pause at her bier in Bowen Hall, Hull House, the social settlement in Chicago she founded years ago. Some of Miss Addams' admirers are pictured paying final tribute before the beloved welfare worker was borne to her grave.

LOSSES HOLD LARGER MARGIN ON DAY'S TRADE

Early Advances in Metals, Foods and Utilities Cut Down.

SMALL VOLUME.

TORONTO, May 27 — (CP).—Moving in smaller volume and with the month end settlement in prospect, stocks failed to register any marked buoyancy to-day on the industrial section of the Toronto exchange. The oil is gave a lead on the upside which the Metals, Foods and Utilities followed for a time but the list displayed mild unsettlement before the close revealing a slight margin of losses over gains for the day.

British American and International Petroleum retained ¼-point of their morning advance and Imperial finished unchanged. The McColl issues and Supertest Ordinary dropped small fractions.

Brazilian closed above the 10 mark for a gain of about ¼. C.P.R. and International finished unchanged and Consolidated Smelters had something to the good. The liquor stocks closed about a half point down.

The agricultural implement shares boarded moderate recessions.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK, May 27 (A.P.). — The stock market again responded to selective buying to-day and the trend was upward after a hesitant start. Scattered profit-taking was well absorbed notwithstanding further nervousness over Europe's gold standard difficulties.

The rails, sugars, and a number of specialties received the most attention. Allied Chemical and American Crystal Sugar Preferred got up about 3 points each. Others, fractionally to a point higher, included Union Pacific, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Commercial Credit, Liggett & Myers B. U.S. Smelting, and Fox Film. The late tone was steady to firm.

Transfers approximated 850,000 shares.

HALL'S BRIDGE.

Mr. Bert Reeves, whilst on road work, sustained a severely sprained wrist.

Alfred Foster, also on the road, got struck with a crowbar, getting his chest severely bruised and the right arm temporarily paralized through injury to the nerves. He was treated by Dr. Willis and sent home to Port Hope for further treatment.

Mr. Leslie Hall, whilst engaged painting at Mr. Bruce McNitt's, slipped from a latter and sprained his left ankle.

Mr. Thomas Weaver got struck on the left ankle with a hammer and received a fracture of the small bone of the leg.

Mr. Albert Finley, whilst loading stone on the Rockcroft road, slipped and severely sprained his ankle. He will be laid up for some weeks.

Mrs. Elliott has returned home from her visit to Peterborough.

Dr. C. C. Cragg, of Peterborough, was in the village Thursday.

800 MEN BUSY FIGHTING FIRES

within the last week and friends are more or less alarmed as to his whereabouts although it is felt by many, being an experienced woodsman, he would have little difficulty in making his way out of the path of the fire.

The origin of the fire, it was learned today, was at the farm of Robert Moon, about three miles from Haliburton. Mr. Moon was clearing some land by burning it over and in some manner the fire got beyond his control. With the rising of a slight breeze all attempts by neighbors to subdue the blaze proved futile and on Sunday morning at six a.m. the first general alarm was sounded for assistance from the village.

Fires in Village

Various fires have since been extinguished in the village. Burning leaves have been wafted by the strong wind into the village and several small fires have resulted.

A rather serious fire which threatened 12 cars of cordwood in the C.N.R. yards at Haliburton gave the officials some trouble for a time and a call was sent in to Lindsay to have an engine prepared for an emergency run to pull the cars out of the village and to safety. The first was controlled, however, without the necessity of having the engine make the long emergency run.

At the present time the fire has spread over a front some seven miles in length and many hundreds of acres have been covered by the blaze. Serious damage to standing green timber has been slight, the fire confining itself mostly to dead timber, piles of dry wood and dry leaves that cover the woods to a considerable depth.

Lack of water to fight the fires and lack of proper fire fighting equipment figure largely in the blaze reaching the proportions it has assumed. A good rain, promised in the weather forecasts, would do much to put the fire under control.

All roads north and west of the village are closed and telephone communication north from Haliburton have been cut off as wires and poles have been burned.

William Nichols, who resides a short distance from the village, was forced to stand by and see the onrushing flames devour a pile of cord wood estimated to contain between 700 and 800 cords. It took a number of men an entire winter to cut and pile the wood.

At Cranberry Lake, where another bush fire is raging, Simon Redner suffered the loss of his home and barn, together with all the farming implements. Mr. Redner and family escaped with a few belonging.

Situation Improves

At noon to-day the situation in Haliburton was reported to be somewhat alleviated. An intensive fight against the flames by the whole male population of Haliburton and surroundings district had placed the fire pretty well under control. Reports are to the effect, however, that should a strong north or northwest wind develop the smouldering fire would in a few hours be fanned into a raging monster that would seriously threaten the village of Haliburton and would in a short time devour a number of lumber mills that lie in its path, including those of Bailey and Way, Carew Lumber Company, Larue and International Company.

Government fire rangers are keeping a watchful eye for fresh outbreaks.

Flames were closing in upon Eagle Lake, a mill town of 300 inhabitants eight miles north of here. Several outlying camps have been already destroyed.

Two forest fires threatened the village with likely destruction. One, moving slowly in from the north, is now less than a quarter of a mile away.

More than 800 volunteers are attempting to get the flames under control by means of trenches and back fires.

Prepared for Flight

Hoping the wind will change before Eagle Lake is wiped out, only a few of the inhabitants have yet left the settlement. The fire has already crossed the road between Eagle Lake and Haliburton, leaving the way clear for an exodus should it be necessary. Many families have stacked their possessions into carts and trucks for quick flight.

Meanwhile would-be rescuers have failed to reach James Parsons, 45-year-old war veteran, whose trapper's cabin on Cranberry Lake, three miles east of Eagle Lake, is surrounded by flames. No word has been heard from the veteran since he was cut off by the swift-moving fire yesterday afternoon.

A narrow escape from the flames was made by Arnold Roberts of Haliburton, who was trapped with his family while fishing at Redstone Lake, deep in the woods. Bundling his equipment into his automobile Roberts his wife and two small daughters drove three miles through the roaring fire with damp handkerchiefs held to their faces, reaching Haliburton in safety.

Harry Rogers got the fright of his life when a big moose, crazed by the flames and smoke, bore down upon him near Eagle Lake and forced him to take refuge behind a stump.

"I have heard bear cubs crying pitifully like children all evening back in the burning bush," Eugene Formica, a lumberman near Eagle Lake, told the Canadian Press.

Fires sprang up on Friday and are believed to have been spread from the camp fires of tourists.

The fires smouldered for two days, watched by a small crew of firefighters who believed they were under control until a sudden stiff wind sent them across fire lines and out of bounds.

A hundred workers on relief projects have been mobilized to help save the mill and settlements in the path of the fires, and 200 others under the direction of George Anderson, municipal road overseer, are plowing fire lines in order to save remaining stands of valuable first growth timber.

The north fire, centring around Cranberry Lake, has already destroyed nearly 4,000 acres of virgin forest, mostly hardwood.

The south fire, burning over an equal area, has gone through second growth slash and caused comparatively little damage except for the destruction of the cordwood and winter lumber camp.

Mills threatened with destruction at Eagle Lake if the fires do not change their direction to-day are those of the International Cooperage Co., Bailey and Way, and Jack Coneybear.

Fires Out in Methuen.

Fires which burned in Anstruther and Methuen Townships last week were reported to be all out to-day by the watchman at the Apsley fire ranger tower. The efforts of more than 100 men from the Village of Apsley and the surrounding district were directed against the flames during the week.

Dan Whitmore, veteran Apsley fire ranger, left for the scene of the great fires which are threatening the Village of Haliburton during the week-end. He took with him one of the Apsley hand pumps for use in the battle to check the onrush of the blazes.

The red glow from the Haliburton fires could be seen plainly from the Apsley district yesterday, and smoke from the region was drifting across the northern section of the Apsley lookout's territory.

PUBLIC HEALTH ACTIVITIES ARE ABLY DISCUSSED

Dr. Murray Fraser Presents Case For Pasteurization of Milk and For Local Tuberculosis Sanitarium.

TALKS TO ROTARY.

Medical Officer of Health Tells of Centralization of Public Health Agencies in City.

A strong case in favor of pasteurization of milk and of the conversion of the local Isolation Hospital into a sanitarium for the treatment of tuberculous patients was advanced by Dr. Murray Fraser, Medical Officer of Health, in addressing the Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon to-day upon some features of public health work.

Introduced by Rotarian Dr. Moir, the speaker paid a tribute to the effectiveness of the campaign against diphtheria by Dr. A. W. McPherson. As a result 90 per cent. of Peterborough's children were now immune against the disease, there was not a case of fdiphtheria here last year, and this year only two cases and they were carriers rather than patients.

Dr. Fraser told his audience of the steps taken to organize a Health Department here and of the centralization of health activities, including the work of the Chest Clinic, the Peterborough Health Association's nursing service, and the Well Babies' Clinic. These were all accommodated in the Health Department's quarters, Dr. Fraser explained.

Dealing with the milk situation, the speaker said that when the Health Department was re-organized there were 38 produce distributors and 5 city dairies. The latter, which sold pasteurized milk, supplied some 68 or 70 per cent. of the city's milk wants, while the balance consisted of raw milk. The first step undertaken by the department was to endeavor to assure the cleanliness of their raw milk supply and to insist that stables, cows, utensils and the milkers themselves should be clean.

"I am firmly in favor of pasteurized milk," Dr. Fraser declared. "It makes clean milk safe."

The speaker told of the danger of infection from raw milk, particularly of the menace of bovine tuberculosis and undulant fever. Toronto, where every pint of milk sold was pasteurized, had not had a case of tuberculosis resulting from milk infection in fifteen years. The speaker dealt with the arguments against pasteurization, and in each case gave reasons why these arguments did not hold good.

Speaking of tuberculosis, Dr. Fraser said that last year there had been 25 cases in Peterborough with seven deaths, and that in the ten years ending with 1932 there had been 102 deaths from tuberculosis here.

The conversion of the Queen Mary Hospital into a sanitarium was next discussed. It required some $4,900 to operate this hospital last year to take care of 15 patients—some $326 for every patient cared for. The city also paid out around $3,600 for treatment of local indigent tubercular patients in outside sanitaria. Dr. Fraser believed that these combined sums could be better employed in providing treatment for tubercular patients in the Queen Mary Hospital which could be converted into a sanitarium at slight expense.

President J. Fred Reed expressed a vote of thanks to the speaker.

A most enjoyable contribution to the program was provided by Miss Ruth Fisher who, with Miss M. Rome at the piano, played two fine violin numbers that were thoroughly appreciated.

to determine the amount of fair compensation to be paid.

The board of the cotton corporation would consist of 10 to 15 persons appointed by the president of the Board of Trade.

Sectional boards would be established for each of the large divisions of the industry, namely spinning, manufacturing, finishing and marketing.

Age And Youth Feature In Photographic Display

Roy Studios are at present featuring a window display of four prints that won the blue ribbon award at the recent convention of the Ontario Society of Photographers held at Toronto. Taken by Fred L. Roy, the prints comprise charming photographic studies of Mrs. Anna McNaughton, the Misses Florence Treblicock and Leone Comstock, and Ian Blaiklock, grandchild of the late Judge E. C. S. Huycke.

Mrs. McNaughton, it is worthy of note, is a lifelong resident of Peterborough County, at present resident at Anson House. She is in her 91st year.

The number of foreign firms in Manchuria is decreasing.

PARENTS READY TO PAY $200,000

Wright Seminary, gave authorities a possible clue to-day to the way in which the nine-year-old boy was kidnapped.

The handkerchief was found by reporters and private investigators in a trampled patch of grass beside the path, which the boy would have followed if he had decided to take a short-cut to his home.

Friends said the boy frequently used the path on his trips to and from school.

Scars on the smooth bark and a broken branch of a Madrona tree about six feet away from the handkerchief, suggested the possibility that the kidnapper had used the tree to raise himself above a tall hedge to watch for the lad.

Escape Of Prisoners To Be Investigated

TORONTO, May 27 (C.P.) — Hon. Harry Nixon Provincial Secretary, announced to-day Inspector Gourlay had been sent from his department to investigate the mysterious jail break at L'Original where three prisoners escaped through a hole in the ceiling. In the meantime, Mr. Nixon said, no members of the jail staff had been suspended.

VERY MUCH ON JOB.

GODERICH, Ont., May 27. — (CP).—Fire Chief George Beacom was very much on the job when fire broke out Saturday in the engine room of the Goderich Manufacturing Company. A spark from a forge ignited some sawdust. He turned in an alarm, then joined the bucket brigade and had the flames extinguished before the fire truck put in an appearance.

OLD COMRADES HOLD REUNION

Members of 4th Battery Old Boys' Association Meet at Armouries.

ABOUT 50 PRESENT

Approximately fifty members of the Old Boys' Association of the 4th Battery Canadian Field Artillery gathered at the Armouries here on Saturday for their third reunion since demobilization.

The program included a brief service of remembrance in which the former artillerymen paid tribute to "fallen comrades" at the Confederation Park memorial; a brief march headed by Peterborough Rangers Band; and a dinner and entertainment at the Armouries.

According to Clare Hall, who presided as chairman at the dinner there are less than twenty of the original members of the Battery, who enlisted from Peterborough, Cobourg and Port Hope, left. The Old Boys' Association however includes men who were subsequently drafted to the unit at later periods.

Included among the originals present at Saturday's reunion were: Francis Love, Oshawa; "Ace" White, G. B. Sloane, M. McGill and Arthur Nokes all of Peterborough; C. Thew and C. A. Hall, of Toronto; H Maguire, Ottawa; H. Muncey, Roseneath; and J. Cadigan, Enniskmore.

Members of the 4th Battery C.F.A., under command of Major J. Walton Stevenson, were present in uniform as successors to the "old fourth," and the O.C. very ably replied to a toast to his unit which was proposed by G. B. Sloane.

In his remarks as chairman, Mr. Hall claimed that the 4th Battery was the first battery in the British Army to ever put guns in a front line trench. They establish this precedent, he stated, when the battery had two guns in the front line at Festubert in 1915.

United States Strives For Peace But Prepares For War

GENERAL OGILVIE DIES IN ENGLAND

Former Canadian Officer Served in Both South African and World Wars.

BORN IN MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, May 27 (C.P.). — Word was received here yesterday of the death Saturday of Brig.-Gen. Alexander Thomas Ogilvie, D.S.O., M.C., at Camberley, Sussex, England. He was 68.

Brig.-Gen. Ogilvie served in both the South African War and the Great War and retired from the Royal Canadian Artillery in 1927 after a long and active military career.

Member of a prominent Montreal family, he was educated at Trinity College School, Port Hope, Ont. and at Lorette College, Scotland. He then joined the Canadian militia, being gazetted a second-lieutenant in the 90th Regiment in 1889. He rose to the rank of captain and had his first overseas service in the South African War with the Royal Canadian Regiment.

Returning to Canada he continued to serve in the Canadian militia as a commanding officer, being stationed at various times at Halifax, Vancouver and Winnipeg. The greatest part of his military career was spent in Halifax, where he was a member of several clubs.

Among survivors are his widow, Alice Lemon, formerly of Winnipeg; Lorne Ogilvie, Victoria, B.C., a brother; Lillian Ogilvie, Victoria, B.C., and Mrs. E. F. Moseley, Goderich, Ont., sisters. He was predeceased by his first wife, Gwendolyn White of Quebec.

"TOOK ALL KINDS OF PILLS, THEN CEREAL BROUGHT RELIEF"

Constipation, Due to Insufficient "Bulk," Relieved by Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

A fine letter from Mrs. Snyder: "I have had trouble* with my bowels for years, taking all kinds of pills and drugs, with no relief.

"One year ago, I saw Kellogg's ALL-BRAN and bought a package. I have good movements every day. I am 73 years old. I am telling my friends what bran has done for me." —Mrs. Sallie Snyder. Address upon request.

*Constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.

Research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" to exercise the intestines. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B, as well as iron, an element of the blood.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient to correct common constipation. With each meal, in serious cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN resists digestion better than the "bulk" in leafy vegetables. How much better to use this food in place of patent medicines.

At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Appeals Are Heard For Harvey Township

BUCKHORN, May 27.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The Court of Revision of the municipality of Harvey for the year 1935 was held in the Town Hall, Lakehurst, on Saturday, May 18, 1935. Members present: Messrs. Given, Hall, Flynn, Irwin and Chase.

Moved by Mr. Given, seconded by Mr. Flynn, that correspondence be read. Carried.

The following appeals were read, and after due consideration of the Council, the following changes were revised by them:

R. A. Garbutt claims assessed too high. Assessment was lowered $100.

Wolsley Northey, assessed too high. Assessment was lowered $100.

Mr. Collings appealed against his assessment. The assessor's valuation was confirmed.

Dr. Buchanan's assessment was raised $200 on land and $50 on buildings as his assessment was considered too low.

R. A. Botsum claimed assessment for Kawartha Fur Farm too high as some land had been reverted to H. Wilmot. Karwartha Fur Farm lowered $25 and H. Wilmot's assessment raised $25 as his proportion of fur farm.

John Carew Lumber Co. claimed assessment too high. It was lowered $1,300.

Hydro-Electric Power Commission claimed assessment too high. The assessor's valuation was confirmed.

Moved by Mr. Irwin, seconded by Mr. Hall, that this Court of Revision adjourn, to meet again at Hall's Bridge on Saturday, June 1, as the adjourned Court of Revision. Carried.

JANETVILLE

FLAG UNVEILED AT JANETVILLE

Patriotic Program Given by Public School Pupils on Empire Day.

DISTRICT NEWS

JANETVILLE, May 27 (Examiner Correspondence)—A splendid spirit of patriotism was manifest among the pupils of South Janetville School on Empire Day Thursday, May 23rd.

The program which was given chiefly by the pupils of the public school was of a vitally impressive nature especially during the unveiling and installation of the beautiful large Union Jack which was newly purchased by the school board.

The pupils of the continuation room and a number of interested friends were the guests of the junior room for the following numbers: unveiling of the Union Jack, this ceremony was capably performed by two of the continuation school pupils, namely Ralph Mulligan of Lifford who unveiled the flag and Muriel Stinson of Bethel who read appropriate address; recitation, Verna Wright; recitation, Helen Deyell; guitar and mouth organ number, Harold Bradburn; patriotic reading, Caraon Howe; organ solo, Verna Wright; reading, Muriel English; musical number, Mr. Hamilton; at the close of this part of the program the pupils marched outside and stood silently in an attitude of salute while the flag was raised to top mast and then in a short but impressive ceremony repeated their pledge as follows: "I pledge allegiance to our flag, to our king to our empire—one empire indivisible with liberty equality and justice for all — one God, one king, one flag, one pledge for all. One destiny for all."

Following this one verse of "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall" was sung and the National Anthem.

The pupils are to be congratulated on their splendid program and also the teachers Miss Malcolm and Mr. Hamilton.

Mr. J. R. Burn has recently received a silver jubilee medal in commemoration of the fact that he has been the postmaster in Janetville for thirty-three years.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. Burn and the community join in wishing him many many more years in this department of His Majesty's service which he has fulfilled so faithfully and well all these years.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter McGill are to be congratulated on the birth of a baby girl on Wednesday.

SCHOOL CHILDREN PROVIDE PROGRAM

Empire Day Celebrated by Lakefield Public School on Thursday.

LAKEFIELD, May 27.—(Examiner Correspondence). — Empire Day was celebrated by the Lakefield Public School on Thursday afternoon when an excellent special program was put on in the Town Hall, under the direction of T. W. Chaplin and his staff of teachers.

This year the music was a feature and was a practical demonstration of its real value in the school curriculum. Mr. Renaud, the instructor, was not present, and the teachers and several of the older pupils did the directing.

The program this year stressed the music as each form sang a specially arranged chorus. H. R. Wagar, chairman of the Public School Board, was in the chair, and in his inimitable manner, filled the post very acceptably.

Mrs. W. M. Graham spoke a few words, regretting the absence of Dr. Fraser, illness preventing him from being present. Dr. Fraser has been the children's champion for many years, and all regret his absence. Empire Day marks out a special day in the school year, set apart by the Government for loyal observance. A few questions regarding the day and its importance brought ready answers from the children.

Miss Kidd's room, the kindergarten primer, sang a sweet "Lullaby," directed by their teacher. This was followed by "The Song of the Birds," by Miss Madill's pupils. Miss Carveth's pupils sang, "The Busy Bee," and Miss Payne's pupils sang, "Spring Voices." Both these selections showed to the audience the value of the musical instruction and the enjoyment the boys and girls took. Billy Clark gave an oration on the life story and achievements of Sir John A. MacDonald, Canada's first Premier since Confederation. This was a masterpiece, given in a clear, distinct voice, unhurried, with the proper emphasis. Miss Kennedy's class sang, "Welcome to the Lovely Spring." Mr Chaplin's room sang, "The Winter is Over," directed by one of the pupils, Lois Yale. A short historic playlet by pupils of Miss Payne's room provided a real high spot in the excellent program. The story was a dramatic version of the story of Madeline de Vercheres, who is one of the outstanding figures in Canadian history. The prologue was given clearly and distinctly by little Rose Wing. The part of the heroic Madeline was admirably taken by Mary Alice Renwick, and that of her small brother, Raymond, by Ralph Millage. The softly echoing "All's Well" brought an atmosphere of the past, of the days when the battles of French and English were fought and re-fought with a sideline of the ferocious Iroquois.

Doris Chittick conducted the entire school in their rendition of "Oh Canada," Winnie Blewett conducted the National Anthem, and another Empire Day is recorded in the annals of the school history, another successful program in which teachers and pupils combined impressed most favorably the adult audience.

Lakefield sent a large delegation to the district annual meeting of the Women's Institute held on Thursday in Westwood. Among those who attended were Mrs. Davis, district president; Mrs. Braden, Mrs. H. Bullock, Mrs. C. Frankish, Miss Marjorie Frankish, Mrs. Garbutt, Mrs. Gillman, Mrs. A. V. Hill, Mrs. Lake, Mrs. Murphy, Mrs. J. H. Moore, Mrs. W. A. Payne, Mrs. Ridpath, Mrs. G. H. Spence, Mrs. S. White, Mrs. A. Windsor, Mrs. Woodhouse and Mrs. D. H. Webster.

L. W. Copp, the inspector of schools, paid a visit to the school in the morning of Empire Day, accompanied by a moving-picture camera. He took a large number of pictures of teachers and pupils, the latter in groups. The kindergarten primer at their tables was especially good with the children absorbed in their tasks. The festival chorus of the High School were included, also the High School staff and members of te School Board who were present.

Lakefield News

Miss McKibbin has returned from a visit to her sister, Mrs. Blewett in Peterborough.

Mrs. H. J. Stuart and Miss Constance Stuart were in Toronto last week attending the golden wedding celebration of Col. and Mrs. R. J. Stuart.

Miss Vivian Hendren is visiting relatives in Welland.

Mrs. Lawrence Grahame is spending the week-end at Stoney Lake.

The Apostolic Rite of Confirmation will be celebrated in St. John's Church on Sunday morning, June 2nd. It will be the first visit of the new bishop, Bishop Beverley to the village.

Miss Winnie Payne of Hamilton spent the week-end at her home in the village.

Mrs. Gilmour of Hamilton is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Connell.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Williamson of Toronto passed through the village on Wednesday en route to their cottage at Kawartha Park.

Miss Elva Hendren of Toronto spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abel Hendren.

At the closing meeting of the High School Literary Society a vote of appreciation of valuable service was moved, seconded and carried, to Mr. E. S. Kelsey, who had always assisted with the stage settings at the annual conversat and had also arranged the lighting effects. Mr. Kelsey's service was voluntary and rendered gratis and the pupils felt a vote of appreciation was timely and certainly deserved.

After the evening service in the Lakefield United Church the choir remained for a few minutes to say good-bye to Mr. Edwin S. Kelsey, who has been a faithful and helpful member of the choir for the past seven years. Words of appreciation of Mr. Kelsey from several of the members who spoke for the main group, touched the recipient very deeply. A very handsome pen and pencil set in a beautiful cedar chest were presented to Mr. Kelsey as a memento of the happy association. Mr. Kelsey was always ready to lend a helping hand and his departure leaves a vacant place which it will be very hard to fill. In every branch of the church work he has had a sympathetic interest although it was in the choir where he was most active. Mr. Kelsey received notice of his appointment as electrician on one of the Canada Cement Company's boats running from Port Colborne to Point Anne, and reported on Monday for duty.

HASTINGS

DEBATE IS PART OF W.A. MEETING

Hastings Association Enjoys Debate Between Two Lady Teams.

HASTINGS, May 27 (Examiner Correspondence)—Mrs. D. E. Scriver and his daughter-in-law Mrs. J. B. Scriver were joint hostesses on Thursday afternoon to the members of Trinity United Women's Association for their regular monthly meeting.

The worship period was in charge of Mrs. A. E. Metcalfe, convenor for group 2, who chose the theme of her scripture talk from the 33rd verse of the 13th chapter of St. Matthew.

Mrs. A. E. Metcalfe led in prayer after which Mrs. Arthur Fleming closed the worship period by reading the hymn "Oh Master let me walk with Thee."

The president, Miss Mae Huycke took charge. Mrs. J. M. Baker, treasurer, and Mrs. G. Faux, secretary gave favorable reports.

Correspondence included a letter of appreciation from Mrs. C. C. Huycke, a shut-in.

Business centred around the second of the series of four golden teas to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Trinity United parsonage, to be held on Thursday, June 6th at the home of Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Newell in charge of Mrs. Metcalfe's group.

It was also decided that the Women's Missionary Society and the Women's Association would hold a joint meeting on June 13th, at which a 15c tea will be served.

Ten Dresden plate quilt blocks were pieced and given to the members to complete at home.

The program was featured by a highly interesting debate on the subject "Resolved that country women do more work than town women." Two country ladies, Mrs. Virgil Oliver and Miss Grace Orr presented some forcible arguments in favor of the affirmative side. Mrs. F. W. Newell and Miss Carrie Doxsee ably upheld the negative. Although the judges Mrs. C. Baker, Mrs. R. King and Miss K. German gave the decision in favor of the negative, the country women couldn't agree with the decision and passed many opinions in comparison with their work.

To add to the theme of the debate, a pleasant surprise was given when Mrs. Gordon Faux sang "Out on the farm you'll find plenty of work to do." After the closing hymn and the benediction by Mrs. Newell, Mrs. J. B. Scriver and Mrs. D. E. Scriver served a dainty luncheon and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Institute Executive

A meeting of the executive of the Hastings Women's Institute was held at the home of the president, Mrs. G. Sine to make arrangements for the first meeting of the year's work to be held on Tuesday, June 4th in the council chambers. Dr. J. A. MacDonald will be the guest speaker for the afternoon. Following the meeting Mrs. Sine served afternoon tea.

Mrs. D. Kier of Campbellford is visiting with her parents, Mr and Mrs. J. Cruickshank.

Mrs. J. A. Brown, Mrs. G Sine, Mrs. J. A. MacDonald and Mrs. A. Phillips attended the district annual meeting for East Peterborough Women's Institutes held in Westwood on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Way and Mr. and Mrs. J. McBride of Toronto were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. Way.

Youth Nearly Drowns When Canoe Capsizes

LINDSAY, May 27.—(Special to Examiner.)—Fred Green, town, had a narrow escape from drowning in the Scugog river on Sunday. Green, in company with Miss M. Gassien, were in a canoe when a whirlwind actually lifted both from the craft into the water. Miss Gassien was able to swim to shore, but Green, who was unable to swim, went down for the second time when Carl Montemeglio plunged in and picked the drowning youth from the bottom of the river.

IN MEMORIAM

STAUNTON.—In loving memory of our beloved and only daughter, Betty, who passed away three years ago to-day at the age of eight years.

Gone from this earth so swiftly,
Plucked like a flower in bloom,
So young, so fair, so happy,
Yet called away so soon.
In the city of Light, on the hill far away,
Where the sun never sets nor flowers decay,
She has gone to her rest, free from sorrow and pain,
When in God's own time we shall meet again.
Some day we'll understand.

BAPTISTS TO MEET HERE ON TUESDAY

133rd Annual Meeting of Peterborough Association Two Day Affair.

SPECIAL SPEAKERS.

Preparations are made for the annual association meeting of Baptist churches which convenes in Park Street Church on Tuesday and Wednesday. The association includes 20 churches, and it is expected that a large representation will attend.

Amongst the special speakers will be Rev. A. J. Vining, D.D., president of the convention of Ontario and Quebec, and Rev A. Haddow, of Bolivia, a former Peterborough boy

The first session will begin on Tuesday morning at 9.30.

The public is cordially invited to the sessions.

AMATEUR NIGHT SUMMER GARDENS

Thursday Night to See First of Regular Weekly. Features.

The dancers and music lovers of Peterborough and district will next Thursday evening be given a chance to see just how much real musical ability the young people of this community have when the Summer Gardens present their first amateur program.

Since the large radio stations started this popular program a few months ago they have been sweeping the country, bringing out new talent in every city where they have been presented. Now Peterborough is to have its own Amateur Night, and the young artists of the city will be given an opportunity to satisfy their dreams of becoming radio or screen stars.

In a community such as Peterborough one is bound to find any number of young people who have great possibilities as entertainers, and very few of them realize this until they have performed before a large audience such as will be attending the Summer Gardens of this week.

Non-dancers will find comfortable seats from which they can see and hear the whole show with no one obstructing their view.

The contestants will be judged by the applause of the audience, so come and give your favorite a helping hand.

Any artists who may desire to enter the contest are advised to get in touch with Andy Rutter at the Summer Gardens, Brock street. 1d

IN MEMORIAM.

ADKINSON. — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Fred Adkinson, who lost his life at the Water Works Plant, May 27, 1932.

We little thought when leaving home
You would no more return;
But that in death you soon would sleep,
And leave us here to mourn.

Three years have passed since that sad day
When one we loved was called away;
His loving smile, his welcome face—
None on earth can take his place.

Some day, some time we'll understand.

—Ever in the thoughts of his Wife and Family.

"FOUNDERS DAY" AT ST. ANDREW'S

COUNCIL ATTENDS.

The Mayor and Corporation and other civic departments, as well as representatives of the various institutions and societies in the city, attended a special "founder's day" service at St. Andrew's United Church on Sunday morning, when tribute was paid to some of the outstanding pioneers who typified the high service rendered to the community in the early formative stages.

Preacher for the occasion was the Rev. Dr. C. V. McLean, who also extended a warm welcome to the visitors on behalf of the congregation. A feature of the service was a sextette under the direction of Cyril H. Rice, Mus. Bach., choirmaster, consisting of Miss A. Jamieson, Mrs. Ross A. Williamson, Mrs. O. H. Rice, Miss M. Weir, Mrs. James Johnston and Mrs. Thomas Davidson.

In addition to the Mayor and City Council there were represented: The Board of Education, Peterborough Utilities Commission, the Nurses' Association, the Police and Fire Departments, the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. Boards, Anson House Board, Rotarians, Kiwanis and Kinsmen, and a detachment of fifty ex-service men from Branch 52, Canadian Legion (B.E.S.L.).

Among four outstanding pioneers whom Dr. McLean spoke of as typifying the form of service given to the community by the early settlers was Adam Scott, one of the first white men to found the settlement of Scott's Plains on the shores of the Otonabee in the spring of 1818.

Dr. McLean spoke of Peter Robinson as the coloniser who brought 3,000 people from Cork in 1825 to settle in the townships surrounding Scott's Plains, which was later to be renamed Peterborough in his honored memory.

Of Captain Rubidge, who originally settled on the shores of Rice Lake before locating in Peterborough, Dr. McLean described him as "the road builder," stating that it was he who built the roads in this district to give settlers the means of transportation between ther settlements in the bush and Peterborough, the up and coming market centre.

The memory of Mr. Robert Nicholls and his wife Charlotte Nicholls was also honored. Robert Nicholls was born in New York and came to Peterborough in 1832, establishing in business at Water and Simcoe streets as a general merchant, grain buyer and miller.

On his death in 1883 he left his wife sole executrix of his estate, and she resolving to be generous with the community in which she and her husband had prospered gave her entire fortune to various institutions of Peterborough, and to the Presbyterian Church in Canada, the Queen's University at Kingston and to Knox College, University of Toronto. She died on May 16, 1890 so that the special "founder's day" service came approximately near to the anniversary of her death.

Plans Taking Shape C.S.E.T. Camp Week

Plans for the big C.S.E.T. Board camp, June 29 to July 8 at the Kawartha Boys' Camp on Clear Lake are rapidly taking shape. The camp will be open to Explorers, Trail Rangers, Tuxis and other interested boys of these ages recommended by their Sunday school teachers.

Cost charges for the camp have been set at minimum figures. The fee for a week-end stay from Saturday, June 29, to Monday evening, July 1, including seven meals and car and boat transportation, will be $1. The fee for the nine-day camp from June 29 to July 8 with transportation from the Y.M.C.A. in Peterborough will be $5.

A full group of camp officials and leaders has been named. The following will be among those on the list: J. C. McClenaghan, camp director in charge of leathercraft and swimming; Rev. C. D. Daniel, camp advisor; Doug. Loomis, camp commissariat, in charge of archery, rustic furniture and boating; Henry Sheppard, soap carving; L. W. Copp, basketry and stars; and Arnold Spencer, musical director.

The first 100 boys to pay their camp fee will be accepted for the week-end camp.

Westclox Building Extension To Plant

Work on a small extension building to house process hardening operations is nearing completion at the plant of the Western Clock Company here. Measuring about 10 by 20 feet, the cost of the structure will total about $1,000.

Work was begun two weeks ago by the T. A. Brown Construction Company. Six to eight men have been employed. The extension consists of one storey over a small basement.

Obituary

HARRY LESTER

The death of Harry Lester, a veteran who served in the 59th Battalion, occurred after an illness of three months in Christie Street Hospital, Toronto, Saturday. Mr. Lester's home was at 427 Park Hill road here.

He was born in England fifty years ago. At the outbreak of the war he enlisted in the Canadian Expeditionary Force at Picton and served four years and nine months until he was gassed. He leaves his wife, formerly Myrtle Fuber, and five sons, Allan, Albert, Gerald, Melville and Charles. He was a member of the Church of England.

The remains are resting at the family residence until 12.30 noon on Tuesday. Under the auspices of the Canadian Legion, the funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 p.m. with a service at Belleghem's Funeral Home conducted by Rev. J. D. Paterson. Interment will be made in Little Lake cemetery.

WILLIAM ROBERTS.

ROSENEATH, May 27 (Examiner Correspondence).—William Roberts, a resident the greater part of his life in Aynwick Township, died at Roseneath yesterday after an illness of two months. He was in his 74th year.

The funeral will be held Tuesday, with a private service at the house at 2 p.m., followed by a service at the Roseneath United Church at 2.30 p.m., Rev. L. W. Scott officiating. Interment will be made in the Centenary Cemetery.

Mr. Roberts is survived by a widow and three sons: Cecil, Lewis and Burton, of Aynwick Township.

MRS. WILLIAM CLANCY.

The funeral of the late Mrs. William Clancy, of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough, took place on Saturday morning from the family residence at 71 Triller Avenue, Toronto, to the Holy Family Church, where Requiem Mass was solemnized by her nephew, the Rev. Edward Welsh of Douro. As the remains left the church, the hymn, "Nearer my God to Thee," was sung by the grandson of the deceased, Billy Clancy. Interment was in Mount Hope Cemetery.

Pall-bearers were Mr. Michael Kennealley of Keene and the five sons: Messrs. William Clancy of South Plainfield, N.J., M. J. Clancy of Peterborough, Thomas, Frank and Joseph, of Toronto.

The deceased, whose husband passed away some years ago, is survived by the five sons mentioned above, and seven daughters: Mrs. E. Whaling of Erie, Pa.; Mrs. H. O'Halleron of Detroit; Mrs. E. Cronin, of Hamilton; Mrs. W. Artkin, Mrs. P. Dwyer, and the Misses Gertrude and Kathleen, all of Toronto; also one brother, Mr. Dennis Kennealley of South Dakota, and two sisters, Mrs. Buoy of Lang, Ontario, and Mrs. J. Whitty of Stirling.

MRS. ERNEST HAMLIN.

The death of Mabel S. Chester, wife of Ernest W. Hamlin, occurred recently in Toronto. She was thirty-five years of age.

The funeral was held in Toronto on May 13, Rev. C. D. Stewart of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, of which the deceased was a member, conducting the services. Interment was made in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. Pall-bearers were members of the postal staff on which Mr. Hamlin serves.

Many floral tributes were in evidence at the funeral. Mrs. Hamlin had a large circle of friends, many of whom are in Peterborough.

Besides her husband, one son, Ernest, survives.

WILLIAM E. CARNAHAN

CAMPBELLFORD, May 27.—William E. Carnahan, former insurance salesman of this town, died early this afternoon in the Toronto General Hospital after a brief illness. He was 62 years old. The funeral will be held here Wednesday afternoon from the family residence.

10 Days For Mixing Gasoline And Liquor

Convicted of being drunk in charge of a car Albert Lindsay, 39 Peel street, Lindsay, to-day was sentenced to ten days' imprisonment when he appeared on remand on a plea of "not guilty." He was arrested early Staurday morning by Traffic Officer A. E. Hornick when the officer discovered accused's car parked on the highway east of Fowler's Corners without lights. There were six other men in the car, four of whom were convicted of being drunk on Saturday.

On his appearance this morning, Lindsay was represented by Emmett F. Sheehy. Constable Hornick and three city police officers testified as to the condition of the accused when he was brought in to the lock-up.

Lindsay admitted that he drank some beer shortly before leaving Peterborough, but stoutly maintained that he was not drunk.

SAWDUST TAKES FIRE

A sawdust pile at the corner of George and Rink streets went ablaze and required attention from the Fire Department on two occasions Saturday and Sunday. The stubborn fire, smoldering in the depths of the pile, was finally conquered after two water lines had been brought into action.

The firemen hurried to 179 Adeline street to extinguish a chimney fire this morning. No damage resulted from the fire.

FIRES ARE BAD TIMBER LANDS

near New Ross, Argyle and Springhill. Firemen were reported battling on even terms with the blazes.

20 In New Brunswick

Twenty fires were reported in New Brunswick that kept 800 men busy Sunday and today. The most serious outbreaks were in Madawaska county where nine fires raged. A blaze was out of control near second Falls, which supplies power for the city of Edmunston. Settlers' homes were destroyed in St. Joseph Parish. Other fires were reported in Restigouche, Gloucester, Northumberland, York, Queens, Charlotte, Carleton and Victoria counties.

Fire covered a four-mile area at Mud Lake, 12 miles north of Buckingham, Que. Three smaller blazes were under control. At McGregor Lake, 20 miles north of Hull, another fire was burning.

CALLANDER, Ont., May 27 (AP)—Rain fell a few miles north of here to-day and overcast skies gave promise of a downpour which would halt the spread of the bush fires in the neighborhood of the Dionne quintuplets' hospital.

The famous five babies' first birthday anniversary is to be celebrated tomorrow and, although the fires occasioned little alarm for the babies' safety, everyone was pleased that the fire hazard was reduced.

ROUYN, Que., May 27 (CP) — Anxious settlers gazed skyward today hoping rain would quench bush fires threatening their newly-made homes in Montbeillard Township in Northern Quebec.

One fire had spread over 1,000 acres of land; the other was five miles south of Arntfield. Unless rain falls the settlers were fearful they would have to abandon their homes.

NEW ROSS, N.S., May 27 (CP)—A forest fire was sweeping swiftly along a 2½-mile front toward this village to-day threatening five lumber camps as 100 men fought vainly to check it or turn it aside.

PEMBROKE, Ont., May 27 (CP) —A bush fire at Heney Lake in the Mackey station area was believed to-day to be under control although no direct word had been received at the office of the Ontario Forestry Branch here. Twenty men were fighting the fire and last night an additional 12 men left for the scene of the blaze, 45 miles northwest of this place, covering an area of about two square miles.

Quebec, May 27 (CP)—Homes of 45 settlers were destroyed by forest fires in various sections of the province during the last few days. Thirty colonist habitats were razed in fires in Blencourt and Lejeune townships in the Matapedia district, while 15 other wooden houses occupied by settlers at Anse St. Jean, in the Chicoutimi district, and a small school were wiped out by quick-spreading slash fires. The majority of the 60 fires are now said to be under control.

NORTH BAY, Ont., May 27. — (CP.)—Rainfall to-day is bringing welcome surcease to a dozen settlements throughout Northern Ontario in which bush fires have been raging for the last two or three days. Timmins, New Liskeard, Haileybury, Capreol, Falconbridge and Gogama all reported blazes of serious proportions.

One of the most serious fires swept Phelps township, 18 miles east of her, destroying tall buildings on the farm of James Hills, and the saw mill of William Carter on the same concession road.

Only a miracle saved the entire settlement around Songis post office from destruction. Most of the farm buildings are set in the midst of the bush with neither fire guards nor clearing to protect them.

At noon to-day the fire was still out of control though it was no longer of dangerous proportions.

Fear was felt for a while this morning that Jack Wilson's mill might be destroyed, but rain has pretty well halted the advance.

Blanket Of Snow Covers Grain Fields

EDMONTON, May 27 (C.P.).—A fine blanket of snow covered newly sown grain fields in the vicinity of Edmonton last night. It was taken by farmers as a farewell gesture from King Winter. Moisture would be plentiful this year.

Seven-Power Conference On Naval Matters Likely

LONDON, May 27.—(AP)—Well-informed quarters said today the government was considering the possibility of holding a seven-power naval conference before the end of this year.

This statement followed a confirmation of an announcement in Berlin Anglo-German naval talks would open here June 4. These talks are expected to determine whether Germany and Russia could be included successfully in a round-table conference with the five naval treaty powers—Great Britain, the United States, Japan, France and Italy.

Great Britain is regarded as adhering firmly to the view a conference of at least five powers must be held in 1935 as required under the expiring Washington treaty of 1922.

NATHAN LEOPOLD HOPES TO GET MASTER'S DEGREE

CHICAGO, May 27.—(CP).—Nathan Leopold, serving a life sentence for the murder 11 years ago of Bobby Franks, hopes to win a master's degree from the University of Chicago through his prison research work.

Professor Perris Loune, member of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, revealed the "thrill" slayer's ambition, disclosing Leopold's hope for a master's degree is based on his study of the question: "Do paroled convicts make good?"

Leopold, who joined Richard Loeb also serving a life sentence, in an effort to commit a "perfect crime" by slaying the Franks boy, is a gifted mathematician and linguist. Since his imprisonment he has been taking correspondence courses of the University of Chicago.

Cricket Results

LONDON, May 27 (C.P. Cable).—Yorkshire soundly defeated Sussex, runner-up in the county cricket championship last season, in a match concluded at Leeds to-day. The northern county had a margin of an innings and 123 runs.

Derbyshire registered a four-wickets victory over Essex at Brentwood and Worcestershire gained major points at Southampton, winning from Hampshire by 133 runs.

The scores:

Yorkshire, 421; Sussex, 86 (Verity four wickets for 16 runs) and 212 (H. Parks 50).

Essex, 116 and 219; Derbyshire, 150 and 186 for six wickets (Smith 82, Eastman six for 60).

Hampshire, 136 and 97 (Parks six for 35); Worcestershire, 133 and 101 for four wickets.

Close of play scores in other matches started Saturday follow:

Kent, 247 and 266 for six wickets (Pagg 67, Amos 57 not out); Warwickshire, 186 (Freeman four for 57). At Birmingham.

Northamptonshire, 329 and 131 for four wickets (Bakewell 75 not out); Glamorgan, 174 (E Davies 56, Clark five for 47). At Kettering.

NoNttinghamshire, 459 (Heane 101, Winrow 137, Walker 52); Somerset, 325 for six wickets (J. Lee 91, Wellard 68). At Nottingham.

New Yorkers Gain 5-4 Victory

Giants Have to Go Nine Innings to Best Deans and Cards.

CUBS BOUNCE BACK.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer

If anyone wonders what is holding the Giants up at the head of the National League despite the plague of injuries that has hit them a simple answer is found in the three-cornered battle for the next best place in the standing.

Since starting west, and losing most of their infield enroute, the Giants have won two out of three games each in Cincinnati, Pittsburgh and Chicago and yesterday continued their triumphant progress with a 5-4 victory over the Cardinals and both famous Deans. Meanwhile the Dodgers, Cubs and Cards have engaged in so keen a dogfight that not one of them has been able to threaten the leaders and Pittsburgh Pirates have been threatening to rise up and smite one of them down into the second division.

New York had to go to the ninth inning to collect four runs off Paul Dean and brother Dizzy, who relieved him when the going got tough and was nicked for a walk and a hit that meant three runs. Meanwhile the Cubs, knocked down to fourth place by the Giants Saturday, bounced back into second with an 8-3 triumph over Brooklyn on Bill Lee's four-hit pitching and four Dodger errors. That put them a few points in front of Brooklyn and a half game up on St. Louis.

Cuts St. Louis Margin

The Pirates, meanwhile, cut the St. Louis margin to a half game as Cy Blanton pitched them to a 3-2 victory over the Phillies for his seventh triumph of the season. He granted only seven hits and fanned nine to beat the six-hit flinging of Rookie Ray Prim and Curt Davis. Babe Ruth, who belted three home runs at Pittsburgh Saturday, couldn't repeat against Si Johnson at Cincinnati and the Reds won 6-3. The Babe fanned three times and fouled out once.

NIFTY TWIRLING BY WILLS, PETES' POOR DEFENSIVE PLAY ACCOUNTS FOR ONE-SIDED WIN

Oshawa Moundsman Hurls Nine-hit Game While Fanning a Dozen.

WHATLEY CUT IN FACE.

Seahorses Kick in With 10 Fielding Errors—Lepper Ousted in Eighth.

Avenge Defeat

Johnson Motors of Peterborough dropped an 8-1 C.O.B.L. decision in Oshawa Saturday afternoon, after beating the Brewers by a 10-4 count on the local diamond the previous day. Good hurling by Lefty Wills on the Motor City mound and poor defensive play by the Petes made for the one-sided victory before a large crowd of fans.

The Petes kicked in with 10 fielding errors while Lefty Lepper, who had gone good for four frames, weakened in the fifth and gave way in the eight to Frank Whitehouse. Wills pitched nine-hit ball, keeping the bingles scattered while fanning a dozen. He had almost perfect support. A total of 29 were left stranded on bases, 13 of them for the losers, as the rival flingers got themselves in the hole repeatedly but worked out.

Cy Whatley, the locals' first-string catcher, received a bad cut over the eye blocking a runner at the plate in the sixth. Seven stitches were required to close the cut and he had several teeth loosened. Starr finished the game for him. Fred Ash was chased in the eighth after an argument with Umpire Fair and Cadd took over his position at first. The Petes used 13 players, including Murphy as a pinch-hitter. It was a long drawn-out contest with poor baseball shown most of the way.

Calladine and Hollingsworth were the only Peterborough players to go good in a defensive way, both handling five chances without a slip. Clark and Ash had a bad day in the field with Lepper, Foley, Whatley and Starr also booting one each. With such support the heavers couldn't be blamed for the reverse. Foley's hitting was the only bright spot, Tommy rapping out four perfect singles in five appearances and being robbed by Mathews on other. The Oshawa infield and Mathews shone in the field while Elliott and Mathews led the cloutters with three each, the former getting a pair of doubles.

Muff Opportunity.

Singles by Foley and Kearns with a steal had Petes on second and third in the first but they got no further. Clark's single and a walk left two stranded in the second and Foley's hit with a steal and an error saw two die on base again in the third. Whatley singled in the fourth and stole second but was left and the Petes went out in order the next two frames. In the seventh a walk was all the visitors could get off Wills.

Next inning, Foley singled and went to third when Ash hit safely, but again the Petes failed to hit in the pinch. They spoiled Wills' shutout in the final frame. Murphy walked and was forced by Whitehouse. Hollingsworth struck out but Calladine singled to advance Whitehouse. Both moved up on a hit by Foley which filled the bases. Kearns walked and forced in a run, the next batter fanning.

Lepper was in trouble from the start but kept bearing down to get by nicely till the fifth. In the first Hurst walked and Kitchen singled. Both advanced on an out. Mathews was hit to fill the bases with one out but Lepper fanned the next and forced Peacock to roll out. With one out in the second, Osborne walked. He went to third and Wills to second on errors by Lepper and Clark, Hurst being safe on a fielder's choice. With the sacks again loaded and one out, Lepper fanned the next two. A walk and a hit failed to give the Brewers a run in the third and errors by Ash and Clark did no damage in the fourth.

Add to Count.

Mathews started the fifth with a single and went to second on an out. He took third on Peacock's single. Whatley threw wild to second on Peacock's steal and Mathews scored. Peacock tallied on Elliott's double, the latter going to third on an out and scoring on Wills' single. They got one in the sixth. Kitchen was hit and stole second. On Jubenville's hit to centre, Kitchen tried to score but was blocked at the plate by Whatley and put out, although Cy was injured and had to leave. Jubenville had taken second on the throw. He stole third and counted on Mathews' hit.

Despite a walk, a hit and a miscue by Clark, nothing happened in the seventh. However, they went wild to tally four in the eighth. A hit by Mathews started it. His single went through Foley and he stopped at second, going to third later on Wallace's hit, the latter taking second on the throw-in. A hit by Peacock sent in Mathews with Wallace stopping at third. Whitehouse started pitching. Peacock stole second and two runs scored on a double by Elliott. The latter went to third on a wild pitch. Osborne walked and pilfered second, taking another base on Starr's error with Elliott crossing the plate. Wills was safe on Ash's error, the latter being chased after an argument with Umpire Fair. Grose fanned, Kitchen flied out and Jubenville grounded out with no further scoring.

Tuesday Night's Bout Will Inaugurate Profitable Outdoor Season.

BARNEY FAVORED.

(By Alan Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor.)

New York, May 27 (A.P.). — The welterweight championship fight to-morrow night at the Polo Grounds, bringing together Jimmy McLarnin and Barney Ross for the third time in one of the ring's outstanding title rivalries, is likely to inaugurate the most entertaining door pugilist campaign the metropolitan area has enjoyed in nearly 10 years.

There hasn't been a million-dollar "gate" in New York since Jack Dempsey knocked out Jack Sharkey at the Yankee Stadium in 1926. None will touch that Rickardian figure this year, barring a promotional miracle, but the three big fights slated for the big town within a month should gross well over $1,000,000 combined.

This prediction is based on the prospects of a $200,000 house for to-morrow's fistic show, and 'gates' of $300,000 and $500,000, respectively, for the Max Baer-Jim Braddock heavyweight championship fight and the Primo Carnera-Joe Louis match.

It will require at least 35 000 customers to produce a $200,000 house for McLarnin's defence of the 147-pound crown. With favorable weather, this should be realized.

Ross, so sure of himself that he cast aside his world lightweight title to concentrate his fistic attack on heavier rivals, figures to win "going away," as they say at the race tracks.

The belief in this corner is Ross will outspeed and outbox McLarnin from start to finish, though the chance of a knockout is remote.

MILLBROOK WINS LACROSSE TOURNEY

Dinty's Inn Defeats Port Hope, But is Beaten in Final Game.

MILLBROOK, May 27. (Examiner Correspondence)—The local celebration of Empire Day centred in the lacrosse tournament at the Cosmos rink, with the two snappy games—Peterborough and Port Hope giving an exhibition of fast lacrosse in the afternoon and Millbrook playing off against the winners at night.

Dinty's Inn (Peterborough) won out in the initial tilt of the tournament by a score of 4-2, B. B. Dawson acted as referee, with three twenty-minute periods being played. Play was kept pretty well round the Port Hope goal during the game. Red Creighton scoring two for Dinty's Inn in the opening minutes of the first period: In the second period Hutchison and Bowen poked the ball into the net in rapid succession, making up Peterborough's total score, while Murford got one for Port Hope. The lads from the Electric City kept closely on the defence during the final twenty minutes, Johnston getting past the goalie for Port Hope's second score. The line-up was:

Dinty's Inn—Dundas, goal; Hutchison, Gereaux, defence; Creighton, centre; Ellis, rover; Sloan, Olaveson, wings; Martineau, O'Keefe, Bowen, Tice, Higgins, subs.

Final Game

The attendance of fans was much larger for the play off at 8 p.m., Jack Nattress, of Toronto, filling the role of referee until the last period when he had to leave for home and B. B. Dawson finishing the game. Millbrook's 'Giants team' won out by a score of 7-1, but though the score appears one-sided the play was sufficiently close to keep interest at a high pitch throughout.

Harry Gray started off with two goals for Millbrook in the first period, Jack Stinson adding two more and Bruce Freelove one, in the second while O'Keefe scorded the lone goal chalked up for the visitors just before the gong sounded for intermission. In the third twenty minutes Millbrook's goalie, J. Larmer, was knocked out by a severe blow on the head, H. Wainman carry on at the net until the game's close. Scorers for the local team were Reg Edmunds and E. Creighton.

Peterborough played a mixed team, using one or two from Port Hope at night, while the Millbrook line-up was:

Goal—J. Larmer; defence, K. Donnelly, Sloan; centre, L. Ingram; rover, B. Hutchison; wings, Scott, Creighton; subs, Raper, Edmunds, Freelove and Wainman.

Next game, in the league series, to be played at Millbrook will be on May 31, between Dinty's Inn and the local team.

ORIOLES GAIN SECOND PLACE BY VIRTUE OF TWIN VICTORY OVER SYRACUSE ON WEEK-END

Hitting of Chapman and Morrissey Features First Toronto Victory.

APPLETON BESTS BARNES.

Bears Take 14-2 and 4-3 Decision From Albany Senators.

(By Associated Press.)

The accurate shots the Baltimore Orioles have been taking at their short fences since they got back to their own park to-day had moved them into second place in the International League as they rode the crest of the home run wave to a double victory over the Syracuse Chiefs.

Adding seven home runs to their total of 19 piled up in four previous games, the Orioles won 8 to 5 and 12 to 4, and moved up a half-game ahead of the Buffalo Bisons. Puccinelli hit three homers, Barton two and Mayo and Abernathy one apiece. It was Puccinelli's 19th circuit clout of the season.

The league-leading Toronto Maple Leafs split a double-header with the Montreal Royals, taking the opener 9-8 and losing the nightcap 3-0. In the second game Pete Appleton limited the Leafs to two hits in shutting them out, and incidentally chalked up his fifth victory of the season.

Gain Second Place.

By virtue of their double win, the Orioles went from third place, where they were tied with Montreal, into second position, and Montreal dropped from third to fifth.

Baltimore shoved Buffalo out of the second niche and that team went into third, although the latter pulled out a 5 to 4 decision over the Rochester Red Wings. The Bisons used up 13 hits and seven walks in gaining the decision. It gave them their 11th victory in 14 starts, while it gave Rochester a record of 14 defeats in their last 17 starts.

The Newark Bears pushed up from 5th to 4th position, and at the same time shoved the Albany Senators deeper into the cellar by taking both ends of a double-header at Newark, 14-2 and 4-3.

OUTLAWS GET INITIAL WIN AT HASTINGS

Clapper's Team Trounces Clerks 11-7 in First Part of Twin Bill.

HASTINGS, May 27 (Examiner Correspondence). — The Hastings and District Softball League got under way last week with a double-header before a big holiday crowd. Before the first game started Rev. Father P. J. Kelley, hon. president, delivered a short address asking for the co-operation of the fans, also for each player to strive and win the trophy awarded to the most valuable player to his team for the season.

In the opener "Dit" Clapper got his youthful team of Outlaws home on the long end of an 11 to 7 count with Dr. Hay's Clerks. The Outlaws got away to a flying start in the first and third innings, when they garnered in seven runs. The Counter Hoppers plugged away, but the lead was too much for them. McKee on the mound for the winners pitched heady ball throughout, and backed by an airtight defence in the pinches was never in much difficulty. "Er" Whitred tossed them over plenty good enough, but a few displays of the clown act by his fielders ruined his game. The teams:

Clerks — Stevenson, cf; Hill, c; Kelley, ss; Wilson, 1b; Hay, 2b; Smith, lf; Collins, 3b; Whitred, p; English, rf.

Clerks	110 102 2— 7

Batteries—McKee and Phillips; Whitred and Hill.

Umpires—Hess and Landon.

Old-time slugfest.

The last half of the twin bill developed into an old-time slugging bee, Elgin winning from the Tanners 13 to 12. Neither Richardson nor Scriver appeared to have anything only the cover on the ball and the players surely collected a neat batting average for themselves, across in the third to ensure them victory, although the Tanners were coming strong at the finish. Every player for the winners collected one or more hits, with the exception of G. Richardson, while Hogan was the only Tanner who failed to connect. F. Grady with three singles and a triple led the winners, while Cecil Scriver with a triple, double and two singled led the Tanners at bat. The teams:

Tanners	204 042 0—12 16 8

Elgin—J. Preston, c; J. Richardson, p; M. Scott, 1b; G. Richardson, 2b; M. Preston 3b; W. Preston, ss; Fleming, lf; Stinson, cf; Grady, rf.

TAMULIS BEATS DETROIT 2 TO 0

STEWART HIT HARD.

The almost-daily exchange of fourth and fifth places between Detroit and Boston was the only alteration in the American League standing. The Red Sox moved back into the first division by downing St. Louis Browns 8-7 after Wes Ferrel had been pounded for six runs in the first two innings. The Tigers couldn't cope with the left-handed pitching of Rookie Vito Tamulis and took a 2-0 shutout from the second-place Yankees. Joe Sullivan also plished brilliantly but was tagged for a homer by Bill Dickey and wild-pitched the second run home.

The victory enabled the Yankees to increase their margin over Cleveland to 1½ games as the Indians took a 9-4 setback from Washington. Walter Stewart, former Senator, was pounded freely by his ex-teammates and went out after the third. Chicago's pace-setting White Sox were carried to 10 innings and won out only when Manager Jimmy Dykes took charge and belted his second homer of the game with one on base to give 'Silent' John Whitehead, rookie mound sensation, his seventh successive triumph. Bob Johnson smashed his 10th circuit blow for the A.s to capture the major league lead.

Yes, We Did Make that statement and sincerely thought we were right when we said it, but it seems that some of the boys who also keep tab on things resented that statement, in as much as they were on the winning side and that happened to be the Vice-Presidents.

So We Took Another look at our records and found that our friend was absolutely correct, and we can do nothing else now but apologize to our worthy Vice-President and we do so here and now.

It Only Goes to Show you two things: First—That we make mistakes just like every other bowler; second—That we appreciate the fact that our bowlers are interested enough in our sport to read our column daily—but we also said that this year it will be different and we are still sticking to that part of our story. You will have guessed why—yours truly is bowling on the President's side.

The Annual President- Vice-President competition gets underway this evening at 7.30 p.m. To-night's draw appeared in Thursday's Examiner. Tuesday's draw appears below:

President	Vice-President
F. Brown	Penrose
Hendry	Skinner
A. Brown	Donaldson
H. Martin	Oke
Rev. Barr	R. Martin
Soulby	Zeihr
Coleman	Lowe
McMillan	Williamson
Heckman	McGill
Flannery	Loftus

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES!

By ALEX J. MORRISON

Number 619

A child is unafraid of many things until he is taught to fear them. Usually a person taking up golf is not afraid of such errors as slicing and topping. These mistakes are committed many times before they prompt fear.

In time the player's fear of doing something wrong becomes an obsession. He doesn't strive to do the correct thing half as hard as he does to minimize his errors. Fear rules every move he makes. Such is the mental attitude of many experienced golfers.

The few who have attained consistent success are those with the means of overcoming their fears. In fact, their success is really a conquest of fear. It isn't wise to say that you aren't afraid when results prove otherwise.

First of all, admit your fears. Then go to work on them one by one. It will do much to lower your scores.

BRINTON GAINS LEAGUE POINTS FROM ELECTRICS

BRINTON 1, ELECTRICS 0.

Stan Clark scored the only goal of the league match on Saturday afternoon between the Canadian General and Brinton Athletic, to give the latter the lead in the local soccer league, although credit must be given to the former for the brilliant display with ten men against the full eleven of the winners.

Exchanges Even.

There was no choice in the spin of the coin and C.G.E. with ten players battled the full quota of the Brinton. Midfield tactics held sway in which the goalkeepers never received the ball through the effective display of the half-back divisions on either team. Jones at centre-half for Brinton, forced the play into the left wing where Post connected with a first-timer that landed in front of Bolton's charge. The Brinton centre-half headed over the bar from five yards out. Robb carried the sphere down the field to feed Quinn and Clark with a timely pass, the Brinton backs repulsing the visit to the other end where McPhate and Post dribbled into goal. Mitchell blocked their progress, but Brinton pivot man picked up the loose ball to rattle the upright with a stinging drive. Blowers caught the rebound to send Darling along the wing with Murduff, who compelled the Brinton goalie to divert the ball over the bar for an unsuccessful corner kick. Exchanges continued on an even basis with Blowers and Mitchell responding with clever defensive tactics against dangerous attacks. On one occasion Blowers awaited the outcome of Keith's manoeuvre on the extreme right who sent a lightning drive into goal. Blowers was hit on the head and had to be carried off the field until he recovered from the blow. Just before the interval, Murduff carried the ball into Brinton goal to test out the goalie. Half-time—no scoring.

Clark Gains Goal.

On resuming a re-arrangement of the Carpet team proved interesting because it brought out the qualities of players in different positions. Jack Menzies made his debut at right half for the Carpet boys, and made his presence known with his tireless tackling that made his wing men dangerous. Keith repeatedly breaking through to place the ball in front of goal. Blowers and Mitchell responded with clean tackling and clever punting; while the fast-moving Brinton front rank kept Bolton on the alert to keep his goal intact. Eventually he had to concede defeat when Jones added more vigor to his forceful play by carrying the ball into goal. Roob twice robbed him when in the act of shooting, but he gained precedence in the third attempt to get through. When within the goal area, Clark accepted the ball at the right moment to pick the inside of the upright out of reach of the C.G.E. custodian.

C.G.E. Could Not Score.

This setback to the C.G.E. compelled the ten men to respond with a smart display of attacking that resulted in the Brinton team being confined to their own area for the remainder of the battle, with an occasional break-away that Blowers took care of easily, or replied with a long punt into goal. Repeatedly the ball hovered in front of the Brinton goal, but could not be converted by the over-anxious Electric players. But credit must be handed out to the defensive tactics of Westwood and Adkinson, and this excitement prevailed until the final whistle. Brinton Athletic 1, Canadian General 0.

Goal scorer—Stan. Clark.

Canadian General — J. Bolton, goal; J. Mitchell and George Blowers, full backs; H. Stewart and W. Robb, halves; G. Clark, J. Quinn, George Lovatt, R. Murduff, and Harold Darling, forwards.

Brinton Athletic — Ed. Clark, goal; T. Westwood and E. Adkinson, full backs; H. Adams, Jones, and J. Menzies, halves; H. Keith, W. Curtis, S. Clark, T. McPhate and Vic Post, forwards.

Referee—Asa Downer.

Linesmen— Alex. McKinley and R. Carmichael.

SPORTS DAY BY DAY

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

(By C. J. P.)

Yonder lies Utopia—that is to say, there will be high jinks over the Brooklyn bridge this e'en. 'Tis opening night for the Girls' Softball League in the Bowl which cuddles up against the east end of the Hunter St. trestle in Ashburnham. Weather permitting, Westclox pry off the lid against C.G.E. at six and the fans will be out in force. The lasses have built up their squads since last season, have been practising regularly and you simply must cast the optics on the new costumes being worn. They'll open with a flourish—the usual ceremonies—and quite a tussle ought to ensue. These are the only local teams in the senior division and we expect the rivalry of June weddings will mark their contests.

• • • • • •

Let's see, anything else of importance to record. No, nothing much. The Petes had a game Saturday but it wasn't of much importance on account of Oshawa slapped their ears with an 8-1 swish in the Brewers' yard! We would like to skip lightly over this since it is Blue Monday and why carry coals to Newcastle? However, decency forces us to mumble a few words over the late departed before burying this contest in Potters Field. Nifty flinging by old Lefty Wills—who scattered nine hits and fanned twelve, getting good support—and terrible fielding by the Petes accounted for the sad news. We beat them by six runs Friday and they lick us by seven Saturday. What is sauce for the goose gathers no moss for the gander.

• • • • • •

The Petes couldn't hit Wills, except for Foley who hit four and should have had five. Oshawa couldn't hit Lepper either till the fifth. He was in more holes than a gravedigger but by bearing down hard got out of them. But by the fifth, he was pretty well weakened and the Brewers began to clout his fast ball. Whitehouse finished the eighth and, after a shaky start, looked okay getting three in a row. Neither one got as much support as a pair of frayed suspenders offers. Al Clark cracked wide open to boot four—enlisting two grounders, a fly and a throw—Ash juggled two throws (unusual for him), Foley missed a single, Lepper booted one, and both catchers threw bad to second. Just one of those days.

• • • • • •

Both sides had a flock of runners perishing on the paths in this rather weird performance. Two and three seemed to be left on by each side nearly every stanza. The Petes used 13 players, including two pitchers, two catchers, two first-sackers and a pinch-hitter. Whatley got a nasty cut in a gallant and successful effort to stop a run by blocking the plate. He may be out for a week since it took seven stitches over the eye to close the cut, not to mention some loosened teeth. Starr did alright in his place the last three frames. Cadd replaced Ash at first in the eighth when Fred—who had juggled a throw—bawled Umpire Fair out, claiming he had held it long enough, and ye umps gated him. 'Twas a bad day for the locals all right, starting during the opening ceremony when a girls' band massacred "God Save the King."

• • • • • •

Oshawa rates orchids for a nice showing after their beating of the previous day here. With Wills going good, the whole team dug in and played smart ball. They'll be tough to masticate this season. On Elliott's showing Saturday, they went mike Mays much at third. Wills licked us in a similar way last year early but was helpless again as the rest of the season and we hope it works the same way this year. Anyway, the Petes got a bad one out of their system, away from home, and with a few changes will be set to pick up where they left off the 24th in Kingston Wednesday.

That East Peterborough Baseball League is sure resilient—you've got to give it credit for that much, anyway. Just simply won't stay down, but keeps bouncing back up again. Carted away twice now to the boneyard, the E.P.L. is back on the scene again and calling for another meeting. C.G.E. and Raybestos were the only teams at the last meeting and they decided to forget the E.P.L. and go in the Trent Valley League. Since then, Posters have indicated their desire once more to go in the E.P.L. and now C.G.E. and Raybestos are willing to do the same—so long as three teams are entered. Meantime, Raybestos practise at six tomorrow eve in the Exhibition Grounds—after an absence of seven years. All positions are open and players wanting a tryout are welcome.

Kitchener Record says: "First Ontario baseball title ever to come to the Twin City was in possession today of the Waterloo Bantams, who recorded a 9-6 victory over Peterborough at Waterloo Friday to win the O.B.A.A. bantam crown. It was a great battle with neither club scoring a run the first five innings. Waterloo broke out ahead in the sixth and after that the newly-crowned champs coasted home to a well-deserved win. Today they are the toast of Twin City baseball fans. All the honor that comes with winning a title of this kind is theirs and rightly so." Bill Murphy has taken over the King Edward team and will call them the Maple Leafs in this year's City League. They practise nightly now at six in King Edward Park and all positions are open.

Arrangements have been completed for the pro rasslin' card to be run in the Armouries a week from tomorrow night (June 4th) and it includes such mat mastodons as the Masked Marvel, Bull Findlay, Don Petroff, Walter Parnall, Johnny Gyroffy and Jack Pearl. Starts at 8.30 o'clock and the Rangers' Band will be on deck. Iva Michaleff is promoting the show with Jack Forbes refereeing. It's a long time since the merry rasslers have done their stuff in a local ring and fans here will more than welcome the grunt-and-groaners this time. These guys, anxious to get Peterborough back on their circuit, will shoot the works in this first return appearance here next week. More about it again.

Indian River Wins From Elmwoods 12-3

The East Peterborough Softball League held their first game last week Indian River played Elmwoods at Douro. The Douro team was rather slow and Indian River got several runs at the beginning which gave them the game. The score was 12-3 in favor of Indian River. Jack Walsh was the hero of the game. He dig great work in the pitchers' box and also knocked the only home run of the game:

JUNGLE KINGS WIN IN EIGHTH FROM GALT NINE

Big-wigs of Inter-county Baseball No Opposition For Lesser Teams.

AMATEUR BASEBALL.

(By the Canadian Press.)

The big-wigs of Senior Inter-county baseball—they're just beginning to show their true colors—seem to be Stratford, Hamilton Vics, London, St. Thomas and just possible, a few others. They don't have much respect for big-wigs anyways in the Inter-county.

Guelph Maple Leafs, who are not conceded to be one of the leading spirits, nevertheless smashed out a 13-12 decision over Preston Saturday, and there were other results as surprising. It was the first mark of batting power the Leafs had shown this season.

Stratford's powerful team, 1934 Ontario senior champions, drubbed Brantford 14-6; Hamilton Vics upset Dundas 10-1; Hamilton Moodie-Tigers won a 5-4 decision from Galt; London trounced Aylmer 18-5 and St. Thomas blanked Kitchener-Waterloo 6-0.

The feature of this tilting took place at Kitchener where Alexander pitched five-hit ball to shut out the twin city team and Player Red McIntyre of the home forces and Manager Bush McWhirten of St. Thomas were ejected from the battle. There were plenty of fireworks in this struggle.

Earl Charters, Moodie-Tiger left fielder, smashed out a two-base drive in the eighth to score the tying and winning runs against Galt. The Terriers had a slight edge up to that point.

In the Central Ontario Senior League, Oshawa made up for their Victoria Day defeat by pounding out 13 hits and beating Peterboro 8-1. Wills was nicked for nine hits but he scattered them, holding the Petes scoreless until the ninth.

Port Colborne and Merriton won the opening games of the Niagara Senior circuit. The Ports eked out a 10-9 decision over Niagara Falls Merchants and Merriton defeated St. Catharines 7-4.

Omaha Runs Second In Famous Withers

NEW YORK, May 27. — The sixtieth running of the Withers mile seems to have proved that William Woodward's Omaha is far from invincible at distances of a mile or less, whatever his merits over the longer routes.

The strapping son of Gallant Fox, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, and hailed as the new three-year-old champion of the United States, was heavily favored for the Withers, run at Belmont Park on Saturday, but wound up decisively beaten by Rosemont, from the fox-catcher farms of William du Pont.

Bad racing luck, in part at least, the fact remains that Rosemont, a three-year-old son of the Potter-Garden Rose, won by a length and a half, going away in the fastest time of the meeting. The winner was closed in 1.36 3-5. Omaha was second, and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Flat Eye was a bang-up third.

Queen Mary Takes Free Hitting Tangle

In a free-hitting School Softball League game last week, Queen Mary took a 17-13 decision over King George. A six-run rally in the last frame gave them the nod after the Ashburnham crew had come from behind to take the lead in the seventh. The pitching was only fair on both sides while the hitters had a big day. Some neat fielding was shown at times. The teams:

Tennis

W. H. MacDonald

WITH THE Weatherman acting his very best for the holiday on Friday, the Peterborough Tennis Club held a highly successful tournament to get the season under way in good style.

THE TOURNAMENT was a round robin mixed doubles affair, with the contestants drawing for partners. Everyone had an equal chance with this arrangement and had a good time. About sixty players took part, which necessitated several groups. Each group played for 25 minutes in the first round and there was time for three rounds of play for each group.

WINNERS WERE DECLARED on a total-game basis and not by "sets." After each round of play the winners marked their own scores on their tallies and at the end of the afternoon these cards were totalled.

FOUR WINNERS were declared in the afternoon's play. June Best and Gordon Kirkwood finished highest with 22 and 21 games to their credit respectively. The award for second place went to a family act, when Mary nd Bill McPherson finished by winning 21 and 20 games respectively. Prizes were tennis balls and each winner received three balls for their day's labor.

THE DAY couldn't have been better. The courts couldn't have been in finer condition. Even the veterans, who can remember "way back when...," agreed that the courts were never better. The crowd was large and enthusiastic and there was also a good-sized gallery. What more could be asked?

LUNCH WAS SERVED after the play which made an ideal ending to a successful tournament. Mrs. D. A. MacTavish presented the prizes to the winners.

WE NOTICE.—Roy Covert, former Belleville hockey star, who is now working in town. Roy seems to be an all-round athlete playing hockey, softball, rugby, and tennis. Local fans will remember him as the starry centre men who gave the "Petes" no end of trouble in their hockey series with Belleville last winter. He is an enthusiastic tennis player and hopes to be able to play a lot this summer.

—Bill McGee, who with Borden Rollins, has held the Central Ontario doubles championship for the past two years. Bill is from Tweed and is working in a local bank. He is expected to be a big threat in local tennis circles this summer, and Mac Cotton, city champion, who incidentally also hails from Tweed, may have to be at top form to turn back the newcomer.

—The veteran and former city champion, George Scott, playing with Walter Perks and giving Mac Cotton and Jack Cowling a fine battle.

THE ENTIRE executive of the club worked hard to make the holiday get-together a success. The executive this year is made up of D. A. MacTavish, president; Muriel Donaldson, secretary; Mac Cotton, treasurer. These together with various sub-committees, deserve great credit for the way in which things were carried out.

REPORTS FROM Lakefield indicate a banner season for that club. Although only two courts are available these are in good shape and have been in use for several weeks now. In fact, they were among the first courts that were in playable condition this year.

Rev. A. B. Burrows is the president of the club, with Mrs. Kathleen Brown, secretary. D. J. Campbell is treasurer. The men's team will be captained by Jack Langley, and Miss "Skook" Elmsley will head the ladies.

THE PRESIDENT of the Kawartha League, Dr. J. C. Smith, is a member of this club and has done much to keep it to the fore. The doctor says, that while a bit overweight after the long winter lay-off, he is playing hard and expects to take his regular turn with the club team again this summer. Which is good news, indeed.

THE KAWARTHA Tennis Club entertained representatives from The Grove School, Lakefield, at an exhibition tennis tournament Saturday afternoon (May 25). Six matches were played; two men's singles and four men's doubles.

• • •

THE RESULTS of the matches were as follows:

J. Donaldson, Kawartha, vs. T. Dun, Grove School.—6-2, 6-2.

E. Rigby, vs G. W. Smith.—0-6, 0-6.

R. Hull and D. Emery vs. R. Strickland and B. Hepburn—5-7, 6-2, 5-7.

S. Shields and R. Mawhood vs. Mr. F. Duxbury and T. Dench, 3-6, 4-6.

J. Bell and W. Cruthers vs. J. Maynard and W. Braid, 3-6, 3-6.

H. Sills and E. Gledhill vs. J. Fletcher and E. Fitzgerald, 1-6, 2-6.

Note — Kawartha scores are given first.

THE QUAKER Tennis Club held a successful round robin singles tournament on Saturday afternoon at the club courts. Mrs. George Nicholls was the ladies' winners while Grant Morrow and Bill Young copped the gents prizes.

THE KAWARTHA League is due to open its season on Saturday June 8. The schedule will probably appear this week. It looks like a big year for tennis.

• • •

SUGGESTIONS and material for this column would be welcomed by the writer. Tennis clubs are requested to send all material for publication to W. H. Macdonald c/o The Examiner.

GYPSY GIRL

THE STORY OF AN IMPASSIONED ROMANCE

CHAPTER 35.

For a long time Consuelo sat and thought. It was not until after the music of the finale had died that she left the dressing room and went down the hall, anklets clinking, silk swishing. She paused before L'Ville's room. Then she opened the door and walked in.

Louis looked up. She smiled condescendingly.

"Oh hello there, gypsy. I see Doug told you what I said. Now I'm perfectly willing to be friends with you and all that, but you've got to—" She stopped. The gypsy was staring at her so peculiarly. "I want to tell you I'm sorry for what I said that day. You see I didn't have an idea that you could speak English." Again she stopped. "There isn't any reason for us not being friends, is there?" She cleared her throat, "Oh come now, you mustn't be mad at me for talking to Douglas. We're old friends." She lighted a cigaret. "Have one?"

Consuelo did not speak.

"Oh, you don't smoke?" Louise sat down at the dressing table. "Clara, pour a couple of drinks for the—for Consuelo and me." She took off the headdress that was part of her costume. "Douglas was telling me so many nice things about you—" She was filling in the pause. "I heard Renaldo say you were getting along swell with your routine, but then Renaldo is such a liar you never can believe him. Say, any time you get stuck on a step I'll show you how to do it." No answer. "Sit down, will you, you make me nervous standing there like a—" She did not finish the sentence. "Clara, hurry up with that drink. You'll have one, won't you?"

"No. I don't drink with people I don't like!"

Louise started as if she had been slapped.

"Listen here, you gypsy, you've no reason to say that to me. I'm being nice to you. It isn't often that a star as big as me offers to make friends with just a specialty dancer, you realize that, don't you?"

"No."

Louise stared open-mouthed at the gypsy.

"Then what the devil do you want in my dressing room?"

"I came to tell your fortune."

"You're crazy! I don't want my fortune told. I've offered you my friendship and if you don't want it get out of here and do it darn quick, or I'll call the stage hands and have you put out."

"No, you won't. Listen, white woman, I'm tired of this playing at being nice with you. I hate you. You're dancing in the place I want to dance in and there is not room for the two of us."

"Of all the crust!" Louise exploded. Then she laughed nervously. "Don't be silly, dearie. You must think a lot of yourself to imagine you could take L'Ville's place. You think because you're understudying me that you can step in—well, if you weren't such a green newcomer you'd know you couldn't. I've got a contract with Goldberg that he can't break if he wanted to, so now what do you think you're going to do?"

"Gypsies get what they want—some way!"

"Gypsies may get what they want but they don't get what I want! Now get out of here!"

"When I am ready!"

They stared at each other and Louise was the first to break. She turned to the mirror and pinned back her hair preparatory to taking off her makeup.

"Clara, will you open the door for this unwanted person? I'm quite too fatigued to endure more of this distasteful interview," she drawled in her ritziest manner.

Clara held the door open but the gypsy made no move to go.

"Miss Louise, don't you all think I better git Mr. Hed?"

Perhaps Louise thought of the laugh this would give backstage, for she said, "Oh, don't bother, Clara. She can stay here all night if she wants. I've got a heavy date with my boy friend." She gestured with hands covered with cold cream. "Better be nice to me, dearie, my boy friend is the big boy behind this show and if I say so—out you'll go, see?"

"You think so?"

"Goldberg isn't so big, you know. He's the one who put you on but my boy friend has the say over Goldberg, and my boy friend saw to it that I got a contract that nobody in New York could break."

"These contracts, I don't know much about, but it would seem to me that the way you danced was contract enough or not enough. With my dancing I don't need a contract to make them keep me. I came in to tell your fortune, white woman, and I say to you, you'll wish your contract was a thousand times as strong before you're through!"

"You're a dirty little liar!" Then again she climbed the pedestal of L'Ville. "Don't be utterly ridiculous, my dear. It's only your colossal ignornace that makes you think so. Clara, bring me my blue evening gown. Stewart likes that one best."

Consuelo started forward. Louise did not notice, but chattered on in her high voice.

"You see, dearie, when you have a sweetheart that's as influential as mine you don't need to worry much about a contract. Stewart, you know, Stewart Blackmore, is such a dear." She slipped on a small diamond and platinum wrist watch. "Isn't it a dream? He gave it to me only last week."

"You lie, you white dog, you lie!" Consuelo slapped Louise across the face.

Louise screamed. She stumbled back from the infuriated gypsy.

"What's that to you?" she cried.

"Plenty to me! He's my man, not yours!"

"Oh! Oh!—Oh!—" Louise laughed hysterically.

Consuelo went downstairs and started for the alley. Then Doug sighted her. He ran up, caught her arm and walked beside her.

"What's the rush? Fire or something?"

No answer.

"Say, baby, don't be mad at Doug. He's harmless and well meaning and he's got a good heart under his great brawny chest—"

He stopped her and turned her face to his.

"What's wrong? Listen, baby, was that you who hollered up there?"

"No."

"Was it Louise?"

"Yes."

"Good Lord, haven't you any sense at all? Why can't you leave her alone? You've got a swell nerve to be jealous of me talking to her when you and Stewart—"

She jerked herself free and started to run.

"Hey, darn you, what's got into you all of a sudden?" He caught up with her. "Gee, baby, I'm sorry for making you mad. For the love of heaven, will you slow down?" He was panting. "Let me get a cab, you can't go running through the streets like this." He was holding her back. "Listen, my darling—hey, taxi, taxi! Here get in!! He shoved her through the door and slammed it behind him. With a sigh of relief he told the driver to go to the hotel.

"Doug," her voice was toneless, "if you like me a little don't take me to the hotel."

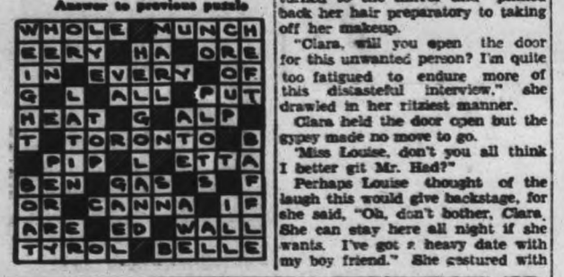
Answer to previous puzzle



Nature Builds Your Body—

but you supply the materials.

Health suffers if you run short of iron

Your food and drink are the only materials Nature gets to maintain your bodily strength and well-being. But the tragedy of modern foods is their shortage of iron. Sooner or later this has an effect upon the health. It causes, at first, a run-down condition and simple anaemia; then develops into serious ailments, if not checked.

40 out of 45 people in a recent test were short of Iron One month's treatment helped them back to health and vigour

A tiny drop of blood from each individual in the above group was examined under a powerful microscope. In every instance the blood was thinner and paler than it should have been, due to the shortage of iron. The authority who conducted the tests recorded the exact amount of the shortage for each person, then put every one of them on a 30-day treatment. The preparation he gave them was Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (called pink because they have a pink sugar coating). Then in one month they returned and their blood was examined again.

Rich supplies of Iron for 30 days had greatly improved their health. Blood tests proved value of the treatment

When an authority counts the number of red corpuscles and tells the exact amount of iron in the blood . . . nobody can deny it because the microscope proves it! And the gains made by the 40 persons during their 30-day treatment were all recorded! By definitely increasing both the red corpuscles and the iron, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills proved a most reliable tonic and blood builder. This test is a demonstration of what this fine old remedy can do for you, if . . . as is likely . . . you need iron.

Wouldn't you like to feel really strong and vigorous again? Wouldn't you like to eat well, sleep soundly, take a keen interest in life around you? . . . Then put yourself on a 30-day treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Directly you begin taking this reliable old preparation, the reconstructive process will start. The blood will grow richer . . . will carry more vitality . . . and your own feelings will react pleasantly. Old aches and off days will give way to new vigor and brighter outlook on life. You will know once again the joy of possessing that priceless treasure . . . health! Full size box 50c. 3414

THE TUTTS —By Crawford Young

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, May 28

Rather routine business affairs are read from the predominant planetary conditions. The emphasis is placed on the social, domestic or romantic affiliations, with much of a pleasant and profitable nature affecting the latter. Under such aspects, courtship and marriage are imminent.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to enjoy a year of pleasant and advantageous social, domestic or romantic activities. Friendship, courtship and marriage are close at hand.

A child born on this day may be talented and clever in artistic, cultural or romantic activities rather than business. Its success and happiness will result from its pleasant, friendly, gracious and kind disposition.

Nice Sum Realized At Lakefield Sale

LAKEFIELD, May 27. — (Examiner Correspondence).—The W.A. of St. John's Church held an afternoon tea and sale of home cooking on Tuesday afternoon in the Parish Hall with a very fair attendance present.

The members of this society have a great reputation for "putting across" any enterprise they undertake, and the tea was no exception. The tea tables were decorated with bouquets of spring flowers, and a competent committee looked after every detail.

The outfit for a boy in the mission school at Gleichen, Alberta, was on exhibition and evoked many favorable comments as it represented a season's faithful work and was strictly according to specifications. The bale is being packed and shipped at a very early date.

The W.A. has had a successful season, marked as usual by efficient and faithful service, combined with a cheery atmosphere and adherence to the motto of the W.A., "The love of Christ constraineth."

Candid Camera Reveals Facial Moods Of Dynamic Radio Priest

Candid camera portraits by Arthur Sasse, artist-photographer, reveal swiftly changing moods of Rev. Father C. E. Coughlin of Detroit, as he faced barrage of New York newspaper questioners before addressing monster gathering in Madison Square Garden on purposes of his National Union for Social Justice, in opening his campaign in the Eastern U.S. Father Coughlin uttered a scathing denunciation of President Roosevelt's action in vetoing the Bonus Bill.

Bensfort

Mr. and Mrs. O. Robertson of Toronto and Mr. Arthur McConnachie spent the holiday week-end at Lawrence Finnie's.

Miss Jean Thompson of Peterborough spent the week-end at the home of her parents.

Mrs. James Finnie visited her mother, Mrs. Jim Wedlock on Friday.

Miss Violet Thompson is visiting her brother Mr. Stuart Thompson.

Miss Marie Barnard of the "Marie Beauty Shoppe," Port Hope visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barnard on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rutherford and daughter of Toronto and Mrs. M. Rutherford, Miss Alma Rutherford and Mr. Harold Rutherford of Peterborough visited Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Rutherford on Friday.

The young people enjoyed the holiday playing two ball games. The girls played in the early part of the afternoon and the Bensfort boys played a team from Bailieboro later in the afternoon. The score was 16-16, the umpire being Judson Pue.

Mrs. Stuart Thompson and Mr. and Mrs. C. Emberson visited at Long Island, Rice Lake on Friday.

The Bailieboro girls are planning to hold a tournament at Bailieboro on June 3rd and a dance at Centreville, the same evening, music being supplied by Harold Moncrief's orchestra.

Miss Kathleen Barnard of the Bell Telephone Co., Toronto entertained a number of her Toronto friends at the home of her parents on Friday. The day was spent in an outing at Rice Lake and playing ball on the lawn. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McCartney, Misses Phoebe Ross, Betty McCullough, Rowena Portner, Etta Watson and Messrs. Neville Jones, Eric Brooks.

Among those who attended the play from here at the Anglican church at Bailieboro on Friday evening put on by Cavanville entitled "Country Folk" were Mr. and Mrs. James Hall, Misses Frances and Mildred Hall.

Among those who attended the dance at Wallace Point on Friday night were Mr. and Mrs. J. Brackenridge, Mrs. Harold Moncrief, Misses Isobel Dawson, Helen Howson, Mildred Hall, Grace Finnie, Beth Moncrief, Gladys Sanderson, Messrs. Jack Moncrief, Herb and Max Perrin, Billy Moncrief, Cliff Patton, Gus Anston, Frank Barnard, Merle Barnard.

Miss Beryll Wood of Peterborough spent the holiday at the home of her parents.

Mr. Jim Lewis of Peterborough visited Mr. and Mrs. Everett Wood on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Emberson motored to Niagara on Saturday.

Mrs. John Brackenridge called on Mrs. James Hall on Friday.

On Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Butlers of Plainville visited friends in the district.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Barnard and Marilyn and Velma Barnard visited Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barnard, Bailieboro on Wednesday afternoon.

Miss Betty Perrin of Port Hope visited Mr. and Mrs. Reg Perrin on May 24th.

Miss Kathleen Barnard of the Bell Telephone Co., Toronto visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barnard for the holiday.

Miss Marion Moncrief of Port Hope visited at the home of her parents for the week-end.

On Thursday evening the teachers of the Sunday school held a meeting at the home of Mrs. Frank Morrison.

The local young people have closed their Young People's League for the summer months. Both young men and young women are engaged in organizing softball teams. They are practicing now once or twice a week and will soon have their teams ready for some outside games.

The farmers have nearly all completed their spring sowing. They now are finishing up their root crop, and cultivating in the fruit gardens. There are great prospects for a good fruit harvest if the season isn't too dry, as the strawberry plants are now well in bloom. The hay crop is slow in maturing this year owing to the cold, backward weather. The trees are budding nicely which make the country look very pretty.

Mr. Clem Thompson has re-opened his summer resort and camp ground at Thompson's Landing. He has twenty-one boats in fine condition for renting. He also is planning on accommodating tourists for rooms in his residence. As usual he is operating a refreshment counter and supplies live bait.

Wesley Hibbard of Barnard's Landing has also opened his camp ground and summer resort on a very large scale.

Many of the fishermen in the district have been enjoying some good catches of catfish and other small fish.

On Thursday Mr. John Moncrief and twin-brother, Mr. William Moncrief celebrated their 81st birthday. Mr. John is at present in Winnipeg but Mr. William is at the home of his son Mr. Harold Moncrief. Mr. William Moncrief still attends church and Sunday School regularly and seems to be enjoying good health.

HAVELOCK CLUB HOLDS FIELD DAY

Albion Club Holds Very Successful Parade and Field Day.

HORSE RACE.

HAVELOCK, May 27. (Examiner Correspondence). — Under ideal weather conditions the fifth annual Victoria Day celebration under the auspices of the Albion Club here, was held at the park grounds.

The parade, which opened the celebration, started at the town hall promptly at 12.30 noon and led by Miss Isabel McQuigge as marshall, seated on a white pony, escorted by Chief C. F. Roberts proceeded around the main streets of the village.

A large open touring car gaily decorated with flags and bunting in the Albions' colors carried the president, George Kennedy, the vice-president, Clarence Spencer, and secretary, Keith Chiles, all suitably garbed in formal attire with silk toppers. Francis Voyer and H. Ketchen in khaki uniforms, acted as chauffeur and footman respectively. This car was accompanied by the Highland Kilties band.

The official car was followed by several beautifully decorated floats, a number of comics, a car fitted out as the Council Chamber with the reeve and councillors, village clerk and constable all represented by young ladies in male attire drew a great deal of attention.

A large number of youngsters in comic dress, one couple representing a bride and groom accompanied by their retinue, a young couple with baby carriage and several other groups caused much laughter.

While making the rounds of the village streets the parade was twice stopped while officers of the club left the car and called on two young people—Frank McLaughlin and Miss Alma Clarke, both of whom are on the sick list—and presented each with a large sheaf of flowers with the compliments of the club.

Sports Program

Shortly after one o'clock the program of small sports started, and was featured by keen competition and good sportsmanship throughout. The three mile bicycle race drew only two entrants, but this and the relay race with only two teams competing was the only event was not keenly contested.

The horse race in two heats with four entries was very interesting, and clearly demonstrated that horse lovers do not have to go to the larger race tracks to see a good race with drivers who know how to get the most out of their mounts.

This feature was won by G. Rutherford's horse with Olly Stinson up second place going to Mr. Rusaw of Dummer with Rusaw Jr., in the saddle.

The softball game which concluded the program of sports was won by Norwood, the score being, Norwood 23, Havelock 11.

Following are the prize winners in the various small sports: One mile relay running, Havelock Continuation School, first; Norwood team second. Horseshoe pitching, A. Graham and D. Clarke, Norwood; second, W. Brunton and George H. Brooks, Albions' grand derby feature, R. G. Rutherford stables with Stinson up; second, L. Rusaw, Norwood. Men's 100 yd. open, William Rogers, Norwood; Harold Hunter, Havelock. Married ladies' 50 yds., Mrs A. Dickenson, and Mrs. William Copp. Boys 16 and under, 100 yard dash Bernard Bedford, Havelock and James Heffernan, Asphodel. Boys 14 yrs. and under, 100 yds., Murray Lewis, Carol Ellis. Boys 12 and under, 75 yds., Buster Goden, Norwood; Doug. Hill, Havelock. Ladies' over, 50 yds., M. Seabrooks, B. Mathison-Otris, 50 yards, 14 and under, M. Jamieson, not recorded for second. Girls' 12 and under, 50 yards, L. Brisbin, Eleanor Coatsworth. Girls' 8 and under, 50 yards, M. McQuaig, Norma Thompson. Married men, 50 yards, Arthur Hamblin, Norwood; William Sexsmith, Toronto. Senior bicycle race, 3 miles, Alex (Torchy) Post, C. Bush, Campbellford, and Fred Breen. Softball tournament, Norwood trimmed Havelock, 23-11.

JOHN DAVIDSON, M.A TAUGHT 52 YEARS

One of Three Teachers in City Honored on King's Jubilee.

John Davidson, M.A., LL.B., one of the three teachers in this district receiving His Majesty's Silver Jubilee medal taught forty-four years in five high schools, namely, Oakwood, Norwood, Havelock, Richmond Hill, and Sudbury. He was principal of four of these schools, including twenty-six years as principal of Norwood High School. He also taught for six years in a private school at Peterborough, chiefly matriculation work and Latin for Bachelor of Arts degrees. In addition he was for two years teaching at Iona, Oxford county—making a total of fifty-two years' teaching experience in all.

Mr. Davidson was for eighteen years an associate examiner for the Education Department, being one of the first chairmen of the sections in 1889, when the examining board was instituted.

Among the many of his pupils who have made a success professionally, three are well-known in Peterborough County, in the persons of Principal H. R. H. Kenner of Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Vocational School; Professor Ford of Toronto University; and Dr. H. B. Anderson, of the Board of Governors of Toronto University, representing the medical profession. The last two are graduates of Norwood High School.

Service Of Song Held At St. Paul's Church

A special service of song, "Mid Cloud and Sunshine," featured the evening service in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church on Sunday. Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr selected the life of the English poet, William Cowper, and around the narration of his span of 69 years wound an interesting outline of the vicissitudes through which this religious genius passed.

Dividing his theme into five periods, Dr. Barr dealt with the early life of the poet until his death. (When six years old Cowper's mother died.) The periods of his earthly sojourn were classed as follows: 'Mid Cloud and Sunshine, Mother's Influence, Redemption in Christ, A Hymn of Stuff, and lastly, "Life's Golden Sunset, Dr. Barr giving the subject a present day application.

Cowper's Hymns Sung.

The choir sang two hymn-anthems, "Hark, My Soul" and "O For a Closer Walk," the words by the poet; while three hymns from his pen were sung by the congregation, "The Spirit Breathes," "There is a Fountain," and "Sometimes a Light."

Ambulance Is Sent "Wild Goose" Chase

Police are anxious to discover the identity of a persons who sent in a false alarm call for Bellegheim's ambulance yesterday afternoon. An unknown caller telephoned the information that a man was badly injured at the C.P.R. station, but when the ambulance arrived after a run at break-neck speed through the main streets, no injured man was to be found.

The authorities point out that false alarm calls for ambulance are just as serious as false calls to the fire department since the lives of pedestrians and the ambulance drivers are endangered in the fast runs necessary. The culprit will be dealt with severely in the Magistrate's Court if caught.

LONG SERVICE IS RECOGNIZED

35 YEARS IN SERVICE

HASTINGS, May 27 (Examiner Correspondence)—In recognition of his thirty-five years of faithful and efficient service as village postmaster, Walter M. Fowlds received a Jubilee Medal from Their Majesties. The medal which arrived on Thursday was forwarded on to Mr. Fowlds from the post office department at Ottawa along with the message from Buckingham Palace, and a letter from the department, congratulating Mr. Fowlds on receiving the medal and for his long period of faithful service as postmaster. Mr. Fowlds has been the recipient of numerous gifts in appreciation of the work he has done in connection with the many offices he has filled in municipal, business and fraternal societies, but none he will treasure like the Jubilee Medal.

Mr. Fowlds succeeded his father the late Henry M. Powids in 1900 as postmaster. The latter had been postmaster since the first office was opened in Hastings.

for by the King, to whom he rendered an account of his mission.

"When announcing his arrival to Buckingham Palace, Wester Wemyas had done the same to the Premier. He spent all that afternoon awaiting a summons but in vain. He deemed it beyond the bounds of reason the Premier should not desire to know what had passed in so momentous an occasion.

"His astonishment turned into amazement when the following day, attending a meeting of the War Cabinet, instead of receiving the congratulations he expected, he met black looks and an icy reception.

"It was only on leaving the Cabinet he was able to discover the key to the enigma. The Premier had apparently planned a spectacular announcement of the Armistice, which he had hoped to make at Guild Hall banquet Nov. 9. Balked of this by the Armistice not yet being signed, he projected doing so in the House of Commons on the afternoon of Nov. 11, such news meanwhile being kept secret.

"This news proved impossible after Wester Wemyss had telephoned to the King who announced the happy tidings and the Armistice accordingly was made public. The Premier's official statement to the Commons accordingly fell flat. Hence his almost unconcealed fury."

Amazed at Story.

When this was drawn to the attention of Lloyd George, he said: "No one who takes the trouble to look into the facts of that fateful day would reprint this preposterous story. The Armistice was signed at 5 a.m. and everyone throughout the world knew of it as soon as they woke up. The suggestion that I meant to keep back the news from the public to make a statement at 3 o'clock in the House of Commons is so silly I am amazed any responsible paper should publish it."

Apropos of War Honors, Lady Wester Wemyss', biography asserts the late Lord Long, First Lord of the Admiralty, told Wester Wemyss he would receive a Viscountcy and a money grant.

"He told Western Wemyss he saw a paper with the war honors list. Haig and Beatty were created Earls and Jellicoe a Viscount. The chiefs of the army and the air service, generals and admirals down to the secretary of the war cabinet all received the thanks of the nation—all with one exception only. Alone among the war leaders he was neither thanked, honored, nor rewarded.

"To this there could be only one reply. Within an hour he had given it."

The biography acknowledges, however, that Wester Wemyss was persuaded to withdraw his resignation and later he was made an Admiral of the fleet. He was offered a peerage "which he was loth to accept."

FRANCE TO HOLD GOLD STANDARD

Government's Life Shaken on the Defence of the Franc.

SEEK WIDE POWERS.

PARIS, May 27. — (AP) — The French cabinet today offered battle for the gold standard, announcing the government's life would be staked on the defence of the franc. A demand by Premier Pierre-Etienne Flanding for "full powers" was approved and the council of ministers is expected formally to adopt his program tomorrow.

Heavy Drain on Banks

The danger to the franc through the treasury's inability to borrow was explained by Louis Germain-Martin, minister of finance, who told the cabine t of the drain of gold which bankers estimated would reach one billion francs ($65,800,000) by Friday or Saturday.

The premier's plan is to revive public confidence by drastic cuts in expenses and thus induce the public to renew the short term bonds, saying that otherwise the government soon might be unable to meet payments.

It was learned the cabinet reached an agreement by which the government would make economies totalling eight billion francs through decrees giving the cabinet "very wide powers" in both economic and financial matters.

Red Cross Officers Appreciate Assistance

In the 5-month period that the Red Cross Hostel was operated here during last winter, 3038 meals were provided and lodging given to 1315 unemployed transients.

According to Mrs. Robert Harstone, president of Peterborough Red Cross Society, the Hostel was generously supported in various directions. She wished to acknowledge with especial gratitude the loan of a Beatty Washing Machine through the courtesy of Henry S. Morton, local manager for that company; and also referred appreciatively to the generous services given by Fanning's Steam Laundry who undertook to wash blankets; the Thursday Club for donations of socks for the men, and Orono Fruit Farms for the gift of apples.

It was stated by Miss M. H. Rush, convenor of the committee, that at Christmas-tide all the inmates at the hostel were given a box of food, and a pair of socks. Many of the men who went through the hostel last season were ex-servicemen.

NEW CONTACT IS BEING SOUGHT

Previously 16-year-old Jean Comfort, daughter of A. B. Comfort, Tacoma business man, had disclosed she saw three men in a tan sedan watching the school for four or five days. However, she did not see the car the day George disappeared.

Miss Lucille Berg, teacher of George Weyerhaeuser, disliked returning to teacn ner class to-day with her little pupil missing. "It will be dreadful," she said.

In response to directions for The Egoist,' the Weyerhaeusers inserted two notes in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. The first read: "Expect to be ready to come Monday Answer. Percy Minnie." This was taken to mean the ransom would be ready or an intermediary would meet the kidnapper or kidnappers.

Then the second asking for a new method of communication was inserted.

One police official surmised the hideout of the abductors was at least 100 miles away, because the ransom note was not mailed until six hours after the lad disappeared, allowing time to drive to some isolated spot in the mountainous, wooded sections of this area and then return.

Part of the kidnap note was reported by reliable sources to read: "A slip will mean a slip; we don't want to hurt anyone."

Possibility the kidnapping might have a connection with the unsolved Bremerton mass murders of March 30, 1934, was suggested to one high official. Six persons were found brutally slain in the Frank Fleider home at Erland's Point.

"If these cold-blooded killers were in desperate financial shape they would not stop at anything," the official said. "They are a tough lot, of course, and a kidnapping after six murders would mean little to them."

WASHINGTON, May 27. (AP).—J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal experts now centring attention on the $200,000 ransom demand for little George Weyerhaeuser at Tacoma, Wash., says a wave of kidnap threats and extortion letters by United States juveniles has become a "serious federal problem."

In 33 cases in the last three years in which justice department agents have closed in on some suspect lured by a decoy ransom package, they have found ,youngsters under 21 years."

"Our men have arrested 37 boys and five girls not old enough to vote as they traced extortion notes that threatened death and demand from $10 to $250,000," Hoover said.

In some instances, he added, "the notes were traced back to "sons, daughters, or other members" of the household to which the notes were addressed."

Lakefield Woman Gets Silver Medal

LAKEFIELD, May 27.—(Examiner Correspondence).—Miss Gertrude Finnemore, daughter of Dr. C. W. Finnemore, V.S., of the village has been decorated with one of the King's Jubilee medals as a recognition of her valuable service as a Red Cross nurse in one of the most isolated Red Cross hospitals in Northern Ontario, situated at Antikokan. Miss Finnemore's wide circle of friends will be well pleased to learn of this well deserved recognition of her splendid services.

Hastings Defeats Norwood 25 To 20

HASTINGS, May 27 (Examiner Correspondence).—In the weirdest and wildest game of baseball ever played in Hastings, the local Juniors defeated Norwood, 25 to 20, on Saturday afternoon at "Shibe" Park. If the local youngsters want the public support they will have to tighten up plenty.

The first half of the game the boys played a snappy brand of ball, both pitchers were hooking them over nicely. But when Hastings went to bat in their half of the fifth the balloon went up and they crossed the plate nine times only to have Norwood do the same in the sixth. Boyle struck out six and allowed six hits, but was wilder than a prairie bronco, walking 13, up until midway through the sixth when "Casey" Radford took up the mound duties for the winners, he was also quite generous with six walks and was touched for three hits; they each had six strike-outs.

Puffer had a nice breaking curve working up until he tired in the fifth and was derricked in favor of "Lefty" McCoy, who in the two innings he pitched walked seven men.

Weddings

WHITE—McRAE

CAMPBELLFORD, May 27. (Examiner Correspondence).—A quiet wedding was solemnized on Saturday evening, May 25 at 7.30 o'clock at the United Church parsonage, when Miss Annie McRae, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McRae of Dundee, Scotland, became the bride of George A. White, son of Mr. and Mrs. John White of Campbellford. Rev. Harold B. Neal performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Miss Evelyn Oliver, while A. McBride of Toronto supported the groom. After a brief honeymoon the young couple will take uv residence in Campbellford.

REDDEN—LUCAS

SELWYN, May 27 (Examiner Correspondence) — A very pretty wedding was held on Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Nixon, Selwyn, when their oldest daughter Dorcas Luella was united in marriage to Rufus Edward Redden, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Redden of Trent River. The bride entered the drawing room on the arm of her father and took her place beneath an arch of evergreens. The wedding march was played very beautifully by Mrs. Mabel Collins of Peterborough. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. George Chambers of the Pentecostal Tabernacle of Peterborough.

Miss Maizie Collins of Peterborough was bridesmaid and Mr. Bruce Aikens of Peterborough assisted the groom. The bride looked very pretty in a gown of sand crepe dechine with matching accessories and carried a bouquet of talisman roses. After the ceremony and during the signing of the register Miss Collins played several selections on the piano. After several photos were taken on the lawn, a sumptuous buffet luncheon was served to about forty guests. The happy couple left by motor mid showers of confetti for Toronto where they will spend a short honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Redden will return the first of the week and will reside on the groom's farm at Trent River.

ready. The four bills now in the House provide for amending the criminal code, the livestock and livestock products act, the industrial disputes investigation act, and the weights and measures act.

Probabilities are that the remainder of the session will be busy, particularly if it is the intenton, as suggested, to try and finish up by the end of next month.

Interest continues to centre on the health of Prime Minister R. B. Bennett who has now completed his first week in harness after returning from the jubilee celebrations. Mr Bennett has announced that he will test out his strength. On the result of that test will depend his future course in respect to leadership of the Government party.

At the conclusion of his first week, Mr. Bennett appeared well and strong. Thus far he has followed his ordinary routine excepting that he does not work in the evenings.

Lakefield Guild Holds Afternoon Tea

LAKEFIELD, May 27 (Examiner Correspondence). — On Wednesday afternoon the Chancel Guild of St. John's Church were hostesses at a delightful afternoon tea in the Parish Hall in honor of Mrs. E. S. Kelsey, who is leaving next week for Fort Colborne, where she will reside. Mrs. Langley presided at the tea table which was covered with an embroidered cloth and centered with a bowl of pretty Spring flowers.

The members of the Guild and a few of Mrs. Kelsey's intimate friends were present and thoroughly enjoyed the social afternoon. Tea was passed by members of the Guild.

After the serving of tea the president, Mrs. Aylmer Langley, presented Mrs. Kelsey with a cup and saucer as a memento of St. John's Guild, and also the bouquet of flowers, narcissus and tulips.

Mrs. Kelsey was deeply touched at the remembrance and its accompanying good wishes and made a suitable reply, assuring all present of the happy memories of the Guild which she will take with her to her new home. Mrs. Kelsey has been a valued member of the Guild for some years and deep regret was expressed at her approaching departure.

A rather curious coincidence occurred during the afternoon in the presence of Mrs. James Millar, whose parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. James Jory, were the first bride and groom to be married in the Old Church (now the Parish Hall); a week later the late Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Atwood were married. Two of their daughters were also present at the tea. It made a link between the past and the present.

Institute Sponsors Successful Social

LAKEFIELD, May 27 (Examiner Correspondence)— Mrs. D. E. Kingdon loaned her house to the Woman's Institute for a social evening on Wednesday in honor of Mrs. E. S. Kelsey, who leaves shortly to take up residence in Port Colborne. Mrs. Kelsey has been the pianist of the Woman's Institute for the past two years and also convenor of the standing committee on health.

The evening was informal and very pleasant, with a clever magazine contest which was prepared by the ladies who worked in couples. Advertisements, jokes, chit chat, comments on the writers, a serial story, editorials, etc., which when read created much amusement, and was greeted with hearty applause.

The magazine, neatly bound, was presented to Mrs. Kelsey as a souvenir of the Institute and its members. Mrs. White, the president, made a graceful little speech of appreciation of Mrs. Kelsey's services as a member and worker in the Institute, and presented her with a beautiful box of stationery. Mrs. Kelsey made a fitting reply, assuring her friends of her interest in their future undertakings and in the members themselves.

The evening broke up with the interchange of best wishes and felicitations to the departing member. Refreshments were served by a competent committee led by Mrs. Lake.

LAKEFIELD POSTMASTER RECEIVES JUBILEE MEDAL

LAKEFIELD, May 27 (Examiner Correspondence).—W. H. Casement was the recipient of a Silver Jubilee medal from His Majesty King George last week. Charles Lacheur, postmaster of Peterborough, received from E. J. Underwood, Esq., chief superintendent of post service, Ottawa, the King's Jubilee medal for presentation to W. H. Casement, postmaster at Lakefield and made the presentation very graciously.

Accompanying the medal was a document headed with the Royal Arms and dated at Buckingham Palace: "By command of His Majesty the King the accompanying medal is forwarded to Mr. W. H. Casement. To be worn in commemoration of Their Majesties Silver Jubilee, May 6th, 1935."

Mr. Casement celebrates this year the diamond jubilee of his appointment as a postmaster, a fact marked by his fellow townsmen with the presentation of a framed photograph, and a framed illuminated address. This record of service is unique in all Canada. Mr. Lacheur also received a Jubilee medal at the same time.

Bank Personality

During eighty years in business a bank, like a person, develops a definite personality. This personality is based on the kind of men who develop the bank, plus its history, its reputation and its principles.

You will find in The Bank of Toronto a personality based on eighty years association with the best of Canada's development. Coupled with this eighty years is a directorate of men, worthy of the best traditions of the past and in thorough sympathy with the needs of the present.

Scotia Triplets Sends Greetings To Dionnes

NEW GLASGOW, N.S.—Though busy with their own first birthday celebration, Mary, William and Herbie Chisholm took time out to-day to watch approvingly as nurses drafted a telegram of "Greetings and best wishes" to the Dionne quintuplets on their birthday. "May they see many more," said the wire sent on behalf of New Glasgow's triplets, born, like the more famous Ontario youngsters, just a year ago to-day. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. William D. Chisholm.

'Mail Order' Divorces Thrown Out Of Court

LOS ANGELES. — Threatened with prosecution for bigamy, California residents who obtained marital freedom through the convenient medium of Mexican "mail order" divorces and then remarried, to-day had one thought—a lawyer. Superior Judge Thomas P. White tossed a legal wrench into the "mail order" divorce mill below the border and a score into the lives of its clients in a startling decree yesterday. He found Dow L. Harlow, Los Angeles oil man, guilty of bigamy for remarrying after having obtained a Mexican divorce.

Kingston Jail Fugitive Concerned In Robbery

SARNIA, Ont.—Definite identification of one of the men concerned in the attempted robbery of George F. Kingston here Sunday night as Archibald Hyatt, fugitive from Kingston jail, was revealed to-day by Chief Constable W. J. Lannin. Chief Lannin stated three local persons had identified pictures of Hyatt as the man who accosted Kingston at the point of a gun but fled when the intended robbery victim refused to hand over $150 he had in his possession. It is believed an accomplice who stood beside the armed man was Bernard Leavey, also wanted as a jail fugitive.

RAILWAY BOARD OPENS ENQUIRY OF C.N.R. BRANCH

AT COURT HOUSE.

Business Improvement Urged as Reason For Suspending Decision.

The fate of the Peterborough-Port Hope branch of the Canadian National Railways, the construction of which was begun in 1846, was under consideration by the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada at the Court House this morning.

Abandonment of this old service, so long an integral factor in the transportation facilities of Peterborough, Millbrook and Port Hope, and the townships of North and South Monaghan, Cavan and Hope, is proposed in an application by the administrators of the National Railways as an economy measure on the ground that during the last five years the branch has suffered annual operating losses averaging around $15,000, and that persistent truck competition affords little hope for improvement in the future volume of passenger and freight traffic.

CONTINUE TRIP IN CAR.

GLASGOW, May 28 (A.P.).—Five men were arrested to-day for waving Red flags and shouting, "Down with Royalty," as the open carriage of the Duke and Duchess of Kent passed through the streets.

The Duke and Duchess were en route from the railway station to open the Victoria Infirmary in Northern Glasgow.

Two horses drawing the royal carriage took fright at the shouts and the flashing of the crimson banners and nearly ran into a canopy at the entrance to the Infirmary.

The animals continued to be so restive that the couple were forced to continue their journey in a police car

Johnson Predicts Sweatshop Return

Many Concerns Will Cut Wages Former Head of NRA Declares.

"JUST RAISE HELL."

NEW YORK, May 28.—(AP)—General Hugh S. Johnson predicted today a return of sweatshops and child labor in the United States was "entirely likely" because of the supreme court's overthrow of NRA codes.

"Many concerns will cut wages today," said the former NRA administrator. "I don't know that the decision will result in the loss of all the benefits of the NRA, but there is nothing to prevent it."

The decision, he declared, added enough fuel to the feelings aroused by "Long, Coughlin, Townsend and others like them to just raise hell."

Johnson said one solution would be to write into the law a complete code for every industry. This move, he explained, would meet the court's objection to the delegation of power by congress to the president to determine standards of "fair trade."

FAIR WAGE BILL IS INTRODUCED

STRICTER PROVISIONS.

OTTAWA, May 28 (C.P.)—A new bill dealing with fair wages and hours of labor in relation to public works and contracts was introduced in the House of Commons to-day by Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice.

The measure is designed to carry out recommendations of the Price Spreads Commission.

It repeals the former act which became effective in 1890 and substitutes stricter and wider provisions. Under it fair wages will have to be paid and the eight-hour day and the 44-hour week will be obligatory on all work carried on for the government under contract or with Government assistance by way of subsidy or grant.

QUINTUPLETS AWAKE EARLY ON BIRTHDAY

BROADCAST THIS EVENING.

CALLANDER, Ont., May 28.—(CP)—One year ago today from her bed of childbirth Mrs. Oliva Dionne turned a wan, frightened face to the midwife who stood beside her and asked weakly: :

"Were they—triplets "

"Yes, Elzire, triplets—and two more."

That was the drama of the ramshackle farmhouse on the morning of May 28, 1934, that the Ontario government and, by their friendly interest, the people of the world remembered today with ceremonies, gifts and best wishes—the first birthday of the Dionne quintuplets.

The "triplets and two more," — premature, sickly infants then, vigorous, healthy babies now—awoke this morning an hour after their second year of life had started. They were born between 4.30 and 5 o'clock in the morning and it was 6 o'clock today when their cries brought the nurses with their eye-opener of orange juice.

It was to be like that all day for the youngsters—rigid adherence to their diet and hours of sleep and play. Yvonne was the only one who had a taste of birthday cake. She stole a march on Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie recently when she slapped both hands into a cake placed before her while a photograph was being taken and then licked up the icing.

Today she and her sisters will have orange juice, cod liver oil, milk, strained vegetables, coddled eggs and all the other things that make quintuplets strong and healthy. They may see beautifully iced birthday cakes but they will be kept out of reach of eager little hands.

BAY OF QUINTE CONFERENCE HAS 400 ATTENDING

Conference Opened This Afternoon in St. Andrew's United Church.

COMMEMORATION SERVICE.

Public Especially Invited to Attend Special Service This Evening.

Delegates, both lay and cleric, poured into the city in ever-increasing numbers early this afternoon as the hour for the opening of the Eleventh Annual Boy of Quinte Conference at picturesque St. Andrew's United Church approached. It is to be the first return of the conference to this city since the inaugural Bay of Quinte Conference, uniting for the first time the Methodists, Presbyterians and Baptists in this region who subscribed to union, was held here ten years ago.

The advance-guard of the delegates reached the city last night. The group included about twenty-five members of the Settlement and Religious Education committees which met in preliminary conference during the evening. The committees sat again this morning and, at subsequent meetings, will prepare their findings for presentation to the conference later in the week.

By noon to-day, fifty additional delegates had arrived and registered at St. Andrew's Church, and a total of about four hundred was expected before 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The delegates are being billeted in private homes about the city.

The conference opened officially at 4 p.m. this afternoon, with President the Rev. George C. McQuade of Oshawa in the chair. The president conducted worship and administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Rev. Harry Pawson preached.

Commemoration Service

The public has been invited particularly to partake in the service commemorating the tenth anniversary of the United Church of Canada this evening. Rev. A. J. Wilson of Napanee and Rev. W. P. Woodger of Cobourg will address the

Judgment Reserved MacTemple Appeals

TORONTO, May 28 (C. P.). — Judgment was reserved to-day by the Ontario Court of Appeal in the appeal of Frank MacTemple and his son, Fred, both of St. Thomas, against their conviction of murdering Police Constable Colin C. McGregor at St. Thomas on May 7, 1934. The father and his 21-year-old son are scheduled to be hanged June 27.

Before reserving judgment the court heard the affadavit of Fred MacTemple concerning the shooting affray at the MacTemple home in St. Thomas.

Almost Average Babies

Dionne Quintuplets Almost As Heavy And As Tall As The Average Girl Baby Who Develops Normally.

CALLANDER, Ont., May 28 (CP). The Dionne quintuplets, born two months prematurely and averaging only 2.45 pounds in weight, then chose their first birthday to reveal they are almost as heavy and tall as the average girl-baby who starts life at 7.6 pounds and develops normally in her first year.

Average Weight 16.9 Pounds

Their average weight to-day is 16.9 pounds. Physicians say a normal girl should weigh 19.5 pounds on her first birthday. The Dionnes, therefore, are only 2.6 pounds less than the mark set for a girl born singly with normal weight and developing normally in the first year.

A comparison of their heights with the "averaging girl" reveals the same story. The average is 20.5 inches in height at birth. The quints were not measured until they were months old but they were far from the 20-inch mark when they sent up their first faint cries in the Dionne farmhouse.

27.3 Inches High

The average girl increases from 20.5 inches to 28.2 inches in the first year. The Dionnes averaged 27.3 inches to-day, nine-tenths of an inches less than the average.

If records were kept of premature children the Dionnes probably would compare even more favorably. Of course none are

Roosevelt Appeals To Business World To Observe Rules

Administration Abandons All Attempts To Enforce NRA Following Adverse Judgment Handed Down By United States Supreme Court.

AIDES ARE CALLED TO DEVISE FIRM BASIS TO REBUILD THE WRECKED RECOVERY ACT.

731 Codes Are Discarded By Court's Ruling But Business World Is Urged To Observe Rules Voluntary By President Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, May 28 (A.P.). — Amid the confusion of a capital figuratively strewn with the wreckage of the new deal's No. 1 experiment, the Roosevelt administration abandoned all attempts to enforce NRA, appealed to the business world to observe its rules voluntarily, and then sought to-day in a series of hurried conferences to chart the future.

Beyond Donald R. Richberg's announcement after a conference with President Roosevelt that compulsory enforcement of the 731 codes was in the discard and his plea to industry, there was no immediate hint as to what the United States Government may do as a result of the unanimous Supreme Court decision scrapping NRA.

May Follow a Number of Courses.

Speculation ranged through a bewildering maze. Tentatively and without assurance, men on Capitol Hill and in the adminstration appeared to be canvassing the advisability of resorting to one or more of these steps:

1—A drive for new legislation, perhaps applying the principles of minimum wages, maximum hours, collective bargaining, and the ban on child labor to purely interstate commerce. This might stretch the session of Congress into August or beyond.

2—An attempt to get States to pass supplementary laws, applying the principles to intra-state business.

3—An effort to amend the constitution to make NRA principles

WELCOME RAIN BRINGS RELIEF PARCHED CROPS

STRAWBERRIES WILTING.

Insufficient Rainfall in Niagara District—Hay Behind Time.

TORONTO, May 28. — (CP)—Badly-needed rain to-day brought welcome relief to parched farmers' crops in Southern Ontario after a night of intermittent showers.

Niagara district farmers, however, stated the rainfall was insufficient and with arrival of warmer weather a real good downfall was needed to speed up crops. Strawberries and other early crops are most in need of moisture.

At Galt a light drizzle continued to-day, with crops and scorched lawns reviving under the showers. The first rain since May 10 fell in Stratford with .32 of an inch materially aiding crops.

Hay Behind Time.

In the Kitchener district the rain assisted the hay which, due to previous dry weather, is two weeks behind the usual development. At Guelph last night's series of showers were the first drops of rain in several weeks.

The corn crop was especially benefitted in Kent county, reported District Agricultural Representative J. A. Garner at Chatham. The rainfall will also help prepare the land for bean planting and sugar beets.

Father Bites Ear Off His Daughter's Suitor

ROCHESTER, N.Y., May 28. (CP) In the matter of an ear for an ear, to suit Scripture to the case, Michael Mazza, 46, was an ear up today on Joseph Dagostina, 16.

Mazzas' objections to his daughter staying out late took sudden action when he found her talking with Joseph on a street corner. After an argument with the young man, Mazza bit off a good portion of Josephs right ear.

Joseph went to the Genesee Hospital where surgeons sewed it back on in an attempt to save it.

Mazza was arrested on a charge of maiming.

BAD FOREST FIRE IN HALIBURTON UNDER CONTROL

Old Weather Man Turns on Tap and Banishes Dread Forest Fires.

MANY HOMES BURNED.

30 Homes Are Reported in Ashes in Beautiful Matapedia District.

(By the Canadian Press)

TORONTO, May 28.—Old man weather turned on the tap last night all over Ontario and many parts of Quebec and it seemed today he had effectively banished the dread summer scourge, fire, from his hunting grounds in Canada's woodlands. Without the aid of the weather, flames in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick had been controlled.

Fires raging yesterday in various Quebec districts had left a trail of suffering behind them. In beautiful Matapedia Valley, 30 homes were reported in ashes; at Lejeune, Temiscouata County, 20 more had been levelled and near Chicoutimi, 15 and a schoolhouse destroyed. Three houses were caught in the path of slash fires at Temiskaming and burned to the ground. Several other localities in Quebec reported fires yesterday.

In Ontario, flames ceased to endanger the Dionne quintuplets at their little hospital in Callander and the world breathed easier as it watched the tots celebrate their first birthday. Elsewhere in the province considerable fear was aroused.

Near Haliburton, more than 200 men battled to save the little village of West Guilford, eight miles north before rain checked the danger. There was anxiety for the life of James Parson, a trapper in that district. Along the Ottawa River, 3300 men worked all day yesterday to prevent rapid spreading of fire north of Pembroke and at Chenneville, in Papineau county.

WINNERS OF TRAVELLING BAGS TO BE ANNOUNCED THIS WEEK

Little Better Than Two Weeks Remain to Boost Your Candidates.

INTEREST IS KEEN

Another Saturday night is over and the Travel Club office is snowed under with votes that have to be counted and recorded. It will be a few days yet before the winners of the travelling bags will be announced. The completion of the campaign is rapidly drawing near, just a little better than two weeks remaining for candidates and friends to rally votes for the grand free holiday trips. Those who are bent on winning the Bermuda tours are steadily striving to increase their vote totals, and the great loyalty on the part of their conscientous friends is playing an important role in the ever-interesting work of raising votes and ballots. The keen interest of voters can only be appreciated by those who are actively campaigning for the tours and the Travel Club staff, who see the hundreds of voters as they call at the Travel Club office to cast their votes and subscriptions for their chosen members. Last Saturday night hundreds swarmed around the contest ballot box to deposit their free vote coupons, while many others called to pay their new or renewal subscriptions in favor of the candidates of their choice.

OTTAWA, May 28. — Butter was firm, but cheese slow on United Kingdom markets this week, according to cabled advice received by the Department of Agriculture. Quotations:

Butter—New Zealand, 81 to 82 shillings per cwt. (17.86 to 18.08 cents per lb.); Australian, 78 to 81 shillings per cwt. (17.20 to 17.86 cents per lb.).

Cheese—New Zealand, 43 to 44 shillings per cwt. (9.48 to 9.70 cents per lb.); Canadian, 58 to 62 shillings per cwt. (12.78 to 13.77 cents per lb.).

CHICAGO WHEAT

Distributed by the announcement that the United States Supreme Court had invalidated the farm mortgage moratorium, grain prices weakened late yesterday, but were rallying at the last.

Selling flurries that resulted largely from liquidation of May delivery contracts carried corn down about 2 cents at one stage, and dropped May wheat and all oats futures to new low price records for the season. Mill buying of wheat helped to induce subsequent recoveries of values.

Wheat closed irregular, ¼c lower to ½c higher than Saturday's finish, July 87⅝c to 87½c, corn unchanged to 1¼c down, July 77¾c to 77¾c to 77⅝c; oats, ¼c to ⅝c off, and provisions varying from 15c setback to a rise of 12c.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, May 28 (C.P.) — Choice calves dropped 50 cents cwt. in afternoon trade on the Toronto Livestock Market to-day. Cattle trade was very slow and hogs were still unsettled. The sheep and lamb division was steady.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle, 1,430; calves, 960; hogs, 1,080; sheep and lambs, 1,130.

Cattle moved slowly and only 600 head were sold up to late afternoon. Weighty steers were still unsettled with bids lower. A few good and choice butchers sold at $6 to $6.50. Good butcher cows went at $4.50 to $5, with plain downwards at $3. Good butcher bulls moved at $3.85 to $4.50. Fed calves were slow at $7 to $7.75 for choice, with medium downwards to $5.50. There were no sales on stockers.

With a 50-cent price drop choice calves sold generally at $6 to $6.50 with a few tops at $7. Common to medium calves sold at $3.50 to $5.75.

The hog market was still unsettled, with no prices established.

Spring lambs were firm at $10 cwt. for choice and $7 to $8 for common. A shipment of Western feed lot lambs was still unsold. Sheep were steady at $1 to $3 cwt, up to $3.50.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, May 28.— The backwash from a week-end holiday seeped into trading on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday and at the close values had slumped to register net losses of 2⅛ to 2¾ cents.

Lack of demand from overseas purchasers of Canadian wheat and a somewhat unlooked-for downturn in Southern markets contributed to the decline. Bottom levels were touched in the final minutes of trading. May closed out at 83¾c and July at 84⅝c.

Export trade was a minus quantity. There were reports of some worked on the break, but it was not of sufficient volume to make any impression on the price structure, and shippers were unwilling to put a figure on the day's sales.

Weakness was traced to declines in outside markets on Friday and Saturday when the Winnipeg Exchange was on holiday. Buyers in the pit were conspicuous by their absence and trading throughout was quiet. Liverpool finished 3¼c to ¾c higher. Buenos Aires was unchanged to ⅛c lower.

World wheat shipments reached their peak last week when 15,500,000 bushels of wheat and flour were cleared. North America's share of the movement was placed at 4,000,000 bushels. Argentine and Australia divided 7,500,000 bushels between them.

Interest in cash wheat and coarse grains was dull and without feature.

Futures:

TACOMA, Wash., May 28 (AP)—Secret search for kidnappers of 9-year-old George Weyerhaeuser reached across the Canadian boundary to-day with "remnants of the Alvin Karpis and Machine Gun Kelly gangs" as possible suspects.

In one of the few partially disclosed moves in the hunt for the gang that demanded $200,000 ransom for the return of the lumber fortune heir, two Tacoma detectives hurried to Vancouver, B.C.

Two Gangs Joined

Vancouver police said the detectives believed the kidnappings were effected by members of the two gangs who had banded together. British Columbia officers refused to disclose the identity of the Tacoma detectives.

The officers went north in response to a woman's report of seeing a boy who resembled the kid-

145 Policewomen Set Out In New Uniforms

NEW YORK, May 28 (C.P.). — The police line-up, ordinarily a parade of hardened criminals, was turned into a fashion show when New York's 145 policewomen stepped forth in their new uniforms.

Blue jackets with brass buttons, blue skirts, blue shirts and black ties, beige stockings, black flat-heeled shoes and blue overseas caps with the city's insignia on them greeted the critical eyes of high officials.

FIRE DESTROYED WEIR BUILDINGS

Henry Weir, Otonabee, Suffers Loss of Barns and House.

ORIGIN IS UNKNOWN

KEENE, May 28.—(Examiner Correspondent). — Henry Weir, two miles north of Keene, on the Sixth line, will rebuild his farm home and outbuildings which were destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon, it was reported to-day. The loss, amounting to more than $5,000, was partially covered by insurance.

The origin of the fire is unknown. Mr. and Mrs. Weir were in Peterborough, but their son and daughter, Max and Agnes, were on the premises when flames were noticed coming from the driving-shed at the rear of the dwelling. Quickly the blaze spread to the main part of the house and to the barn and woodshed, fanned by a strong wind.

A general word-of-mouth alarm brought aid from all directions, but a few pieces of furniture from the house and one of the machines from the driving-shed was all that could be saved. The loss included one pig, grain in the barn, farm machinery and a store of wood in the wood-shed, in addition to the structures themselves.

Several times the roof of a dwelling across the road caught fire, but volunteer firemen with buckets saved the buildings. The threatened farm was that of Harold Weir, brother of Henry Weir.

RAILWAY VOTE OF $15,000,000 PASSES HOUSE

Stiff Opposition to Vote Expressed in Several Parts of the Commons.

NOT ENOUGH ON REPAIRS.

Raiway Equipment Concerns Are Getting Bulk of Vote Members Told.

OTTAWA, May 28. (CP).—Consideration and approval in the Senate is all that remains to-day in the way of a start on the Federal Government's $33,000,000 work-providing public works scheme. After seven solid days of battling the bill passed the House of Commons last night. It survived the most strenuous opposition offered by Liberals to any government measure so far this session.

The money will be spent in a variety of ways, including public buildings, national park developments, a geological survey with an eye to gold discoveries, locomotives and cars for Canadian railway companies, and a tunnel at Toronto.

Railway Clauses

The railway equipment clauses of the bill provoked lengthy discussion yesterday. The plan is to guarantee securities of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railway companies the proceeds of which will be used to buy new equipment. The amount of the guarantee is limited to $15,000,000 of which the Canadian National share is $8,000,000 while the Canadian Pacific may spend $7,000,000.

Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals, told the House $4,000,000 of the $15,000,000 would be expended on repairs and conversions in the shops owned by the railways themselves while the balance would be spent on new equipment in the plants of railway equipment concerns.

Opposition members contended a larger proportion should be spent in the railway shops, but the minister said the railways themselves had made the allotment and $4,000,000 was all they felt they could economically spend on repairs. The railways, he said, did not want to go into the business of manufacturing rolling stock. They preferred the equipment companies, already equipped to carry on the work, be maintained in a sound position.

The railways, Dr. Manion said, will not be forced to buy new equipment, "but frankly I think

Sayings of One Year Ago Are Recalled

CALLANDER, Ont., May 28 (A.P.). — To-day's observance of the Dionne quintuplets' first birthday anniversary has revived some "quintuplet quotes" of the past year, such as:

Oliva Dionne, father of the babies (the morning they were born): "I'm the kind of a man they ought to put in jail."

Elzire Dionne, the mother: "I won't have any more babies (or the Government."

Dr. A. R. Dafoe: "The story of the quintuplets is a modern fairy tale, with a medical flavor."

Mrs. Ben Labelle, midwife, when the babies were born: "They're triplets — and two more."

Mrs. Dionne (replying): "God help me to care for them all."

GRAF ZEPPELIN NOT IN TROUBLE

Staid Mistress of Airways is Returning to Her Home Port.

REPORTED CRIPPLED.

SEVILLE, May 28. —(AP)— The Graf Zeppelin with 16 passengers, staid mistress of the airways, soared serenely on her way to Fried-Richshafen today despite reports a crippled engine had forced her down on the Moroccan coast.

Airport officials here said the giant aircraft had been sighted last night flying over Gibraltar on her normal course to Germany. Earlier, they said, the Graf landed briefly at Larache, Morocco, to discharge mail.

A wireless message picked up at the final station when the dirigible was off Larache gave rise to reports she was in difficulty as a result of motor trouble. The message was said to have requested the Seville airport to make ready for a landing and also to have inquired as to the quantity of gasoline on hand. The airport, however, said it had received no such communication.

LABOR PROGRAM OF SOCIALIZING TEXTILE PLANTS

Proposes British Cotton Corporation to Control Entire Industry.

TRADES UNION SCHEME.

Suggests Compensation to Shareholders by Government Bond Issue.

LONDON, May 27 (CP Cable).—The general council of the Trades Union Congress to-day issued its scheme for the socialization of the British cotton industry.

Under the plan the industry would be controlled and operated by a British cotton corporation which from the appointed day would take over all business undertakings engaged in the spinning, manufacturing, finishing, packing and marketing of cotton goods and mixed fabrics.

The basis of compensation would be the reasonable net maintainable revenue of the undertakings concerned.

The form to be taken by this compensation might be that of terminable annuities, or of redeemable government bonds bearing interest paid out of the proceeds of the industry. In no case, however, would shareholders have any voting rights or rights of foreclosure. An arbitration tribunal would be established

HYDRO
Controls Your Pay Envelope

YOU are vitally interested in the success of Hydro, because, as a citizen of this municipality, you are a partner in this gigantic enterprise and because it means so much to you in personal income.

Cheap power has been a real magnet in attracting industry to this Province, with a consequent employment of thousands of workers and larger payrolls. In addition to this, the payrolls of Hydro and allied electrical trades swell the buying power of the citizens of this Province.

In Ontario's industrial development, therefore, Hydro influences your pay envelope, regardless of your occupation.

HYDRO
Lightens Your Daily Tasks

At the same time that it is creating wealth for the home, Hydro is saving work in the home. This month, for instance, your Hydro Shop or dealer is featuring fast-cooking Electric Ranges and the new Hydro Plan makes it easy to own and easy to pay for one of these new marvels of Electric Cooking.

nursery of the birthday celebration in other rooms of the Dafoe Hospital will be a germ-free microphone that will be placed there for seven minutes between 6 and 6.30 o'clock E.D.T. to-night.

Then, if they wish, the famous youngsters may gurgle their appreciation of all that has been done for them by an adoring world. Dr. A. R. Dafoe, their physician, says no effort will be made to have them laugh or cry—that the success of their radio debut will be left up to the babies themselves. Whether "no effort" precluded a tickle or two from the doctor or the nurses—the only persons who will be in the room—he did not say.

Solemn High Mass

The birthday celebrations started this morning with a solemn High Mass sung at Sacred Heart Church, Corbeil—the same church Oliva Dionne and his wife Elzire attended as youngsters and where they were married.

Nothing further has been planned for the day until the ceremonies in the early evening, with Dr. Dafoe, Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare; Dr. Fred Rutley, Ontario Director of the Red Cross, and members of the hospital are participating.

Judge J. A. Valin, North Bay, chairman of the board of guardians who watch over the young wards of the King, also will take part with others who have had a part in the care of the babies during the year.

Whether the parents would attend the ceremonies was doubtful. They bitterly resent the guardianship arrangement, claiming they should have full control of the babies' lives. They did not attend the opening of the quints' hospital last September.

ten who are enthused about their local members, and are striving to attain success for their favorites, not only by casting their own votes but by influencing their friends to vote for their choice. It is truly typical of the enthusiasm that Peterborough and district always shows in a campaign where personal likes and loyalty need expression. Nothing short of a demonstration will serve to give the winning ladies a royal send-off as they depart for the tour that will take them to New York City and thence to Bermuda where they will spend the best part of a week before embarking on the "Monarch of Bermuda" for the return journey that will spell finis to a perfect holiday.

The winners of the special prizes given to the ladies turning in the most subscription money from the beginning of the contest and up to May 25, will be published a little later in the week. The race for the travelling bags was such a close one that records are to be re-checked to make certain that no possible slip can occur in the announcement. This was one of the keenest contested offers ever witnessed by the Travel Club staff, and the race for the free trips is equally as close, and by the time the end is here, many changes are expected to take place. A number of the leaders are holding their positions by the smallest of margins, and judging by the determination of a number of the energetic candidates in the lower standing, a lively race is expected for the supreme laurels. BERMUDA, BERMUDA, BERMUDA seems to be the by-word these days, not only by members, but also by the supporters of the different candidates, who claim that "one of the top trips must come home." It requires such spirit of rivalry to make a competition keen, and the Travel Club has most certainly inspired the keenest of competition throughout the entire district.

"George Weyerhaeuser," scrawled in a boyish hand across the back of an envelope bearing a ransom note, verified terrible news to John Philip Weyerhaeuser Jr., multimillionaire timber baron of Tacoma, Wash., and his wife that their 9-year-old son had been kidnapped. The kidnappers demanded a ransom of $200,000. Fire Destroys Home Of Thomas Meraw

TWEED, Ont., May 28.—(Examiner Correspondence.)—Fire, caused by overheated stove pipes, completely destroyed the farm home and contents of Thomas Meraw on Monday afternoon, at a loss of approximately $3,000. A heavy wind at the time blew the fire away from the other buildings, saving these structures. Neighbors assisted in saving a very small quantity of furniture. The loss will be heavy as very little insurance was carried.

The village firemen were hurriedly called to a fire on Saturday morning at the home of M. McAvoy when a faulty chimney set the attic of his home on fire, following the cleaning of the pipes. Considerable damage was caused to the attic before the blaze was extinguished.

ROOSEVELT MAKES GENERAL APPEAL

legal. This, most observers felt, would be a comparatively long-term matter, plunging the whole NRA controversy into the 1936 campaign.

4—An attempt to obtain legislation enforcing some NRA principles by means of the Government's taxing power.

5.—An invitation to industry to join in voluntary agreements with the Government to observe certain practices.

6.—A move to get Congress to declare an emergency with a grant of temporary authority to the President to govern industry and labor relations during an interim adjustment. This, like all the other suggestions, was only mentioned tentatively, and there was no sign the President had decided on any definite steps.

What Will Industry Do?

While observers speculated on the possibility President Roosevelt might make an address to the people soon, the question of what industry will do now that NRA is virtually just another scrap of paper was uppermost.

That the New Deal is giving thought to it was shown in the statement Richberg issued last night after conferring with President Roosevelt, Attorney General Homer Cummings and Solicitor General Stanley Reed on the court's decision, which was handed down in the A. L. A. Schechter live poultry case.

"It would be most harmful to the general welfare," said the NRA head, "if unfair competitive practices, universally recognized as such, were to be revived and if the fair standards affecting labor were to be disregarded.

Strikes Are Feared

Leaders of the United Textile Workers said immediate strikes would result if code wages and hours were scrapped, while management and labor in the soft coal industry looked to a drive for special regulatory legislation to avert a general strike call that has been threatening for some time. President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, called his leaders to a conference to-day.

Industrial leaders gave no indication any immediate move would be made to modify labor or fair practice conditions. For instance, Alvin Macauley, president of the Automobile Manufacturers' Association, expressed the belief the court ruling would not bring any material change in his industry.

Hugh Johnson, the man who led in NRA's first gigantic drive, pictured the New Deal as in "black confusion at this moment," but insisted the principles could be written into a new law.

Compulsory 30-Hour Week

While observers watched in the expectation Attorney General Cummings would move to quash 400 NRA cases pending in various courts, Senator Black (D., Ala.), declared the solution of the problem confronting the New Deal was to adopt his compulsory 30-hour week law.

Senator Borah (R., Idaho), a student of the constitution, held the High Court decision definitely banned Federal attempts to regulate intra-state business. The High Court said Congress may not reach into a community to regulate wages and hours in a business which only indirectly affects interstate commerce.

"We are of the opinion," said the court, "that the attempt through the provisions of the code to fix the hours and wages of employees of defendants in their intra-state business was not a valid exercise of Federal power."

The other salient point in the decision was the ruling, Congress illegally delegated its powers to the President in authorizing him to approve and promulgate codes.

Obituary

FRANK DAVIDSON.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 28 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — News of the death of Frank Davidson, prominent Seymour Township farmer, which occurred on Monday, came as a great shock to his many friends in this district, pneumonia being the cause if death. Mr. Davidson was in his 71st year, and is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Douglas Redner of Prince Edward County and Miss Leitha at home, and one son Charles of Seymour.

MRS. R. T. GRAHAM.

TWEED, Ont., May 28.—(Examiner Correspondence.)—The funeral of the late Mrs. R. T. Graham, who pased away in her sixty-ninth year, at the home of her brother, R. T. Mrs. Coo, who is a native of Haliburton, Ont., will not be present, but will be represented by her attorney.

HELPING TO BUILD THE BRITISH 'ROUND-THE-WORLD HIGHWAY

In 1880, the Canadian Pacific Railway was organized for the purpose of completing a line to span the continent.

The Bank's directors, confident of the future of the Dominion, placed a generous share of the Bank's resources behind the project, which was completed in 1886 and formed the transcontinental link in the "British 'Round-the-World Highway." Subsequent events have shown that this undertaking contributed more than any other to the settlement and development of Western Canada.

The Bank promptly opened branches at Vancouver and Victoria, subsequently at points along the railway which since have become thriving cities.

This is one of many experiences showing how the Bank of Montreal, looking forward with Canada from the beginning, has been a useful factor in the development of the country. In the future, the Bank expects to continue that usefulness—to continue to look forward with Canada, toward the nation's future destiny.

MUSICAL FESTIVAL OTONABEE SCHOOLS

Contest Will be Held on Friday at Keene With Benson Collier Judging.

An interesting event of Friday of this week will be a Musical Festival of the township of Otonabee schools, to be held at Keene, with Inspector L. W. Copp in the chair and Benson Collier (Music Instructor of the Duke of York School in Toronto), as adjudicator.

The schools in the township of Otonabee are under tuition of Cyril Rice and any information regarding the competition may be obtained from him or from the teachers of the schools taking part.

The slogan of the contest is a very admirable one: "The object of a musical festival is not to gain a prize, nor defeat a rival, but to pace one another along the road to excellence." (Sir Walfred Davies).

The program is as follows: Class One; Junior rooms of two-room schools, (S.S. No. 4, Keene and S.S. No. 2, Lang). Test pieces: "Have You Seen my Daffodils (Russell), and "Wood Fairies" (Marshall), from the New Canadian Song series, book 2

Class Two; One-room schools, Grade A (Schools with over 25 students) from S.S. No. 7, Mather's Corners and S.S. No. 15 (Sixth Line). Test pieces: "O Come With Me" (two-part) German Folk Song, and "Merrily the Cuckoo" (two part) by Allen, from the same book and series.

Class Three: Action Songs from Junior rooms of two-room schools, each school to sing not less than two action songs, time limit for each school, four minutes. Each school to choose its own songs. Those taking part: S.S. No. 4 (Keene), and S.S. No. 2 (Lang)

Class Four: One-room schools, Grade B (schools with less than 25 students). Test pieces (from Book 2): "The Fox and the Grapes" (old folk song), and "Ho, the Boating" (two part song by Dr. Lawrence Mason of Toronto). Schools taking part are S.S. No. 17 (Rifle Range), S.S. No. 16 (Coldsprings) and S.S. No. 14 (Eighth Line).

Class Five: Senior rooms of two-room schools; S.S. No. 4, Keene and S.S. No. 2 (Lang), singing two pieces from the song book (3), a unison number "My Own Canadian Home" by McLaughlin, and a two-part number, "Old Folks at Home."

TUESDAY, MAY 28, 1935

ADOPT-A-BABY WEEK.

It was fitting indeed that the anniversary of the birth of the famous Dionne quintuplets should have been seized upon by Hon. D. A. Croll as a suitable time for launching his Adopt-a-Baby-Week campaign.

This is the week, and with Premier Hepburn setting the example by adopting a boy and planning to also take a girl waif into his home, this most commendable effort has got away to a most auspicious start.

The campaign seems to have impressed itself upon the public, judging from the newspaper comment all over the province, and there is every reason to feel confident that as a result of this drive many of the little ones now being cared for in institutions throughout Ontario will find themselves under the care of foster parents who will give them a new start in life under the most favorable auspices.

It is, of course, a responsibility not to be undertaken lightly, this taking over of the duty of caring for some child and of acting as a real parent, but there are many childless homes in the province that might be brightened and made happy by the adoption of a youngster and in the institution there are scores of children waiting for such a chance.

This campaign should bring the two together, and in this connection The Examiner would remind any of its readers who are interested that John Edgar of the Peterborough Children's Aid Society has a list of children for adoption and is in a position to meet almost any call.

WELL, IT MIGHT WORK AT THAT.

These are the days when governmental bodies are doing all kinds of things with the law of supply and demand in an effort to perk up prices and ensure a wider consumption of products.

It should not be surprising therefore to learn that at present there is a bill before the Wisconsin Legislature that would compel everybody who sells food whether at a roadside hotdog stand or in a city restaurant to serve a pat of butter and a piece of cheese with every meal costing 25 cents or more.

The idea behind this unusual measure, of course, is to aid the dairy business in Wisconsin and to increase the sale of butter and cheese, and the plan is not likely to arouse any protests among the patrons of eating-houses, whatever the proprietors may think about it.

Human nature being what it is, however, we are inclined to be pessimistic about the working out of this more-cheese-more-butter campaign.

The man who operates a restaurant or a hotdog stand is not likely to accept the order to give away a pat of butter and a piece of cheese without a mental reservation that he'll even up the score by cutting down a little on some of the other items on the menu, make the wedge of pie a little more slender, put a little less cream in the coffee or something of the sort.

Outside of that it's a fine idea, and if it works, in spite of what we have said, there is no reason why it should not be extended to other commodities, the beverage rooms, for example, might be called upon to supply a headache tablet with every second quart, and the clothier to come back to the old practice of throwing in a pair of braces with a suit.

THE VANCOUVER SITUATION.

From Mayor McGeer of Vancouver The Examiner has received a copy of an editorial from the Vancouver Province which, at the expense of Vancouver, has been published as an advertisement in a number of Canadian newspapers.

This article, arising out of the trouble with the striking relief camp workers, suggests that the Federal Government should take care of the situation by launching out a works program that would provide jobs for all the unemployed.

Whether or not Ottawa could absorb all the workless by inaugurating such a program is a matter of conjecture, but one thing is certain, judging from the experience of other countries, and that is the amount of labor provided for under such a scheme requires the expenditure of huge amounts of money.

However, as the Brantford Expositor points out, Mayor McGeer will not solve Vancouver's troubles by seeking to place the whole blame on the shoulders of the Federal Government.

These relief work camps were established in British Columbia and other provinces to look after jobless single men, and if these men prefer to leave the camps and create disturbances in urban centres, such as Vancouver where incidentally they were at first made welcome by the municipality, it is difficult to see why Ottawa should be expected to change the whole system of looking after such cases because one city has made the mistake of encouraging relief camp deserters and now finds them a problem.

"Mayor McGeer and the British Columbia authorities should have ordered them out of the city and back to work long ago," says the Expositor, and we are inclined to believe that if this course had been followed there would have been little trouble in Vancouver.

RECORD REGISTRATIONS.

According to W. G. Robertson, the secretary-manager of the Ontario Motor League, Canada will this year reach a new high in the matter of motor vehicle registrations, in other words that there will be more automobiles and trucks in commission in the Dominion in 1935 than in any previous year in the country's history.

Last year's total was only seven per cent. below the record, and with gains in sales reported in all parts of the country, there is no reason to doubt that when the figures are all in that a new peak will have been attained.

The depression is definitely over so far as the automotive industry is concerned.

Canadian automobile plants report much greater production, with domestic sales and foreign business both well ahead of last year, and this condition may be accepted as indicative, to some extent at least, of a return to better times throughout the country.

There are those, of course, who are not convinced that this heavy investment in automobiles is a benefit, and who contend that the money thus spent is diverted from other business and would be more advantageously spent in houses and furniture, clothing, etc.

However, as the Ottawa Journal expresses it, others take the more orthodox view, that the motor car has become an essential part of modern life, that it has enlarged our mental and physical horizons to an incalculable degree, and is the prime element in the modern picture.

However that may be, the Journal is undoubtedly right when it says that the automobile has become an outstanding factor in the economic index.

IMPOSTORS PUNISHED.

The Extension of unemployment relief to people who have no opportunity to secure work has become a recognized duty in the social order of the present day, and there are no reasonable-minded citizens who are not in accord with the principle.

In Toronto recently it has been discovered that a number of persons not entitled to relief have been imposing upon the generosity of the municipality and have been applying for and receiving the relief intended for citizens in want. People with bank accounts and other visible means of support have taken their places in the line of the relief recipients. Prompt measures were taken to punish them, and wide publicity should be given to the incident, for there is no doubt that in many other places other people in comfortable circumstances may be doing the same thing.

In this city we are fortunate in having a thorough system of inspection and checking which keeps such cases down to a minimum; and yet it has been discovered that even here, with so many safeguards provided, impostors have succeeded in getting relief to which they are not entitled. Prompt action has been taken in the cases detected, and compensation has been demanded and received. However, there is always the danger of persons eluding detection and these should be warned by the experience of those in Toronto who have received severe but just treatment.

The person who would voluntarily present himself for relief when he is able to do without it is in the class of the thief who would "take candy from a baby." By accepting it, he is keeping food and other necessaries from those who are actually in need, and at the same imposing a burden upon taxpayers who are already paying to the limit of their ability to provide for those in want.—Chatham Daily News.

AN ELASTIC CONSTITUTION.

The congratulatory address extended to His Majesty King George on behalf of the British House of Commons deserves more attention perhaps than it has received. The eulogy on the flexibility of the British Constitution came very appropriately from this body in view of the parliamentary crisis which confronted His Majesty in 1910 and which, if the King had not shown tactfulness of the highest quality, might have resulted in decreased prestige to the monarchy. The paragraph in regard to this was as follows:

> "Our Constitution has proved itself strong enough to withstand the shock of the Great War and flexible enough to adapt itself to the changing circumstances of the Empire and the world. It has given the nation stability when elsewhere foundations were crumbling. While retaining its historic features, it has been able to give to the people an extended franchise and under it Your Majesty's Government has been able, without breach of continuity, to undertake new responsibilities on behalf of the public weal. Your Majesty's reign has seen profound changes in world conditions and consequently complex problems. We may simply claim that our historic forms of Government have proved themselves adequate to meet each crisis as it arose. And Britain has remained a sane and well-ordered nation. These years have recorded a continuous process of development in the Empire of which your Majesty is sovereign. Your colonies have grown in economic and political stature. We have now before us constitutional proposals designed wisely to extend the measure of self-government inaugurated in India 40 years ago. Statutory recognition has been given by Parliament to the newest structure of our partnership with the Dominions as free, equal and autonomous states united by common allegiance to the Crown."

This passage explains very fully the adaptability of the British Constitution to all the various situations that have arisen not only in Britain, but also in the dominions in the course of the development from the old idea of imperialism to that of complete self-government. Outsiders who do not understand the genius of British administration fail to comprehend the significance of this flexibility of the government, which enables it to be adjusted to situations like those in South Africa at the conclusion of the war with the Boer republics, or in Ireland in regard to the establishment of the Free State in the south and the Ulster group in the north. It is this principle which has held the Empire together in the midst of world-shaking catastrophes such as the Great War. It is the greatest compliment that could be paid to the British Constitution and its system of parliamentary institutions that the Commonwealth of British Nations not only survived the upheavals of the Great War, but also came through it with the monarchy and the principle of self-government more firmly established. This brought about a unity and solidarity of the British peoples never before known in history.—Brantford Expositor.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Congratulations to the quintuplets, all five of them, on the first anniversary of their birth.

The big political question of the year is whether or not Premier Bennett is to continue as head of the Government. The next is where Hon. H. H. Stevens will ultimately land.

The old baseball saying, "A hero to-day, a tramp to-morrow," is well illustrated by Babe Ruth, who hit three home runs on Saturday and then struck out thrice the next day.

Apparently it does not take the ubiquitous mosquito long to realize that the warm weather has really arrived.

Dr. Murray Fraser's statement that 90 per cent. of Peterborough's children are immune against diphtheria should be most gratifying to the whole community. This condition is a triumph for medical science and for Dr. A. W. McPherson, school health officer, who inaugurated the work here.

SKILFUL MESSAGE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The Rev. Dr. McLean's sermon at St. Andrew's on the pathfinders of Peterborough was a skilful and colorful picture so far as it went of our early and more heroic days. If anything is to revive us and lift us up in a world sense it is such reminders. There is a strong disposition amongst native Canadians to say: "Oh! never mind the highfalutin' stuff, give me the dimes, that's what counts." This is where the absence of tradition comes in altho' Canada has really a most romantic history. People who talk like that would destroy at one blow religion, honorable dealing and all the long and self-sacrificing record of those who were much above the level of the brute and intended us to be so.

THE MARMORA CONVENTION

Havelock, Ont., May 27, 1935.

To the citizens and fellow electors of the Dominion Riding of Hastings and Peterborough County:—

Re the Liberal nomination held last November in the village of Marmora, for the purpose of selecting a Liberal candidate to contest the riding for the forthcoming Dominion election. True it is, I was a candidate at that convention and while I was not successful, I came second on every ballot, which I might say was managed by the past president under one of the most peculiar systems for a meeting such as this that I ever saw.

To begin with there were a number of out side speakers many of note and intelligence, but none of them having any intention of representing this riding in the coming contest, yet they were accorded all the time they required to speak, while the prospective candidates were limited to a period of five minutes which I contend was entirely wrong.

How can any number of delegates vote intelligently on the qualifications of any candidate aspiring for such an important office unless they hear their views and knowledge of public affairs, and how could any of the prospective candidates give an intelligent account of themselves in the short period of five minutes.

Secondly when the votes were taken he, the president refused to make known the number of ballots that each candidate received, and on the second ballot he even went so far as to only give out the name of the leading candidate and the low man, this action gave some dissatisfaction, and from the audience it was demanded that the candidates names be given in the order that they stood, but at no time would he give out the number of votes cast for each candidate, but after the nomination was over it could be immediately given to the press.

On this occasion I made a request for the support of all delegates and others present to assist the successful candidate in obtaining the election, a request which I have since very much regretted.

At that time I was not aware of the true facts in connection with Mr. Ferguson's previous political record, nor was I aware that he was a staunch supporter of the Conservative standard bearer at the last Provincial election, and at no time during his municipal career has he ever been known to take part in the cause of Liberalism or the support of the Liberal candidate, either as a delegate or as a sympathiser of the cause, previous to the one at Marmora. Therefor in justice to the supporters of the Liberal cause in this riding and also in fairness to myself I will ask to be excused of the request that I made for the support of the delegates and others on behalf of Mr. Ferguson.

I have had a long experience in municipal affairs and at no time during my municipal career was I ever afraid to confess what I was in parliamentary politics, and we have many good Liberals of the same calibre, and I have no hesitation whatever in saying that I am still in readiness to support such men, but for me to go out and give my assistance or support to a camouflage Liberal that has never done anything for the cause of Liberalism in the past while many others have stood the blunt of battle when things did not look so favorable for the Liberal cause, and now he comes out and raises his arm and announces that he is a good reformer and qualified to carry the Liberal standard to victory.

Now, how any man can be sincere and turn from Conservatism to Liberalism in a few short months is more than I can comprehend, especially in the face of the fact that when thousands of good honest thinking Conservatives all over the province had foresaken the sinking Henry ship, he stood by as firm as the rock of Gibraltar. Therefor I wish to be excused of any past obligations and I emphatically state that I will not support Mr. Ferguson and have notified him by letter to this affect.

However, I want the electors of this riding to thoroughly understand that my sole ambition is for the cause of the working man. I mean farmers, businessmen and laborers of all classes, which I contend are the bone and sinue, in fact the very life blood of our nation, and until such time as we can send men to parliament whom are honest and sincere and prepared to cast their own personal interests to the wind and endeavor to enact legislation for the upbuilding of the working people, by placing them in a position that they have purchasing power, then the wheels of industry will immediately start to turn, but not until then.

I well know that this point of view is not any too popular with many of the professional element, of either of the old time political parties, but be that as it may it is my undaunted belief, and my sole and only object of trying to get the convention was that I believed that I could have carried this riding on that stand, and then I would have been placed in a position where I would have been of some benefit to my fellow man, or in other words suffering humanity, which you all well know cannot be done in the ordinary walk of life.

I strongly believe that true Liberalism is much nearer the cause of the working class, than Conservatism, whom are built up on the principal of high tariffs which I contend is very detrimental especially to the farming class as well as others.

Therefore I take a determined stand against what took place at the convention, and I believe many true Liberals have the same opinion that I have. We had four Liberals in the race for the convention and one Conservative, who claimed he was a good reformer and walked away with the plum.

So if the principal of Liberalism in this riding has got down to this, and we have to look to the Conservative ranks for a standard bearer I am very sorry that I cannot support them, but I am still willing to support any true Liberal upholding the cause of the working class, but not a man that a few months ago was boosting the cause of one of the most detrimental governments that has ever set in the Province of Ontario for the cause of the working man.

In closing I hope every one understands what my political views are, and I am sorry that I am unable to swallow the political bait practiced by some of our organization heads.

I aso wish to add that all legitimate correspondence in connection with this matter will be courteously answered.

Respectfully yours,
W. E. Griffiths.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

Air, water and sunshine are things that must be properly mixed and administered in proper quantities to the new-born baby.

The first cry of the new-born child is for air. It is suddenly and dramatically transferred from an aquatic existence, where it has not used its lungs at all, but has obtained oxygen through the mother's blood, to an existence in which its life depends upon the proper utilization of a new medium—air.

It also finds that it is losing water very rapidly through the expiration of air and from the surface of its skin. No wonder it takes some time for the little organism to adjust itself to these strange new conditions.

Needs Air Within, Without

The baby not only needs air within its lungs, but air on the outside of the body, to assist in getting rid of waste products and to regulate its temperature. A young baby, of course, should not be exposed to cold air or cool air for any length of time without being covered, but if, after a few days, it is taught to sleep in a room with fresh air, and given fresh air through the day, it will thrive better, be more contented, and less subject to such infections as colds.

Fresh air does not necessarily mean cold air, but it is well to remember that the baby should never be kept in a room where a gas stove is burning for any length of time, or where there is a burning gas jet. Humidification should be attended to by placing a pan of water over the radiator. In the hot months of summer, the baby's body should be exposed to currents of air as much as possible. Constant change of air around the baby's body is effective in reducing its temperature and preventing heat stroke and the disease incidental to high temperature.

Water, both inside and out, is essential for the bay's health and comfort. In the first few days of life, the baby loses a considerable amount of water, which is the reason for its primary loss of weight. A small amount of water given to the baby in a medicine dropper, half an ounce two or three times a day during the first few days, is calculated to diminish this weight loss and make the baby more comfortable until the mother's milk begins to appear. After that, the milk will supply the baby with most of its water, and attention to this detail need not be so carefully observed. Only boiled, cooled water should be given, and not sweetened.

First Tub Bath

The baby's first tub bath should not be given until after the cord has fallen off and the umbilicus thoroughly healed. But before that, it should be sponged daily with warm water at 100 degrees Centigrade. If soap is used, it should be a mild, white, unscented soap.

The eyes should receive special attention during the bath. If there is any secretion, they should be bathed each day with a solution of boric acid. A separate piece of cotton should be used for each eye. The mouth should not be washed with a cloth nor rubbed hard, as this may break the mucous membrane and invite infection. A small piece of absorbent cotton wrapped around an applicator, dipped into warm water or boric acid solution, should be used to clean the nose. The same method should be used for the ears. The ears should be dried thoroughly after bathing.

If the head is covered with oily material or has crusts on it, warm sweet oil should be rubbed in gently, after which soapsuds and warm water should be used.

The body should be dried by gentle patting with a soft towel, and not by rubbing. Talcum powder used in places where the skin touches, as under the armpits, between the legs, and in the neck, will tend to keep the skin in good condition.

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

THE LAST FIGHTS IN SASKATCHEWAN

On this date (May 26) in 1885 was fought the battle of Frenchman's Butte, in the rebellion in Saskatchewan, and the trouble was practically ended. It was a lively scrap while it lasted and the Winnipeg Light Infantry and the 65th of Montreal displayed great courage under trying conditions. W. B. Cameron in his "War Trail of Big Bear" gives a graphic story of the fight, as well as the text of the report of General Strange who had been campaigning in that rough country for two months and who deserves more credit than is given him by the military historians. As Cameron says "To others fell the rewards and honors of the campaign, but the West knew what was due to General Strange for his prompt action in organizing his column and for his splendid march from Calgary to Fort Pitt with the Alberta Field Force."

A few days later the Macleans and the other prisoners, including Cameron, who had been taken prisoner by Big Bear in March and who had been suffering tortures as they were driven from camp to camp, were released. Cameron, not content with what he had gone through for nigh three months, asked and was allowed to take part in the final wind up, and it was he who acted as scout leader for General Strange in the operations which wound up the rebellion. Big Bear gave himself up to the Mounted Police at Fort Carlton on July 1. Wandering Spirit, the real leader of the massacre at Frog Lake, and the others surrendered and were taken to Regina for trial. One thing that is remarkable in Mr. Cameron's narrative is his sturdy defence of Big Bear in print as it was in the court at Regina. He always insists that Big Bear was forced into the fighting by the young men. Mr. Cameron and Mrs. Yule, of Toronto, (who was Kitty MacLean) are probably the only survivors of that fearful wandering in the fastnesses of the north in 1885.

ALL OF US

(By Marshall Maslin.)

YOU DON'T MAKE FRIENDS

If you think you can make friends, you're mistaken.

Friends aren't made as manufacturers make washing machines, as millionaires make money. They happen! Suddenly you look up and there's a friend alongside, and you feel an easy certainty that he will always be there.

He will not go away, he will not waver. If you get into trouble he will not say: "I'm disappointed in Jim, I didn' know he was that sort of fellow." He will not need to understand. He'll stick without understanding, if necessary. Let others sit in judgment on you—he will not. He will not be "reasonable" or judicial about his friendship for you. He'll just be your friend and that will be enough.

I know a man who said, in a moment of great trouble for himself:

When you mix logic and friendship, it turns to treason!"

It does. Cold reason about your friend is the first step toward friendliness, the first treasonable departure from him and your friendship.

Some people boast of all the friends they have made. If they do, set it down that they have few real friends at all. Friendship is not a word to be used so lightly. You may boast of how the garden is growing or how may miles you travel on a gallon of gas, but you can not—and you must not—boast of the precious luck of friendship.

It is in the heart, it flows through the arteries and works its way into the veins and back again to the great vessel of life. It's where you LIVE and if you have only ONE friend you may count yourself, forever, among those fortunate mortals who have had the best of life.

WALL STREET

NEW ORK, May 28 (AP)—Sharp selling flurries, especially in the metals, oils, alcohols and specialties, appeared in to-day's stock market following yesterday's adverse Supreme Court ruling in the NRA codes.

While the rails and utilities bucked the trend, and a number of these issues moved up moderately, losers of 1 to around 6 points included U. S. Smelting, Cerro De Pasco, American Smelting, Case, Johns-Manville, Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, U. S. Steel, National Distillers, U.S. Industrial Alcohol and Chrysler.

Consolidated Gas, Great Northern and North American held their heads above water. The late tone was heavy. Transfers approximated 2,000,000 shares.

ONTARIO HOG PRICES.

TORONTO, May 28— (CP). — Bacon hog prices continued their steady climb at reporting market points to-day with Hull showing the way with a 50 cent advance. Stratford and Kitchener jumped 25 cents and Peterborough showed a 10 cent gain and Barrie was up 15 cents. Chatham lost 25 cents and the London price was unchanged. To-day's prices:

Chatham, $8.50; Hull, $9.50; Kitchener, $9.00; London, $8.75; Peterborough, $8.85; Stratford, $9.00; Barrie, $6.90.

WOMAN UNFIT TO TELL TRUTH AFTER TRAGEDY

Trial Continues in Mallet Murder of Francis Rattenbury, Architect.

BAILEY AGAIN THRONGED.

LONDON, May 28.—(CP Cable).—A doctor's opinion that Mrs. Alma Rattenbury was not in a fit condition to make any credible statement when she was questioned following the fatal wounding of her husband last March was given the court as the Bournemouth murder trial resumed to-day.

Mrs. Rattenbury, 38, and 18 year old George Stoner, her chauffeur, are accused of the mallet murder of 67 year old Francis Rattenbury, distinguished architect who lived in Canada for many years.

Dr. O'Donnell, first witness, said he had been summoned to the Rattenbury Villa in Bournemouth on the night of March 24. He found Rattenbury unconscious, his head bathed in blood from a wound which the porsecution contends was inflicted by the accused with a mallet.

Woman Intoxicated.

Mrs. Rattenbury was "most excited," said the doctor and intoxicated. She was holding a glass of whisky and soda. She was clad in pyjamas and wore no shoes. "Somebody finished him," the doctor quoted her as saying.

INTERLISTEDS SHOW DECLINES

Losses Range Up to Better Than 2 in Oils and 8 Points in Metals.

FOLLOW WALL STREET.

TORONTO, May 28 (C.P.). — Heavy selling on the New York market with resulting declines gave the interlisted leaders, particularly the oils and metals a sharp downward slant on the industrial department of the Toronto Exchange today, losses ranging up to better than 2 points in the oils and 8 points in the metals. Liquors took recessions up to a point. The market made a couple of efforts to recover but did not get far in either sally, and the close was not much above the day's lowest prices. The turnover was heavy.

Upsetting the codes in the U.S. was apparently regarded as disquieting for metal prices. Consolidated Smelters weakened to 171 and closed little above that level. Nickel lost about 1¼. Brazilian, Ford A, and C.P.R. dropped about a half-point each.

International Petroleum was hammered down to 37 for a loss of more than 2 points. Imperial weakened to about 2½, off 1¼, and British American, holding better, limited its loss to ¼.

Losses ranging up to 1¼ ran through the food, utility, steel, construction and steel shares, and the banks had losses up to 2 points.

Cricket Results

LONDON, May 28 (C.P. Cable).—Leicestershire spring a surprise in cricket circles to-day by defeating Lancashire, the champion county, by 129 runs. The match was played at Leicester and marked the second loss of the season for the champions.

First innings victories were won by Surrey over Gloucestershire, Northamptonshire over Glamorgan, Kent over Warwickshire and Nottinghamshire over Somerset.

The South Africans recorded their sixth win of their tour with a narrow victory over Middlesex by 25 runs. Eight games have been played by the tourists, two having been drawn.

The scores:

Leicestershire, 375 and 69 for seven wickets, declared (Hopwood four wickets for 34 runs); Lancashire, 242 and 73 (Geary six for 34). At Leicester.

Surrey, 338 and 243 for eight wickets, declared (Squires 70, Holmes 50, Goddard four for 69); Gloucestershire, 308 and 190 for eight (Page 76). At Bristol.

Northamptonshire, 329 and 157 (Blakewell 89, E. Davies four for 45); Glamorgan, 174 and 34 for 3 wickets (Turnbull 77 not out). At Kettering.

Nottinghamshire, 456 and 124 for three wickets, declared (A. Staples 65 not out, Hardstaff 50 not out); Somerset, 300 and 30 for no wickets. At Nottingham.

Kent, 247 and 266 for six wickets; Warwickshire, 186. At Birmingham. Rain prevented play to-day.

South Africans, 202 and 163; Middlesex, 192 and 151 (Crisp four for 45, Langton five for 59. At Lord's.

EMPLOMENT INCREASE

OTTAWA, May 28 (C.P.)—A substantial increase was shown in the number of persons employed May 1, when 9,203 firms reported 892,506 at work, an increase of 17,457 compared with the previous month, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported to-day.

MINING STOCKS

A daily column which answers the Queries on Mining Stocks that are of general interest to Examiner readers.

INTERNATIONAL NICKEL

International Nickel Company has no intention, for the present at least, of reopening the Levack Mine, former Mond Nickel Company producer, northwest of Sudbury, Donald Macaskill, general manager, stated in refuting reports that operations at that property would be resumed. The Levack has been closed for over four years, following destruction of the head frame by fire. A new steel structure was erected but since that time Inco has concentrated its mining operations on the Frood and Creighton Mines. The Levack could, with little preliminary work, be brought into production again, but the Frood and Creighton are supplying all the tonnage required at the present time.

MINTO GOLD

Minto Gold Mines during the first 15 days of May handled 1,143 tons of ore from which 18.6 tons of concentrates were produced, having a value of $8.653 according to wire advices from Vancouver. During that period the mill treated an average of 76 tons of ore daily. Reports from the property in the Bridge River section of B.C. state that Federal Gold Mines working on the Dominion Gold property, which adjoins and leads into Minto ground, has uncovered a large body of ore showing a width of 8 feet of commercial grade ore. This ore body, it is stated, can be mined by Minto through a cross cut tunnel approximately 1,000 feet in length.

BUFFALO BEARDMORE

A special meeting of Buffalo Beardmore Syndicate will be held on May 29th in Toronto to incorporate a new company to develop the properties in the Beardmore area of Ontario. Unit holders will receive 400 shares of each unit held and the stock is to be pooled indefinitely.

CONSUMERS GAS

Following a meeting of the directors of The Consumer's Gas Co. of Toronto to-day it was stated in answer to a question that no increase in the price of gas contemplated at the present time. Under the company's charter an increase would have been warranted at any time since early in the fiscal year 1934. But the directors, it is stated, have decided that in view of existing economic conditions every effort will be made to avoid an increase in gas rates.

The company is now in the 8th month of its present fiscal year. Sales of gas have been so far about 1 per cent lower than for the previous period, owing in the first instances to the milder winter and secondly to the comparatively cool spring which has kept householders coal furnaces in operation longer than usual. Sales of appliances have grown rapidly. In March 1935 the increase in dollar value was 57 per cent over March of the previous year, while a gain in April of 65 per cent over April 1934. The 1934 sales also were substantially ahead of those two years ago.

Ice Cream Finds Big Market This Season

DETROIT, May 28.—Certain sign of returning prosperity — increased consumption of the country's standard luxury, ice cream—is reflected in reports by Kelvinator Corporation to-day that ice cream cabinet sales are running 500 per cent ahead of those for last year.

H. W. Burritt, vice president in charge of sales, said that manufacturers and distributors of ice cream are enjoying increased sales and are extending their lines of distribution in anticipation of a 1935 sales volume which will materially exceed that of 1930 when the industry's peak gallonage was reached.

He pointed out that while all types of cabinets were being purchased by the ice cream industry in larger quantities, the most significant aspect of the situation is the unusual popularity of the company's new small sized cabinet which is being used in smaller shops, roadside stands, and similar places which are beginning to take advantage of the increase in ice cream sales.

SILVERS WEAK IN SHAKEDOWN

Golds Soften Also on Report That France Was Abandoning Gold Standard.

SOME RECOVERIES.

TORONTO, May 28 (C.P.).—The Toronto Mining Market had its periodic shake-down to-day with selling reaching considerable proportions in the base metal and silver stocks in which losses ranged up to $2 with very little of a recovery before the close. Some of the golds weakened also on a report that France was abandoning the gold standard, but except in the few of the cheaper issues, there were recoveries before the close. Abandonment of the NRA in the U.S. was used as the chief depressing influence but the month-end settlement of under-margined accounts was also a factor in the dumping of securities.

Noranda worked back 2.50 to 39.50, Hudson Bay nearly $1, and Sherritt, Bare Metals Corporation, and Pend Oreille dropped up to 7 cents. Silvers were sold heavily, particularly Eldorado, Castle and Bear, with Eldorado touching 1.80, off 28 cts, Castle 98, off 10 cents, and Bear 50, off 6. These prices were improved slightly.

Recessions up to $1 appeared in Lake Shore, McIntyre, Dome, while Hollinger, Braiorne and Pioneer weakened 10 to 30 cents each.

RAILWAY BOARD OPENS ENQUIRY

John R. Corkery, city solicitor, and James Dutton of the Chamber of Commerce, in presenting Peterborough's arguments against the closing of the old branch line, suggested to the Commission that, if abandonment were to be considered, decision be suspended for at least one year to judge the effects of improving business.

The Commissioners adjourned at one o'clock after hearing the Railway Company's case, and also objections by Peterborough and Millbrook representatives. Port Hope, Cavan and Hope township deputations were to be heard this afternoon.

Highway Competition

"In asking for the abandonment of this branch," said Mr. Rand, "it has been conceived to be a responsibility laid on the administrators of the National Railways. The operating loss of from $10,000 to $15,000 a year cannot be continued especially when it is seen that the communities affected are well served by improved highways."

Mr. Rand reviewed and analyzed the branch line financial statements from 1930 to 1934, sketched the variety and volume of business at Campbellcroft, Millbrook and Fraserville, which he said were most seriously affected by the proposed closing of the line to Port Hope. He informed the commission that the paved highway from Peterborough to Port Hope and an improved gravel road through Campbellcroft and Millbrook afforded efficient means of transportation for these communities. In addition to the highway service, it was also pointed out that Fraserville is only two miles from the Kendry station on the C.P.R., and Millbrook is four miles from the Cavan station on the C.P.R.

Mr. Rand declared that business had declined on the local branch because it had moved on to the comparatively new highways that have been built. There are grain elevators and coal sheds at these three intermediate stations.

"From the standpoint of serving the people in these communities in delivering of inbound and outbound goods, a satisfactory means is at hand, and is used on the highways."

Mr. Rand showed that the operating loss was $14,147 in 1930 and $17,041 in 1934, and in 1933 it was up to $25,947. He said that the rural population in the adjacent townships of Hope, Cavan, North Monaghan and South Monaghan totalled 8,966.

Ask Year's Delay

J. R. Corkery, city solicitor, and James Dutton of the Chamber of Commerce, presented to the board reason for suspension at least for one year of any order that would bring about the extinction of the Peterborough-Port Hope branch.

Mr. Corkery said there was some belief that diversion of business from the Port Hope to the Belleville branch of the C.N.R. out of Peterborough did not reflect a true picture of the Port Hope branch's usefulness.

Both speakers referred to the railway's recent adoption of the pick-up and delivery service which they believed would greatly assist the C.N.R. in regaining business. Because of its recent inauguration at a time when business improvement seemed to be steadily approaching, Mr. Corkery and Mr. Dutton suggested that the local branch should be given an opportunity of any possibility of developing this form of business.

Replying to Mr. Corkery's question, Mr. Rand said that removal of the railway would be a consequence of a formal order to abandon the line.

Mr. Dutton told the board that lack of prompt connections on the main line at Port Hope and Belleville was an impediment to potential passenger business to and from Peterborough, especially to Montreal and Toronto.

Millbrook's Case.

W. R. Howard, Millbrook lawyer, read an interesting, comprehensive and concrete brief, embodying Millbrook's appeal to the Commission for the retention of the branch. He was followed by Milton J. Falls, farmer, who said that although truck shipments had mounted to 75 per cent. of the local business, he believed that there had been a distinct decline in truck business since last summer, and a proportionate return to shipments by rail. In his own experience he had found that cost of shipping cattle by truck was 35 cents as compared with 19 cents by rail.

Mr. Howard read a statement from M. McDowell of Millbrook, affirming that he shipped from the village nearly 60,000 dozen of eggs a year and 100 crates of eggs by express to Montreal.

Rail Business Increasing.

W. K. Reid, farmer and dealer in grain shipped from Millbrook, Reaboro and Lindsay emphasized the importance of a recent reduction in C.N.R. freight rates.

"Before April 15 the charge was 12 cents a hundredweight on grain from Millbrook to Toronto," Mr. Reid said. "Since April 15 the charge has been 7 cents. At that rate it is impossible for the trucks to meet that competition and I think the Board should consider this point before discontinuing this branch, because the trucks are simply out. If the railway had done that years ago there wouldn't have been any truck business, and if they would cut the rates for cattle haulage they'd get the bulk of that business too."

W. T. Wood was the last witness introduced by Mr. Howard. Mr. Wood amplified criticism of weakness in the passenger service connection at Port Hope.

Seek Farmers' Views.

Mr. Norris remarked that Mr. Howard's brief for Millbrook was a splendid summary. The Commission, he added, was chiefly interested in the effect of the railway service on the general interests of the farmers. The Commission wished to obtain all the available facts relating to the basic industry of agriculture in this district and its dependence on the Peterboro-Port Hope branch of the C.N.R.

Grain Prices an Influence.

John Douglas told the Board he had three elevators at Fraserville, representing an investment he estimated at $35,000. He contended that most of the grain grown in his district was transported by railway. It was produced in South Monaghan and the eastern fringe of Cavan township, which he described as a grain garden of the province. Shipments of wheat during the last few years, included in the period during which the Peterboro-Port Hope branch of the C.N.R. had reported a decline in freight, had fallen off heavily, Mr. Douglas said, mainly because the market price of the grain had fallen to a point at which the farmers found it more profitable to use it as food for livestock. With the improved price of to-day, and any further increase in the market quotations, the volume of wheat shipments from the Fraserville district should be restored to the car quantities of the best years.

service Conference devotions, conducted by the president, and an address by Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman of New York City, will precede the organization of the conference proper to-morrowing morning at 10.30 o'clock.

Rev. C. D. Daniel of Mark Street United Church, assisted by W. A. Gamble, is serving as secretary of the general conference committee and secretary of the billetting committee. Alpine McNab is active as chairman of the billeting committee, and H. G. Walker is supervising plans for provisions of meals for the delegates at the various churches during the week.

WELCOME RAIN BRINGS RELIEF

Owen Sound and district reported the rains would be of immense value to the farmers and market gardeners.

In the east around Peterborough rain fell throughout the night. It was very badly needed by the farmers and gardeners.

At St. Catharines a steady downpour of rain to-day appeared to have definitely broken the dry spell and brought real relief to the crops.

The first rain in three weeks fell at London and saved all spring crops. At St. Thomas a half inch of rain prevented spring crops from becoming parched.

"We needed rain very badly and still do," stated R. S. Duncan, of the Department of Agriculture in Toronto. "Clovers have not been doing well and spring grains have been retarded," he said, "while it is early to tell what damage may be done by cutworms, it may be serious if there is not more moisture."

RAILWAY VOTE OF $15,000,000 PASSES HOUSE

the railways are anxious to participate."

Replying to J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. leader, Dr. Manion said he believed the original request for equipment orders came from private companies. Since then, the railways have agreed it was a good proposition.

Mr. Woodsworth said he understood American and Canadian railways agreed periodically what new equipment would be bought, but Dr. Manion said he had never heard of a deal like that.

The Canadian National, Dr. Manion said, would buy refrigeration cars, gondola cars, automobile cars sand cars, Diesel engines and passenger cars. The Canadian Pacific would purchase box cars, refrigerator cars, mail cars, coaches, coal cars and locomotives, heavy and passenger.

Dr. Manion told Mr. Woodsworth he did not believe the new equipment would enable the railways to lay off crews and shopmen.

He did not believe, Said Dr. Manion, in the argument that had been advanced to him the new equipment might throw men out of work because of faster, newer locomotives and cars.

Shops Not Equipped.

The Railway Minister read letters from D. C. Coleman, of the C.P.R., and S. J. Hungerford, of the C. N. R., that railway shops were not equipped to build new locomotives and cars. The shops were designed for repair and conversion purposes. If the private equipment companies went out of business, the railways would have to buy machinery for their shops at big prices. If the companies went bankrupt, the railways would be left at the mercy of foreign equipment manufacturers."

The two loans to the Canadian Pacific to keep their shops open, said Dr. Manion, amounted to nearly $2,500,000, and by paying the deficits of the Canadian National, the Government had assisted in keeping the shops of that company open.

The Minister submitted the owners and employees of car manufacturing plants were entitled to consideration. They had been encouraged by the railways, whose settled policy was to buy their equipment from independent companies.

The owners and workers in these plants were Canadian taxpayers. He did not think the position of $4,000,000 out of $15,000,000 in the public works bill to be allotted to repairs in railway company shops was unreasonable.

Agnes MacPhail (Prog., Southeast Grey) said the railways needed certain classes of equipment to give service to agriculture. Trucks were taking business away from the railways because these were giving service the railways did not give. One reason was because railways refused to partition stock cars except at the expense of the shipper. They also made heavy charges for stop-overs to fill up cars while trucks made no such charges. She read a letter from the United Farmers of Ontario, urging partitioned stock cars.

The letter complained the railway companies "had treated the whole question (of livestock transportation) with indifference due to lack of executive ability," and as a consequence trucks were gaining business at the expense of the railways. It added that before the Government granted more assistance to the railways, I was entitled to know "how badly they had managed their business."

Pick Up Service.

Miss MacPhail said a number of railroads in the United States had inaugurated a "pick up service for livestock." They operated trucks to pick up stock at the farms and take it to railway stations. The experiment was proving successful and was said to be more economical than shipment to market the whole distance by truck. She asked if the railways were contemplating installing these two services, partitioning the cars and farm pick up.

Dr. Manion said he had taken both matters up with the railways. They were considering the partitioning, although they did not think they could afford the extra service. Railways had adopted the pick up service on some classes of freight in Western Ontario, and some American railways had gone much further than Canadian railways with considerable success. Canadian roads, however, were alive to the situation and were making every effort to regain traffic they had lost to motor transport. He believed they would regain a good deal of it.

Political Jobbing.

The House voted down an amendment to the Government's $33,000,000 construction bill to force public advertisement of tenders. It was designed to abolish the system, introduced last year, of obtaining tenders from an invited list of contractors which Liberal members said resulted in political jobbing.

The amendment was sponsored by Hon. J. C. Elliott, former Minister of Public Works, but was voted down by the Conservatives in a non-recorded division.

A plea by George Coote (U.F.A., Macleod) to finance the works program by currency inflation fell on deaf ears. He suggested Canada's currency be inflated to the limit of 25 per cent. gold coverage set by the World Economic Conference and the money used to pay for the relief works. There was no reply from the government and the House went on considering the bill clause by clause.

To-day the House considers the bill to amend and consolidate the law relating to patents of inventors. This measure was passed by the Senate earlier in the session. When it is disposed of some of the bills based on the price spreads report will be considered.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 28 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — The Mill and St. Andrew's clashed at the School Grounds on Monday evening in a game that was good up to the start of the fifth innings, cut loose and simply ran away with everything, changing the figures from 3-0 to chalk up a final score of 18-3, notwithstanding that a passing shower had made the field difficult and slippery. Buster Whittom and Walter Flint for the Saints did some good work in the outfield, while Doc Stuart and Fred Ingram provided a little excitement for the spectators with sensational catches. Blake and Ingram having three runs apiece to their credit for the Mill. The line-up:

St. Andrew's — D. Flint, p; McArthur, c; Hendy, 1b; Whitton, 2b; Bob Upton, 3b; Hopping, ss; W. Flint, rf; Henson, cf; Lambert, lf.

BAD FOREST FIRE UNDER CONTROL

trol and the only fear there today was that of unexpected flaring. As a precautionary measure the government announced plans to restrict travel through the woods pending sufficient rain to lift the fire menace. Several settlers houses were destroyed in St. Joseph's parish before the fire there was controlled.

Men armed with hand pumps were rushed yesterday to New Ross in Nova Scotia to protect a valuable stand of timber. The fire was put out after destroying 500 acres of scrub and bush land. Damage was slight. Elsewhere flames at times blazed fiercely before they were checked.

LINDSAY, Ont., May 28 (Examiner Correspondence). — Fires in the Eagle Lake district near Haliburton were extinguished, and last night a heavy rain fell. So dense is the smoke in and around West Guilford, Carnarvon, and Minden that motorists have to drive slowly.

Early yesterday the Government sent in fire fighting apparatus and men from Apsley. They arrived with a truck and an electric pumper and great lengths of hose. They relieved hundreds of tired, exhausted men who had been fighting the fire with buckets and with hand flays. In some places hundreds of yards of trenches were dug.

Acres of timber, slash and cut cordwood were destroyed. The heaviest loss was sustained by W. Nicholls, especially in cut cordwood.

The fire in the Carew limits at Miner's Bay was extinguished by a gang of fifty men, the damage being small.

ROTARIAN SIMMONS LUNCHEON SPEAKER

"British Conditions" Subject of Campbellford Club Address.

(Examiner Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, May 28. — Choosing for his subject "British Conditions" Rotarian Ed. Simmons of Trenton was guest speaker at the Campbellford Club on Monday and gave a most interesting talk on what John Bull had accomplished since and during the Great War. With similar conditions in the United States each country had the advantage in one way or another, but according to Neville Chamberlain's balanced budget of April 16, 1935 the figures show a surplus of 6 million pounds. "I am not speaking in a critical manner but just for purposes of comparison" said the speaker.

The younger country had no experience like the older one. The U. S. did not have to worry about the navy, but could not count on good times in agriculture. Great Britain did not have to worry about child labor, and voluntary insurance took care of the aged. Dating from the 16th century England had a plan to take care of the poor and needy and when this voluntary insurance later developed into a national compulsory scheme it became one of the greatest steps in social politics of modern times. This is the British form of relief, costly public works both with Canada and the United States only scratched the surface.

Mr. Simmons then fully outlined the English banking system, stating that there had been no panic since 1867 and not one failure during the past 40 years. He also told his listners that much of the U.S. 'New Deal' was part of the British 'Old Deal' of 130 years ago. After discussing the brain trust, civil service, export trade, slums, royal commissions, and the substantial recovery England was making in all manufacturing lines, the speaker stated that other governments were seeking remedies but nowhere has any country made the recovery as have the British Isles and concluded by saying that it was the great confidence of the British people that did all this and we people of Canada must face conditions with that same confidence if we want victory.

Acting President Williams conveyed the thanks of the club to the speaker for his splendid address.

Other guests at Monday's meeting included the Rev. Harold B. Neal, Wesley Stephens, J.P., of town and Jerry Squier and Gibb. Aziz of Trenton.

SEARCH SPREADS

napped youngster riding with four men in a travel-stained automobile last Saturday. That was less than 24 hours after George was abducted from a Tacoma street.

A similar tip met with failure today when a posse of officers returned to Port Angeles, Wash., after an unsuccessful effort to trace an automobile containing a boy resembling the missing lad.

Although they found no trace of the machine with its three men and a woman, after combing all resorts in the Lake Crescent area, Port Angeles officers remained on the alert on the possibility the kidnappers had sought refuge in the sparsely settled forests of the Olympic Peninsula.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Weyerhaeuser, Jr., distracted parents of the youth, said to-day the $200,000 demand for the boy's return was far beyond the family's present funds.

Demand Is Excessive

In declaring the ransom demanded was excessive, friends pointed out how the lumber industry, now crippled by a widespread pacific northwest strike, had suffered during the depression.

As the hours dragged by, Mr. and Mrs. Weyerhaeuser awaited a reply to their pathetic message in a Sunday Seattle newspaper which said:

"Due publicity beyond our control, please indicate another method reaching you. Hurry, relieve anguished mother. Percy Minnie."

The signature was the one ordered by writers on the ransom note which was signed "Egoist, Egoist."

Justice Department agents, veterans of previous kidnapping cases and successful gangsters campaigns have publicly mentioned no suspects, but it was known they had begun a search for "at least three men" as the suspected kidnappers.

One police official, who declined to be named, saw a woman's work in the writing of the note because it did not mention death for the boy. He said it might have been written by a sensitive woman, possibly acting on orders from the kidnap leader.

$10 LICENSE FOR TAXI CABS

Campbellford Solicitor Instructed to Prepare Motor to Hire By-law.

DISCUSS DOGS.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 28. — A special meeting of the Town Council was held in the clerk's office on Monday night, Mayor F. F. Long occupying the chair. The object of the meeting was to discuss the proposed taxicab license and check up on the dog bylaw. The solicitor was instructed to prepare a taxicab or motor-to-hire bylaw, and the license fee was to be $10 for the first car and $5 for each additional car per year. The license must be taken up for one full year and commence on July 1st and end June 30th, the following year.

Council also ordered that the Chief of Police be acquainted with bylaw No. 987 of the town of Campbellford governing dogs and the provisions of this by-law, and also instructed the clerk to have an advertisement inserted in the local paper regarding the provisions of this by-law.

It was also decided to hold the next regular meeting on Monday, June 3rd, at the Public Library.

CAMPBELLFORD

Mr. Alvin Malcolm, of Toronto, spent the week-end with his family in town.

The Rev. J. J. Black, of Lindsay, will preach both morning and evening services at St. John's United Church on Sunday, June 2nd. Rev. Harold B. Neal will occupy the pulpit at the Cambridge Street United Church for the same day.

Mrs. Philip Stone, Mr. and Mrs. John Stone of Columbus, Ontario, and Mrs. Albert Ashton of Olds, Alberta, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ashton of Inkerman Street.

"A Flavour Worth Preserving"

Said Mr. Picobac

● Both the boss barber and the assistant boss barber being busily engaged, Mr. Picobac took a chair in the row by the wall, and prepared to possess himself in patience.

"Fill your pipe", invited the boss barber hospitably. "Have a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke while you're waiting."

"Thanks", replied Mr. Picobac, "Don't mind if I do. Waiting my turn never bothers me — not if I've got my pipe — and Picobac tobacco."

"That's a new seal-tight pouch you got there," observed the barber.

"Yes, sir," replied Mr. Picobac proudly, "A great pouch and worthy of a great tobacco. Air-tight and waterproof. Keeps the tobacco fresh and moist till the last crumb . . . Preserves the flavour . . . And I want to tell you Picobac is a Burley — the pick of Canada's Burley Crop. It has a flavour worth preserving."

Unemployed Railwaymen Oppose Exemption

EIGHT HOUR DAY SHOULD APPLY TO ALL TRADES

Case is Presented to Banking Committee of the Senate.

PUT IN BY COMMONS.

Frank Gordon of Lindsay Appears Before the Committee.

OTTAWA, May 28. — (CP).—Hearing of the controversient issue whether railway employees should be exempted for one year from the eight hour day bill opened to-day before the Senate Banking and Commerce Committee. This exemption was placed in the measure by the House of Commons.

Representing unemployed railwaymen, I. E. Weldon of Toronto said every trade in Canada with the exception of railway engineers and conductors supported an eigh-hour day. "We say," he stated, "there should be no exception and Parliament should pass a law that will make this measure applicable to all trades in the interests of labor and in the interests of the country."

Under the Canadian National Railway trainmen's schedule a day's works constituted 100 miles for workers in the running trades in the freight service and an "equivalent in the passenger service." If a 2,600-mile month, or 26 actual days' work per month, were put into operation "it will give jobs to one-third of unemployed railwaymen."

A 26-day month, he said, would give conductors $143 per month, firemen $126 per month and engineers $177 per month in wages.

Made $100 a Year

Frank Gordon, Lindsay, Ont., unemployed C.N.R. trainman, told the committee he had been "laid off" in Nov. 1931, after having been employed for almost 20 years by the system. In the last four years, he had made but $400 or $100 a year for work on railways.

He had worked on county roads, he said, recalling in the camp in which he was located there were 12 or 14 unemployed railwaymen, some of whom had received relief.

In placing workers in the running trades working 3,500 miles per month, as many were doing, their mileage should be reduced to 2,600 miles monthly, the witness claimed. The Pennsylvania railroad system had cut its mileage for its workers and if employees in the running trades in this country were reduced to a limit of 2,600 miles per month it would put 20,000 unemployed railway workers to work.

A worker who could get 26 day's pay for one month should be satisfied, he said.

H. B. Chase, representing the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Order of Railway Conductors said, in 1930 there were 6,348 locomotive engineers employed in Canada and this total had been reduced gradually each year until 1933 the number of employed engineers in this country was 3,375.

These conditions were not brought about by the workers making extra mileage. It was by voluntary action of the locomotive engineers themselves the mileage was reduced after 1930 and running trade employees to-day were not making nearly the mileage they were earning in 1930.

In 1933, there were 12,319 employees in the 'road service" of railways in Canada who were paid a total of $23,976,386 or an average of $1,946, Mr. Chase said. It was represented by unemployed railwaymen that on a 2,600-mile-per-month maximum, 25,000 men would be put back to work. If this were correct it would reduce the average yearly earnings for workers in the running trade, on the basis of 1933 figures, from $1,946 to $942.

A reduction of the mileage maximum from 3,500 to 2,600 per month for freight engineers and an equivalent for passenger engineers would put only a total of 2,044 unemployed railroaders back on the job, Mr. Chase stated.

"That is if every worker in the running trade works a full 2,600 miles each month," Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Senate Leader, interjected.

"Yes," Mr. Chase replied.

"But, these men are not asking to be put back to work on a full 2,600-mile monthly basis," Senator Meighen returned.

The maximum monthly wage for firemen on the Pennsylvania railroad was $189 a month as against $136 on Canadian roads, he said. A 2,600-mile limit in Canada would mean the maximum pay for a locomotive engineer here would be $12 less a month than the maximum for a fireman on the Pennsylvania.

"You are against spreading out the work?" questioned Senator W. H. McGuire (Lib., Toronto).

"The proposal would not change the situation," replied Mr. Chase.

OTTAWA STUDIES N R A DECISION

Jurisdiction of Congress Coincides in a Broad Way With Dominion Parliament.

COMPARISONS MADE.

OTTAWA, May 28 (C.P.).—The decision of the Supreme Court of the United States declaring the NRA codes invalid, will be given careful study by all parties in the House of Commons. The jurisdiction of Congress on the one hand, and the State Legislatures on the other, coincide in a broad way with the jurisdiction of the Dominion Parliament and the Provincial Governments in Canada. Hours of labor and rates of wages are primarily within the jurisdiction of the States, as they are primarily within the jurisdiction of the provinces.

On the ground of emergency, President Roosevelt was given authority by Congress to regulate hours of labor and minimum wages. It was also contended that wages and hours of labor affected interstate commerce, and that, as the Federal authority had jurisdiction over interstate commerce the passage of the labor legislation was within its powers. The supreme Court, in yesterday's judgment held that neither the emergency, nor interstate trade gave Washington the right to invade State jurisdiction in this way.

Different Stand.

The Canadian Government submitted to Parliament measures in respect to hours of labor, weekly day of rest, minimum wages and unemployment insurance. They have passed the House of Commons and are now before the Senate. The Government took the view that, although labor and wages are in the provincial field, the legislation as drafted is within the jurisdiction of the Dominion. It is relying on different premises than did Congress.

The British North America Act, which is Canada's Constitution, gave the Dominion power to pass such legislation as may be necessary to fulfil its obligations arising out of any treaty with other countries. The Government claims that the International Labor Office conventions, based upon the Versailles Treaty, obligated contracting countries to pass eight-hour day and minimum-wage laws, and, therefore, its legislation was within the competency of the Dominion Parliament.

In regard to unemployment insurance, the Dominion relied on its taxation powers and also the national character of the problem.

Measures Opposed.

The minimum wage legislation would set up machinery for declaring minimum wages. It relies for its authority not only on the Geneva conventions, the particular convention of which has not been ratified, but also on interprovincial trade. This bill is therefore more nearly in line with the Washington legislation. It is now before the Senate, and that body has ordered it redrafted.

Liberal speakers have attacked all this legislation as ultra vires the Dominion, and take the position that the Supreme Court of Canada should have passed on it.

18,220,000 out of 20,225,000 theoretically eligible to come under codes.

Cost of NRA to Government and industry per year—$55,000,000, $41,000,000 being paid by industry through its code authorities; the balance to run the governmental machine.

Act became effective June 16, 1933; was set to expire June 16, 1935, at midnight.

Most hourly provision set at 40 hours maximum a week, but with numerous exceptions.

Minimum wage scale ran from 12 to 75 cents an hour.

Curb Court Power.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP).—There are nine bills before the United States' House of Representatives' Judiciary committee to curb the power of the Supreme Court to veto Congressional acts.

Some call for at least a 7 to 2 vote before a law can be declared unconstitutional—to get away from the famous 5 to 4 decisions. Others would set the ratio at three-fourths.

4,500 NRA Employes.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP).—NRA's 4,500 employes forced themselves to smile to-day, but inside their heads this question thudded:

"How about my job?"

No one in authority seemed to know whether there would be a general demobilization. Everyone was talking about it.

The exhuberance that shot the blue eagle on its flight almost two years ago was gone—dead as NRA's codes.

Cost Schechter $60,000.

NEW YORK, May 28.—(AP). — Joseph Schechter, head of the poultry company which successfully contested the validity of the NRA codes, appeared to-day to be more concerned with the cost of the legal battle than the effect of the Supreme Court's momentous decision.

Although gratified by the decision, Schechter explained the case cost $60,000 and asserted he would rather have gone to jail if he had known it would cost so much.

Canada Not Affected.

OTTAWA, May 28.—(CP).—The United States' Supreme Court decision that NRA codes are unconstitutional has no direct bearing on the Canadian recovery program, in the opinion of Hon. H. H. Stevens, who said to-day: "There is, of course, a general international significance to such a decisive action by the Washington Court of Last Appeal, but the Canadian domestic situation is not affected," the former Minister of Trade and Commerce, observed.

Workers Threaten Strikes.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP).—Leaders of two large unions — United Mine Workers and the United Textile Workers—say they will order strikes if employers attempt to return to wages, hours and working conditions which prevailed prior to NRA.

This was their reaction to the Supreme Court's decision scrapping NRA codes.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, expected to confer shortly with other union leaders.

Stimulus to Business.

MONTREAL, May 28.—(CP). — Decision of the U. S. Supreme Court that the National Recovery Act is unconstitutoinal, voiding the 150 codes for industries, should have a decisively stimulating effect on United States' business and will offer a similar stimulous to Canadian busines in the opinion of J. H. Webb, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. "It should also have a salutary effect on Canadian business," he said.

Triplets And 'Tuplets On Same Day

On Tuesday, May 28, the Chisholm triplets, children of Mr. and Mrs. William Chisholm, of New Glasgow, N.S., reached their first milestone, and on the same day so did the famous Dionne quintuplets. The Victoria Order of Nurses fittingly celebrated this important event in the life of New Glasgow. The three babies are splendid speciments of babyhood and are being admired daily as they are taken for their airing on the main thoroughfares in their three-in-one baby carriage as shown above.

FALSE TEETH

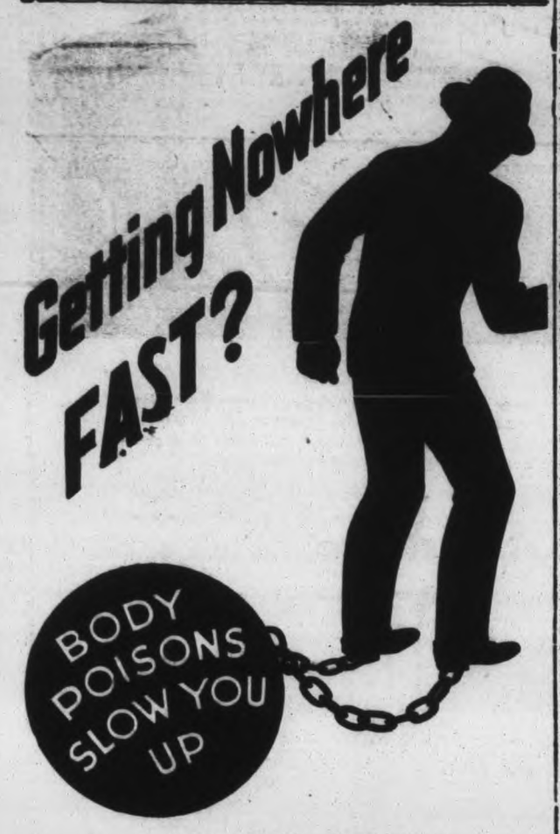
"Stay Put," Says Druggist

"With my gums gradually shrinking I had difficulty keeping my plate in position with various denture powders. Most of them lasted only a few hours. Now I use FASTEETH, and what a difference! I now wear my plate for 24 hours with absolute security and comfort. Fasteeth does not wash away or become thinned out, but "STAYS PUT" until I am ready to remove plate. FASTEETH is tasteless. Does not sour or cause foul breath. Holds false teeth all day long."

Accept only FASTEETH to enjoy false teeth comfort like you've never had before. Ask for FASTEETH at any good drug store.

Relieve Those ITCHY PIMPLES

When your skin is irritated with pimples and red blotches from external causes, and you're crazy with itching torture, here's quick, sure relief. Get a 50c box of PETERSON'S OINTMENT at your druggist and rub this healing balm on the pimples. Feel the relief! Itching stops at once. Smarting disappears. Your skin will positively look better, feel better. And don't forget, PETERSON'S OINTMENT is wonderful to help heal itching feet and cracks between toes. Try it.



Are you half-sick, half-well—haunted by the suspicion that you are getting nowhere fast? If so, you may be suffering from constipation, which sets up poisons in the body. Body poisons slow you up. Get rid of them. Try eating Post's Bran Flakes With Other Parts of Wheat regularly as your breakfast cereal. Mildly laxative. Because of its delicious flavour many vote it their favourite cereal. Constipation due to insufficient roughage in the diet should yield to Post's Bran Flakes eaten regularly. A competent physician should be consulted for more stubborn cases.

Advice TO NEWLYWEDS

OLD shoes and rice can be dodged—unwelcome wedding presents can be exchanged—but the expenses that pile up at a newlywed's front door! They can't be sidestepped so easily. A young couple's budget is a delicate thing. It won't stand stretching. Yet no one expects a bride and groom to live, dress and act like a pair of old misers.

Here's where that tried and trusted friend of all newlymarrieds—The Examiner—steps in to help you. You can solve all those new expense problems—a home, furniture, a maid, entertaining, food—you can get them better and at lower cost just by hiring, renting, buying them through the ads in The Examiner.

Learn to "shop" The Examiner ads regularly. Check their offerings for price, quality, value. Save steps and money before you buy. Reading the "big" ads and reading and using the want ads is the one sure painless way to live well on a newlywed's budget.

Ask anyone who has been married a year!

Read—Use—The ADS in

THE PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER

Whoever said newlyweds can't afford a car hasn't seen the wonderful Used Car values in the Want Ad section of The Examiner.

Oh! That maid problem. Where is the girl who can cook, wait on table and housekeep perfectly on a few slender dollars per? You'll find her with an Examiner Want Ad!

Has Hubby an "expensive" appetite? Who cares! You can buy the best at prices that would please a Scotchman if you check The Examiner food ads.

It's gotta have this and it's gotta have that and the rent has to be as low as a fallen arch. We know it—and so do the realtors who advertise in The Examiner. Get acquainted with them!

REV. B. THORNTON GUEST SPEAKER AT MILLBROOK

Old Omemee Boy Conducts Anniversary of Men's Bible Class.

GEORGE ST. QUARTET

MILLBROOK, May 28.—(Examiner Correspondence).—"I wish I might carry the charter of this class with me; it speaks volumes regarding the good work being accomplished in the Sunday School here," declared Rev. Dr. P. Bruce Thornton, of Winnipeg, preaching anniversary sermons for the Men's Bible Class of St. Andrew's Church on Sunday, both afternoon and evening. Displaying the framed charter, the speaker commented on the fact that when the class was organized twenty-eight years ago it had twenty charter members, and of these seven are still on its roll and active in its service.

"The thing that breaks my heart as I go about the country is the number of young people we are losing from our Sunday Schools once they reach the 'teen age. That is why I commend this Bible Class so highly, for while some of its members have passed on and many others have come and gone from the community, seven are still working for the Kingdom after twenty-eight years. The class, too, has had but two teachers in all that time, and those two sisters; this is indeed a notable record."

"Facing Facts."

In the afternoon Dr. Thornton brought an inspiring message on the theme, "Facing Facts," and in the evening held undivided attention as he unfolded his subject, "My Visit to Nazareth With the Boy Jesus as a Guide." Having personally visited Nazareth within the last three years, Dr. Thornton was able to vividly describe the hills still the same as when our Saviour trod their paths, and the blue waters of Galilee, which he had also visited, picturing Jesus as He sailed thereon with His disciples. Emphasizing the four-fold program of the church for its young people, as founded on the "Jesus way of life," recorded in Luke 2:52, "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man," the speaker went on to show that "we have a wonderful, curative religion, and we need it; we have been laying emphasis upon calling the prodigal back from the far country, but what we have forgotten is that we have a preventive religion—keeping the prodigal from straying into the far land—'Unto Him who is able to keep you from falling,' I commend you.

"The way to keep a boy from reading a bad book is to give him a good one, and one of the best ways to keep our young people out of the beverage rooms is to have the church open, warmed and lighted, and a way provided to entertain them." In closing, the minister challenged the young people to enter the service of the Master, and fight the battles of the Kingdom, "for He needs your initiative, your daring and spirit of audacity, and your strength. Have your lives guided by the great principles which guided Christ's life, and hold out for the perfectly-balanced, four-square ideal which He established."

George St. Quartet.

Music for the anniversary services was provided by the male quartet of George Street Church, Peterborough, Messrs. A. V. Lillow, E. A. Rowe, C. S. Thompson and W. H. Cunningham, being heard in duets, solos and quartettes, to the great pleasure of the large congregations, and adding materially to the atmosphere of worship which characterized the special occasion. Mrs. Rowe accompanied the singers on the piano, and their closing selection at night, "That Beautiful Land," was particularly impressive and appropriate. The pastor, Rev. A. L. Sisco, led in the opening prayer.

L. W. Smith, the class president, extended the welcome to the congregations on behalf of the other members, the teacher, Mrs. (Dr.) L. H. Rea, and himself, explaining that its membership now numbers forty, and warmly inviting all the men not attending any other school to join. The late Miss Agnes Hampton was the class teacher at organization in 1907, and after her decease her sister, Mrs. Rea, took the office and has successfully carried on ever since.

The guest speaker, Rev. Dr. Thornton, was born in Omemee, and was for eighteen years pastor of St. Paul's Church, Winnipeg. He has but recently returned from a world tour, occupying three years, and the anniversary was climaxed on Monday evening with an illustrated lecture covering the globe-girdling trip. The men of the Bible Class formed the choir for the anniversary services, which were a marked success in every particular.

PROJECT SCENE BY ARC LIGHTS

New System of Effects Being Tried Out in Covent Garden.

LONDON, May 28 (C.P.)—Something new in Covent Garden opera is now interesting London's music lovers—scenes without shifters "magic lantern opera."

Two great arc lights, brought from Berlin, project on to a rounded backcloth scenery painted on little squares of glass. Rooms, windows, even rays of the sun are projected in this way. Only the furniture is real.

The method was used in Cologne in 1931 by a Russian artist, Nina Tokumbet. She has brought it to Covent Garden.

London and Provincial Opera Society, directed by Sir Thomas Beecham, opened the Wagner and Rossini Festival. Two complete cycles of "The Ring were on the program for the first weeks.

MRS. G. ANDERSON TO HEAD INSTITUTE

East Northumberland Branch Meets at Home of Mrs. S. L. Terrill.

WOOLER, May 28 (Examiner Correspondence) — On Wednesday afternoon some forty ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. S. L. Terrill to the meeting of the Wooler branch of East Northumberland Women's Institute.

The president, Mrs. George Anderson in the chair. Reports from secretary-treasurer and committees were accepted. Moved by Mrs. S. L. Terrill and seconded by Mrs. Crews that Mrs. W. Orvis act as chairman for the business meeting, election of officers by ballot: President, Mrs. Geo. Anderson; first vice president, Mrs. Fred Crews; second vice president, Mrs. Harry Crews; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. J. J. Way; auditors, Mrs. Arthur Scott and Mrs. Clayton Maguire. Other officers as directors and representatives were nominated.

The program was interesting, beginning with community singing, piano solo by Mrs. Robt. Walker. An excellent paper on plans for flower gardens of annuals, perennials, arrangement for borders, how to cultivate and plant from early spring until autumn bloom and closing with proper window boxes when to plant them and the variety of flowers to plant to make a beautiful showing of bloom and green, given by Thelma Bull, whose mother, Mrs. Doris Bull makes a specialty of flowers.

Many helpful recipes were given, especially dishes, palatable for the night meal. A number of new members were enlisted, increasing the membership drive that is on for the rest of the year. Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Gus Plumpton.

WAS CONSTIPATED FOR 30 YEARS

Woman's Long Search For a Remedy

The trouble with most remedies for constipation as this woman found, is that they give only temporary relief. Having at last found a permanent corrective, she writes to tell us about it:—

"For upwards of 30 years I was a victim of acute constipation. I tried practically everything that it was possible to try. I admit I was a chronic case, and every new remedy I tried helped for a day or two—after that I was just as bad as ever. Three months ago I took my first taste of Kruschen Salts, and every morning since and every morning so long as I live, my first duty upon rising is my Kruschen. I honestly feel a different woman. My bowels act to the clock, and my friends remark how well I am looking. My only regret is that I didn't try Kruschen years ago."—(Mrs.) A. M.

Kruschen Salts is Nature's recipe for maintaining a condition of internal cleanliness. The six salts in Kruschen stimulate your internal organs to smooth, regular action. Your system is thus kept clear of those impurities which, allowed to accumulate, lower the whole tone of the system.

Tea at its Best

"SALADA" TEA

Actual tests by housewives show why even the grimiest, ingrained dirt and grease yield speedily to Pearl White Naptha Soap. The rich, foamy suds are definitely quicker and more abundant. They draw out the dirt thoroughly without hard rubbing and scrubbing. Clothes come whiter and cleaner and smell sweeter. They last longer because there is no harsh washtub wear. These facts have been tested and proved. Pearl saves time. Pearl saves energy. Pearl saves the clothes.

There are many reasons why you will prefer Pearl White Naptha. It costs so little for a laundry soap of quality and its pure whiteness and clean, fresh smell will delight you. There's nothing like it to ensure a cleaner, sweeter wash in a shorter time.

IRISH FARMERS ARE OPPOSING LAND ANNUITIES

Many Farmers and Members of Their Families Been Imprisoned.

POLICE GUARD SHERIFFS.

Roads Are Blocked By Trees and Stone Walls Built Hindering Collectors.

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, May 28. (CP).—While the government of President Eamon De Valera is endeavoring to keep extremist Republicans at Bay on the one hand, his determination to collect, by force, where necessary, arrears on land annuities owing by farmers is creating on the other, grave lawlessness and unrest in Cork and other counties in Munster.

Many leading farmers and members of their families have been sent to prison by the military tribunal for promoting the campaign against the payment of the annuities to the Free State government while they say they are being collected several times over in the form of penal tariffs by the British government.

Special Police Force

Fuel has been added to the flames of resentment at government policy by the recruitment of a special armed mobile unit of the police force to protect the sheriffs and other court officers seizing cattle and furniture in default of payment.

The unit travels from farm to farm in lorries and carries portable saws for removing trees felled across the roads by farmers resisting their efforts. Its appearance in a district is invarably the signal for the lifting of sections of railway lines to prevent the removal of seized chattels and the cutting of telephone and telegraph wires and posts so police reinforcements cannot be summoned. In places where trees cannot be felled to block roads, stone walls have been built during the night for the same purpose.

The climax of a long series of armed raids on houses, firing of shots into dwellings of government supporters and into halls where parties supporting Mr. De Valera are holding social functions, was an attempt to burn the home of a Cork solicitor, a member of the government party who was absent attending The Dail. His wife and a two months' old child were ordered out of the farmhouse in a lonely district by masked and armed raiders who set the place alight by stuffing a room with hay soaked in gasoline.

Mysterious Ills

HAMILTON, May 28.—(CP).—A man of many mysterious ills, George King, no address, was found lying on the roadside and brought to hospital in the belief that he was suffering from sunstroke. This theory has petered out, but King has great difficulty in opening his mouth. "We can't find anything the matter with him," Dr. M. G. Brown stated to-day.

New pensions are still being issued in Britain to widows whose husbands are succumbing to old World war wounds.

RAILWAY MAKES BETTER SHOWING

HOPE FOR $180,000,000.

OTTAWA, May 28 (C.P.). — The net betterment of the Canadian National Railways for the first four months of this year totalled $946,000, Hon. C. P. Fullerton, chairman of the board of trustees, to-day told the House Railway Committee. Last year the total operating revenue had been $164,902,501. The railways had hoped to increase this to $180,000,000 this year.

"But," admitted the trustees chairman, "we can't make that betterment."

He cited an improvement of $85,587 in the Canadian Government Merchant Marine, $58,572 in the West Indies service of the Canadian National Steamship Lines, and $94,928 in hotels.

For three months revenue from sleeping cars had increased by $18,150 and dining cars $12,525.

If the railway could earn a gross of $275,000,000 a year the general deficits would look "pretty sick," said the chairman.

The annual taxation burden of the C.N.R. is $6,164,225, Mr. Fullerton said. Railway taxes totalled $5,243,858.

Other items entering into the operating properties, $161,570; and other details, $619,159.

GOLD RESERVES BANK OF FRANCE BEEN HIT HARD

Diminished in Nine Months About $594,000,000 Minister Reveals.

WITHDRAWALS INCREASE.

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press.)

PARIS, May 28. — With a Government demand for full power to restore France's finances, Louis Germain-Martin, Minister of Finance, revealed to the Chamber of Deputies to-day the gold reserves of the Bank of France had been diminished by nine billion francs—about $594,000,000—in the last two months.

The Finance Minister said the rhythm of withdrawals was steadily increasing the bank losing three billions between March 29 and May 17, three billions more during the week ending May 24,and an additional three billions in the last three days.

His plea to Parliament followed by a few hours an announcement by the Bank of France increasing its re-discount rate to 6 per cent. from 4 per cent., the bank's third raise in the rate since last Thursday.

Germain-Martin denounced the devaluation campaign in France and declared for economies and a balanced budget as the way to restore finances. He declared it "unjustifiable and dangerous to devalue simply because the treasury is temporarily in difficulty."

"There is not a state in the world,' he said, "which devalued before having tried to balance its budget.'

The Minister warned devaluation without balanced budget would threaten "the collapse of currency" and insisted devaluation means "catastophe for the vast majority of the country."

The Deputies listened quietly, and rather coolly, to the government's presentation of its Bill. After receiving the proposal, the Chamber adjourned until Thursday. .The Bill consisted of a single article reading:

"The Senate and Chamber of Deputies delegate to the Government full power to take, until December 31, 1935, all dispositions having the force of law and capable of achieving re-establishment of the public finances, resumption of economic activity, defence of public credit and maintenance of money. These decrees, taken into consideration by the Cabinet, will be submitted to the Chamber for ratification before July 31, 1936.'"

FIRST BIRTHDAY OF CANADA'S QUINTS MAKES HISTORY

(Copyright, 1935, by The Canadian Press).

Surpass Age-old Records

Five One-year-old Babes of North Ontario Remain World Marvels.

By A. E. FULFORD.
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

FROM premature, puppy-like infants, feebly responsive to energy from an eye-dropper, the Dionne quintuplets have developed in one year to healthy youngsters wielding spoons in a greedy attack on the cereal bowl.

CRADLED IN BASKET.

THE transition—from the slender tubes which dripped into tiny mouths a solution of milk, corn syrup and rum to the spoons and milk-filled tumblers held in chubby fists—was a modern miracle, a successful hour-by-hour fight against odds science counted insuperable.

Born in the bedroom of a poor northern Ontario farm home, the five girl children of a mother who fought off death in the minutes after their coming found their first crib a crowded laundry basket, their swaddling clothes remnants of cotton sheeting and old napkins.

None of the modern aids physicians find indispensable were present—none of the incubators, sterilized instruments and perfect food that often fail to kindle the spark of life in premature children born under conditions otherwise the best. There wasn't even enough water heated for the doctor.

The world lifted an eyebrow at the freak birth and waited for the babies of Elzire and Oliva Dionne to die. Even Allan Roy Dafoe, the common-sense country physician, held no hope for their recovery.

Science became interested as the babies' lives lengthened into days—weeks—months. A country doctor had accomplished what city specialists thought impossible. Recently Dr. Alan Brown, of Toronto, internationally known child doctor, said "their bone and muscle development would challenge the best-brought-up city infant with all the care a specialist could give."

To-day Yvonne, Annette, Emilie, Cecile and Marie cooed contentedly at Dr. Dafoe from snow-white cribs while the world sent birthday congratulations to the hospital built for them a stone's throw from their birthplace. They were the 33rd quintuplets of authenticated birth in 500 years—the first to live more than 51 days.

THE DOCTOR'S STORY.

"A modern fairy tale," the grey-haired, 52-year-old Dr. Dafoe called it when he told a Carnegie Hall audience in New York of the babies' birth. Of the call that took him from his bed to the eerie scene in the ill-lit Dionne bedroom at 4.30 o'clock, May 28, 1934, he said it seemed "unreal, dream-like."

To-day he had no better description for the happening that sent his name around the world and brought him fame after 26 years in the obscurity of backwoods general practice.

Looking back through the year, he told of the first frantic efforts to sustain life, the gradual building-up of strength in the frail bodies that came into the world two months too soon, the heartbreaking periods of weakness and the illnesses that threatened hourly to crush out little lives.

But it was still a fairy tale to the smiling little man—something that could not have happened.

"I thought every day they were going to die in those first four months before the hospital was built," he said. "Not until it opened last Sept. 21 did I begin to hope.

"I still wasn't sure they would survive, of course, but I began to think that the sanitary conditions and sunshine they couldn't have before might pull them through."

In a reflective mood, Dr. Dafoe described the primitive conditions under which the children were born and compared them with their present circumstances.

He recalled the scene in the Dionne farmhouse the morning after their birth, the fact two of them were born before he arrived. He was just in time to scrub up and deliver the third. The fourth and fifth were born with the amniotic sacs—angel's veils traditionally carrying "second sight"—intact and were left in them until he had tied the cords of the second and third babies.

The first cord had been tied by a midwife with the ordinary twisted thread from a spool. When the fourth and fifth babies were breathing and whimpering he ruptured the sacs and carried out the same procedure with them.

Then there was the baptism—"I didn't know how they possibly could live"—the centring of his attention on them to her who had lapsed into a condition of shock, the wild ride two and a half miles to Corbeil for a priest to give her the last rites of her church and her subsequent strong recovery. She never lost consciousness at any time and knew she had borne quintuplets.

WORRIES OF EARLY DAYS.

Dr. Dafoe went over the nightmare of the first two weeks, the constant alarms, the fear daily of attacks of cyanosis, due to circulation of improperly oxygenated blood, would take their lives. Equipment to administer a mixture of oxygen and carbon dioxide was rushed to Callander and saved them scores of times in the next four weeks.

Two days after their birth human milk was fed them instead of the milk-syrup-rum mixture. They started with 20 ounces and before they graduated to cow's milk on Oct. 29 were gulping 155 ounces each day.

Dr. Dafoe called June and July the "incubator stage" and August and September the "bed stage." In September came their most dangerous illness, a spread of intestinal toxaemia that clouded the official opening of the Dafoe hospital. Probably caused by improper sterilization of diapers, the disease attacked the youngsters on Sept. 12 and was not entirely cleared until Oct. 1.

Their slowness in recovering prompted the physician to move the babies from their farm home to the sanitary hospital in pouring rain on Sept. 21. The 100-yard trip is the only one they have ever taken.

After their recovery cereals were introduced into their diet and gradually they were put on evaporated milk. Orange juice and cod-liver oil were fed and they were given fruits and vegetables. They eat coddled eggs now, baked potatoes, baked apples, spinach, carrots, prunes, bananas, apricots, apple sauce—almost everything but meat. It will be a month or two before they reach that stage.

The first tooth among the five girls was anxiously awaited for weeks by the hospital staff. On March 12, when the quints were nine and a half months old, the nurses found a lower central incisor making its way through Annette's gums.

She beat Yvonne for the first tooth honor by only a day. On April 1, Marie produced her first and Emilie and Cecile were not far behind. It will be a year or more, of course, before they have all their "baby" teeth.

They grew so steadily and were in such perfect health Dr. Dafoe was able to leave them in December for his first visit to New York city, where he was enthusiastically received.

The months that followed, Dr. Dafoe recalled, brought grief in many forms in the quintuplets' affairs outside the hospital but there was no real worry about the children's health until April 17, when Emilie contracted a head and throat cold that rapidly spread to the others.

There was no doubt in the doctor's mind that a visitor had transmitted the germ and everyone but those closely concerned with the babies was barred from the building while they were undergoing the treatment that brought them to convalescence on April 28, when they were 11 months old.

Dr. Dafoe recalled proudly to-day that on only seven days of the long, severe northern winter were the babies forced to stay indoors. They spent three to four hours sleeping in the frosty air daily, sometimes when the temperature was 25 degrees below zero. There "wasn't a sniffle in the crowd" until their April colds.

YVONNE — Believed the first born of the five, she has held the weight title most of the time. Vain, coquettish, she is nevertheless a heavy eater.

ANNETTE — Produced the first tooth. Punched Yvonne in the nose when eight days old and became consistent challenger for weight title. Favors a rattle.

CECILE—Good-natured and lazy, she waited until each sister had a tooth before producing her first. She was last to recover from the Spring colds.

EMILIE — Sweet-tempered but a mischief-maker. She was delicate for a long time. Normally healthy now, she has a fine appetite and is a great sleeper.

MARIE—Smallest of the "quints" and the nurses' favorite. Quiet, with a lovely smile, she has the only birthmark among the sisters, a tumor, now harmless.

Father Farms As Girls Grow

Oliva Dionne Carries on With Daily Chores Among His Stock.

The sturdy French-Canadian stock from which Oliva Dionne and Elzire Legros sprung is conceded generally as having played a large part in the survival of Callander's five little wonder girls.

Oliva Dionne is 31 years old, five feet eight inches tall and weighs about 135 pounds. His brown-eyed wife, who celebrated her 26th birthday this month, is slightly shorter than her husband but of larger frame.

Elzire Dionne, now in fine health, suffered a relapse two weeks after her quintuplet daughters were born. In a month, however, she had recovered sufficiently to do her usual housework.

Oliva recalls the courage of his wife that eventful day one year ago—how she joked with her nurse while a newspaper reporter interviewed her and a photographer took pictures of herself and the tiny babies.

Although in better circumstances than the day the quintuplets were born, Oliva still rises early and performs his farm chores. He has a large dairy herd, a flock of chickens and several acres of land under cultivation. He does all the work himself.

Hope Quints Healthy as Their Big Sisters

CALLANDER, ONT.—(CP)—If the Dionne quintuplets are as healthy and happy looking as their older sisters, Rose and Therese, their mother will be well satisfied.

Watching Rose, who is seven, and Therese, six, play around their home, an interviewer suggested the quintuplets couldn't expect to be any better looking than their brown-eyed, black-haired sisters.

Mrs. Oliva Dionne, modest about Rose and Therese, eagerly agreed, nevertheless. "I will be happy if they are," she said.

All World Kens Of Bonnie Five

Papers in India Record Progress of Canada's Famous Kiddies.

World-wide, the fame of the Dionne quintuplets has spread to India and their development is chronicled in the newspapers often enough to keep Indians well advised about the latest events in their lives.

The Times of India, published in Bombay, follows their doings closely and recently said in its news columns:

"Canada probably holds more 'baby records' than any other country in the world. The Dionne quintuplet girls of Ontario are growing bigger and bonnier every day. In New Brunswick the Mahaney quadruplets, one boy and three girls, are now 11 years old.

"And at Brockville (Ontario) the other day proof was found that in 1834 a Mrs. Duval, of Williamsburg, gave birth to quintuplet boys, one of whom died shortly after birth. More amazing still, Mrs. Duval had given birth to quadruplet girls only 18 months before. Nine children in 18 months. Doctors declare this an all-time record."

Saint John's Quads Would Love to Meet Callander's Quints

Four 11-year-old Mahaneys Send Happy Birthday Greetings to the Five Sisters in Northern Ontario.

SAINT JOHN, N.B.—(CP)—The Mahaney quadruplets, Christmas presents in 1924 to William Mahaney, Saint John carpenter, extended congratulations and best wishes to-day to the Dionne quintuplets on their first birthday.

The three pretty 11-year-old girls—Edna Louise, Edith May and Lydia Christine—and their brother John Douglas, hope the five little quints have "lots of cake, presents and candles." Mrs. Mahaney wished Mrs. Dionne "the best of luck."

Edith May likes Marie Dionne best and sent her a special greeting. "She's so fat and cute," Edith explained.

"I like Marie best, too, but I like Cecile next," Lydia Christine said.

Edna Louise thinks Yvonne is the nicest quintuplet, because "she looks so sweet."

Unanimously the quadruplets expressed the hope they might be able to visit the Callander babies some day, but Mrs. Mahaney told her children they should learn to speak French first.

"Well, we'll learn French in grade six next year," said Edna Louise. "So we'll be able to speak to them then."

"I hope they send us a piece of their birthday cake," wished Lydia Christine. "The quints are too small to eat it anyway," put in John.

"If they do we'll let them come to Summer camp with us when they are older," promised Edith May.

"I wish they lived next door," John suddenly wished.

"Yes, and we could bring them over presents," added Edith May.

Five Babes Pictured in Six Great Albums

CALLANDER, ONT.—(CP)—On future birthdays the Dionne quintuplets may go to Dr. A. R. Dafoe's home and see themselves in every stage of their development.

Their physician has collected six thick albums of pictures showing the youngsters in every position imaginative photographers could conceive. He intends adding to the collection as the youngsters grow older.

The first pictures were taken when they were only six hours old.

Medicine Pays Dafoe Tribute

Physicians of Canada and U.S. Praise Work of Doctor.

Dr. Howard Kelly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, says of Dr. A. R. Dafoe:

"Birth of the quintuplets brought out of retirement one of the keenest and finest minds in American medicine. There is scarcely a doctor in any of our greater cities and medical schools who would have shown the same poise and that excellent judgment which has accomplished the impossible. . . . All honor then to dear Doctor Dafoe whose name will be one of the heritages of posterity."

Dr. W. S. Galbraith, Lethbridge, president Medical Council of Canada:

"The medical profession of Canada is proud of Dr. Dafoe. He exemplifies the highest type of practitioner, the family doctor. Diligent, self-sacrificing and traveling a difficult country, he kept himself up to date so that when his great moment arrived he was ready for it. He presents to all of us an outstanding example of conscientious practice."

Dr. Alan Brown, Toronto child specialist:

"That the Dionne quintuplets were born alive was a biological curiosity. That they have survived a year and are 100 per cent. physically is a triumph for modern preventive medicine. Dr. Dafoe has most ably applied his scientific knowledge of the growth and development of children in the rearing of these infants."

Dr. T. C. Routley, general secretary Canadian Medical Association:

"The medical profession delights to pay tribute to Dr. Dafoe, the skilled country physician who has amazed the world by his achievement. No finer example of accomplishment in one's chosen profession is on record to my knowledge. Dr. Dafoe typifies most completely the ideal physician. Canada may well be proud of him."

(Copyright, 1935, by The Canadian Press).

DOCTOR HAS BIRTHDAY, TOO.

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe has two birthdays of his own to celebrate after seeing the Dionne quintuplets through theirs. Last year he was so busy attending the quints he forgot his own birthday fell on the day after they were born. So he will have a double celebration this year. Born at Madoc, Ont., in 1883, he will be 52 on May 29.

New Nurses Come From Old Order

WHEN the Grey Nuns take over the care of the Dionne quintuplets Canada's famous babies will come under the protection of an order whose nursing traditions date back two centuries to the days when the Norman ancestors of the Dionnes settled French Canada.

Probably the best known of the female religious orders on the North American continent, the Grey Nuns community was founded in Montreal, Dec. 31, 1737, by Madame Marie-Marguerite Dufrost de la Jemeraye d'Youville. The real name of the order whose chief purpose is care of the sick, the aged and the infirm, and the upbringing of orphans, is the Sisters of Charity of the General Hospital of Montreal, but their sombre grey habit won them recognition as the "grey nuns."

Mother Wearies Of Old Question

Mrs. Dionne Not Pleased With Persistency of Rumors Regarding Family.

These reports of another blessed event in the Dionne family are getting beyond the joke stage to the mother of the quintuplets.

Busy farm wife and the mother of 10 children, she pauses resignedly in her work every few days and goes to the door to tell another inquiring reporter there is nothing in the rumor from Oshkosh or Chattanooga that the quintuplets will have a little baby sister or brother soon.

Mrs. Dionne never did like these personal inquiries. Their number in the past few weeks, despite her denials, leaves her a bit discouraged with a world that produces such rumors. Even if the reports were true it would be no one's business but her own, she says. However, Mrs. Dionne considers denials her only defence and continues to issue them as fast as new rumors are started.

She used to think it a joke and even now the matter strikes her sometimes as humorous. Recently she was asked the old question and replied:

"Not for the government."

The reports began two months after the babies were born. After several such stories had been circulated a Broadway columnist who specializes as the stork's advance agent said in December the little stranger would arrive in April. He even offered to bet on the date. Mrs. Dionne crossed him up.

She finds it even more annoying when the rumor mongers won't be content with predicting a single child. Recently she was told of a report from Scott's Bluff, Nebraska, that triplets had arrived at the Dionne home. That was too much for the quintuplets' mother. She threw her hands in the air, rolled her expressive brown eyes upward and moaned in mock agony.

Fed With Milk Of 12 Mothers

Twelve young Toronto mothers watch the Dionne quintuplets' progress with an interest enlivened by the knowledge they helped to keep the babies alive.

These unnamed women gave human milk the first week after birth when Elzire Dionne was near death.

An appeal by Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe was speedily answered by the Toronto Hospital for Sick Children, which obtained the milk from healthy young mothers.

The Ontario Red Cross, which has provided nursing service and borne other expenses, plans to step aside now, proud of its work.

The Red Cross appointed Madame Louise de Kiriline, experienced in her work at northern outposts, chief of the nursing staff. She was assisted by Miss Yvonne Leroux, Callander graduate of St. Joseph's Hospital, North Bay, and Miss Pat Mullins, also of North Bay.

Throughout the year the nurses became strongly attached to their little charges.

Nurses Know Babes' Colors Foot-prints Tell Who's Who

THERE is no danger of putting Yvonne in Annette's carriage at the quintuplets' hospital home or getting any of the five mixed. When the babies are bundled up for their outdoor nap care is taken that the proper ribbon is attached to each name-inscribed carriage. As a further check, the nurses make sure ribbon and blanket match color.

Soon after the babies were named it was almost impossible for even the nurses to tell them apart. Tiny bracelets with names engraved were provided. Little wrists outgrew the bracelets and then each baby had onyx beads with engraved gold hearts attached.

On the front of each perambulator is the medal of St. Christopher, patron of travellers. On the side is a silver plate bearing the full name of each "owner."

At times Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe and the nurses have amused themselves trying to name the babies at sight or by listening to their coos and laughs.

The experiment was no great success. But Dr. Dafoe won't be fooled. Long ago he had all five "footprinted."

Raising Of Tots Debated

Parents Ask Return of Infants to Make United Family.

By W. H. DUMSDAY.
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

FIVE healthy little babies start their second year of life unaware of the much-debated legislation that makes them special wards of the King in his jubilee year.

Arguments, interviews and petitions centre about the future of the five sisters who in one year won fame and a $151,000 estate all because they weren't born an different dates.

OBJECTS OF PARENTS.

Oliva Dionne and his wife want to shape the lives of their quintuplet daughters. They protest the guardianship legislation of the Ontario government that makes the children wards until 18 years old. The parents maintain they are capable of raising the quintuplets with their other five children and that the government's enactment divides the family.

Proponents of the bill in the legislature declared it would prevent exploitation of the famous babies and consequent danger to their health and lives. The legislation was designed to assure the quintuplets financial security, personal safety and best possible physical well-being.

Before the legislation was passed rumors circulated in Callander that the parents would cross the road from their farm house and "establish" themselves in the Dafoe hospital in protest against the guardianship bill. That same day Oliva Dionne and his wife called at the hospital, remained a short time and returned home.

Three days after the quintuplets were born, Rev. D. Routhier, priest of the Corbeil Roman Catholic parish, two and a half miles from the Dionne home, announced a contract had been signed by Oliva Dionne to exhibit the babies at the Chicago Century of Progress fair.

Father Routhier accompanied Dionne to Orillia, where representatives of the Chicago Tour Bureau were interviewed and the contract signed. It was stated the agreement stipulated the attending physician must first declare the mother and children well enough to travel. Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe refused permission to move them under any consideration.

Later the Ontario government, through Attorney-General A. W. Roebuck, declared the contract void, but before this was done the babies' father said he had been "rushed" into signing and was opposed to any exploitation.

FATHER'S PROPOSAL.

More recently Dionne stated through his manager that the parents would give Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn an affidavit stating if control of the babies were returned they would not be moved from the hospital for three years.

Last winter the Dionne parents carried out a three-weeks vaudeville contract in the United States that netted them $1,000 a week for personal appearances.

During their tour a writ seeking $1,000,000 for alleged breach of contract was served on the Dionnes in behalf of the Chicago Tour Bureau. With the parents the writ named the babies' guardians, the Ontario attorney-general and many organizations that were granted advertising and photograph contracts by the guardians.

Administration of the government's special legislation rests with Hon. David A. Croll's department of public welfare. The minister named three guardians,—Oliva Dionne, Dr. Dafoe and Judge J. A. Valin, of North Bay. The old guardianship board was composed of W. H. Alderson, Red Cross official; G. K. Morrison, Callander merchant; Oliver Dionne, the babies' grandfather, and Dr. Dafoe.

ADOPT-A-BABY-WEEK.

While the Ontario Government is making every provision for the welfare of the quintuplets, it has not forgotten other children under its care. Hon. David A. Croll, Minister of Welfare, selected the week of the quintuplets' birthday to appeal to citizens of the province to provide Homes for some of the 1,000 children in Ontario shelters.

His "adopt-a-baby week" was planned to bring before childless couples, or those with only one or two children, the advantages of taking foundlings into their homes and bringing them up as their own.

Father of two children himself, the minister believes the lives of the children and their foster parents would be made happier by adoption.

Police Took Over Grandpa's Guard

While birthday greetings pour in, two police officers stand guard at the hospital home of the Dionne quintuplets. Since report of a plot to kidnap the babies two months ago startled an admiring world the uniformed officers have been on constant duty.

But a guard for the babies is nothing new. All last summer Oliver Dionne, the grandfather, kept lone vigil at the farm gate and later at the newly-built hospital. When the tourist season ended he returned to his Callander home.

DIRECTIONS FOR MAKING SLIP COVERS WITH THE LATEST FRINGE FINISH

Slip covers are not difficult to make. This will be good work for Mrs. E. C. and Miss L. H. who ask for information about making them for chairs. The important matter is to have good patterns. As chairs differ so greatly in size, shape, and style there are but few of these slip covers that can be bought ready-made. And patterns are not available except for stock kinds. Directions are given today for making patterns and slip covers for chairs with attached seats. If chair has cushion seat, cover it separately. Cut front-back and front-arm portions long enough to extend under cushion seat.

• • • • • • •

NEWSPAPER PATTERN

Pin newspaper to the upholstery very carefully, fitting it smoothly over curves, and cut along contour edges. Start with the front-back. A rather ambiguous term, this, until you understand the meaning, which is merely the front of the back of the chair. If the upholstery is deep, lay a piece of paper along the top of it, and down the sides, if they protrude. Cut and fit these pieces. Pin paper over top of one arm. Fit and cut it. Pin paper to inside of arm portion, fit and cut. Pin paper to chair seat, fit and cut it. This completes the front-inside pattern for the chair.

• • • • • • •

PATTERN FOR BACK

For the back of the chair pattern, pin newspaper to the upholstery shaping it around outside of arms. Cut the fitted paper following outline of chair. Allow an inch or two at bottom edge. The back pattern should meet the front, or the strip already fitted over upholstery where the overstuffing is deep along the top and over the arm.

• • • • • • •

PATTERN ADJUSTMENTS

Unpin the paper. Fold front-back through lengthwise centre and cut it in half. Fold back pattern down lengthwise centre having arm portions come exactly together. Cut down fold. If there are discrepancies along edges, lay the folded half pattern on newspaper, and cut another pattern from it, having the outline extended to include the larger contour of each side. Now the pattern is ready to use for cutting the slip cover material.

• • • • • • •

SLIP COVER MATERIAL

When a homemaker makes her own slip covers, it is wise to select a plain textile, as there is an art in centering designs, and unless they are correctly centered, the work immediately bespeaks amateur craftsmanship. Plain textile does not have to be centered.

• • • • • • •

POSITIONING PATTERN

Lay centre front and centre back portions on lengthwise fold of goods. Cut arm portions so that the length of goods extends from arm top down to seat portion. Cut goods ample along edges, but not on folds which are centres for back and front. Baste portions together and fit over chair. Pin, fit cover, remove and baste a-new along line of pins. Refit cover on chair, and when it is right, cut away extra goods along edges allowing for French seams, or plain ones if edges are bound with binding in contrast to material.

• • • • • • •

ZIPPER FASTENINGS

When removing cover from chair, it will be discovered where in side-back seams (which should follow the seam-line of the upholstery) must be left open to get cover off and on. Zipper fastenings are now used for closing this needed opening, although snaps may be used.

• • • • • • •

VALANCE OR NOVELITY FRINGE

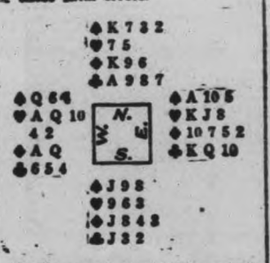
A ruffled valance is often put along bottom edge of slip covers. The very latest fancy is to use washable fringe for this lower edge finish. Fringe trimmed covers are smart.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. Shepard
"Teacher of Teachers"

A FATAL ERROR

An expert's pleasure at discovering the one way to defeat a contract is comparable to his delight in discoverine the one way to fulfill a difficult contract. When a player has two ways of defeating a contract and only one way of helping declarer fulfil it, both he and his partner feel upset in case the wrong method is followed. The hand today was the occasion of one of those fatal errors.



South passed, then bidding went: West ,1-heart; East, 2-no trumps, to force further bidding from partner; West, 3-hearts; East, 4-hearts.

The opening lead was a trump, one of the two methods of starting play capable of defeating the contract. The other method would have been to lead off the ace of clubs (as the cards were held) but that might have been the one way to allow West to go game (with other adverse holdings). Declarer took three rounds of trumps, leaving the last lead in dummy, and all opposing hearts drawn. On the third round of trumps North discarded his lowest spade, indicating the suit he least wanted partner to lead, although the opening trump lead showed North must hold the K of spades, as well as high honor strength in both minor suits.

Declarer led a low diamond and finessed the Q, although he must have known that the K lay at his left. Evidently the decalrer did not hold the Q-J of spades, or even the J, but he might hold the missing Q. North was in with his K of diamonds and he led back a low card of that suit, putting the declarer in with his ace. Experts read "signs" afforded by opponents' play as Indians do when following a trail. West knew that North held the ace of clubs, before the latter passed the first lead of that suit, allowing dummy's Q to win. The declarer led back a low diamond and ruffed. North knew that West held in his remaining 6 cards just 1 trump and 5 black cards, without knowing the division of those side cards in spades and clubs. When West led his second club it was the plain duty of North to win with his ace, then lead back a club. He took his ace, but he failed to lead back the club. He led back his 3 of spades, the one lead which could give fulfilment of the game contract.

The declarer smiled his thanks. Dummy played low. South put up the 9 and West won the seventh trick for his side. The ace of hearts, dummy's ace of spades and its K of clubs yielded the three added tricks required to fulfil the contract, which could not be made had the declarer been forced to lead spades.

Be Beautiful

By GLADYS GLAD

A French theatrical producer, whose show girls are considered amongst the most beautiful in the world, asserts that to be really perfect, any figure must possess thighs that touch each other, while the knees retain their natural positions. And according to Madge Bellamy, film actress, he's perfectly right. Madge says there are a good many girls who possess beautifully shaped lower limbs, but oftentimes, their thighs are not sufficiently developed and rounded out. And that, she believes, tends to ruin their perfect lines.

It is Madge's contention that at this time of the year, all femmes should give their limbs a thorough examination, with a view to improving any imperfections. That's certainly an excellent idea. The beach bathing days are not far distant, and bathing suits mean a great deal of leg exposure.

If, during the winter months, you have acquired thin, scrawny thighs, now is the time to get them back into shape. For it's a process that requires time, you know, and exercise is the basic remedy. Exercise makes the tissues active and healthy. It stimulates the circulation and enables the blood to carry nourishment to the starved tissues. And it results in the development of firm, smooth, muscle and softly-rounded contours.

Her Favorite

Madge Bellamy's own particular favorite for bringing about thigh development is a most effective exercise. To execute it, lie on your back on the floor, arms at the sides, palms flat on the floor. Then slowly raise your legs upward, keeping the knees stiff, and try to touch the tips of your toes to the floor in back of your head. After this, bring your legs back to a vertical position, and then very, very slowly lower them to the floor.

In addition to exercising, there are supplementary aids that may be used to assist in the development of scrawny thighs. Warmed coco butter, for instance, may be employed to supplement the above exercises, if the best results are desired. This preparation should be massaged gently into the skin of the thighs and permitted to remain on over night. This procedure helps to nourish the tissues and round out the contours of the thighs.

BARBARA STANWYCK AND "LADIES SHOULD LISTEN"

Barbara Stanwyck, with her clear, natural ways and her peculiar harsh-toned voice, is "The Woman in Red," in a picture with a title which is somewhat misleading. It hasn't the slightest tinge of underworld flavor, and is one of the interesting bits of film making that feature this clever actress. She seems very well suited to the part of a "straight shooter" who gets involved with an old family, the Wyatts of Wyattville, and runs foul of all their cherished and snobbish notions.

Gene Raymond plays a fine second to the lady's portrayal of a professional sportswoman who rides horses for show—and gets paid for it. He is an elegant amateur polo player who is much desired by a blonde and catfish widow (Genevieve Tobin), but Barbara (Shelby Barett) secures Gene (Johnny Wyatt) for her own and they are married in a queer elopement that includes a horse, the pride of a show stable. Before the final curtain, a murder trial ensues and there is a very fine bit of acting in a satisfactory conclusion to a snappy and most entertaining picture.

"Ladies Should Listen" is the second piece on this double bill, with a very good cast that includes the always-entertaining Edward Everett Horton the very good-looking Cary Grant and Frances Drake.

It is laid on the lines of a French farce of milk and water variety with most of the naughtiness extracted and a great deal of vivacious and amusing dialogue left in. There is a philandering hero who strikes up an intrigue with a very charming and beautiful married lady, but the husband, instead of being wronged, is just a member of slick duo that aims to trim the unsuspecting philanderer of a concession to South American mineral deposits. In farcical fashion, a lovely telephone girl intervenes and saves the aforesaid philanderer from numerous complications, not the least of which is a sudden marriage with a short-sighted rich young thing.

JUST AMONG US GIRLS

ROBERTA'S CHAT

A column conducted by a reader of The Examiner for her other reader friends. Address all mail to Roberta in care of The Examiner.

"Forgiveness to the injured does belong.
But they ne'er pardon who have done the wrong."
—Shakespeare.

Dear Friend:

Haven't you sometime been injured by a friend? Somehow they let you down. Maybe they criticized you behind your back, or left you out, when they invited others.

Yet when you met, they acted as if you were the one who had hurt them.

You've wondered what you could do about it. By right they should tell you they are sorry, but they don't, and the breach in your friendship grows wider.

There is only one thing to do, and that is, leave them alone. By and by, they will come back rather sheepishly, but if you try to force an apology, it will make matters worse.

As a merchant has to write off bad debts, so also will you have to think, that this is a bad debt against friendship. Do not let it corrode your life, but just remember that we all come up against these things. It's hard to explain, but if you have ever hurt anyone, it will bother you so much, that you will find excuses for yourself, and try to find cause against the other.

Life is full of contradictions and we have to take the bitter with the sweet, always remembering that we also, are not perfect.

Your friend,
ROBERTA.

LADIES' DAYS.

LAST WEEK was one of surprises in racing circles with Head Play defeating the mighty Cavalcade early in the week and on Saturday William Dupont's Rosemont took the measure of the great Omaha in the Withers handicap at Belmont Park. The latter was a decisive victory in a truly run race and at the end of the mile, Rosemont had a margin of one and one-half lengths and still going strong.

As we predicted the other day, the threatened strike of the horsemen is all off and peace reigns supreme again in Canadian racing circles . . . For the next six days we will see some large fields facing Starter Nipper Rowe at the Lenside Oval. They will consist mostly of the cheaper platers, but when they are evenly matched they provide far more contention than a horse like Stand Pat being chased home by a bunch of mediocre performers such as happened at Woodbine the other day.

AT THE present time Washington Park at Chicago has more horses than any track on the American continent. The reason for this is quite apparent as they are offering purses of one grand right along with a couple of handicaps thrown in each day while other tracks are trying to entice them with eight hundred smackers. Like any other business money talks and sometimes yells out loud.

Today is Dionne Day at Thorncliffe Race Track in Toronto, in honor of the now world - famous Quintuplets whose birthday it is. A race has been named for them and a specially prepared mammoth photograph of the babies will be presented to the winner of this event. Another race has been named 'Dr. Dafoe' in recognition of the noted and widely acclaimed country doctor who has successfully attended the 'Quints.' The feature race on the opening day card at Thorncliffe is the British Consols Handicap, for three-year-olds and upwards at a mile and a sixteenth. In addition to the purse the winner will receive a handsome silver tray.

W. R. (BILL) Woollatt, president and general manager, predicts a banner meeting for the Leaside Oval with plenty of action, contention and close finishes. These are the things the racing public wants, he claims, and they will be possible at Thorncliffe with over 600 horses seeking stabling room and nearly $40,000.00 in purses to shoot at. Also all the features which have proved so popular will again be offered, including the Daily Duet, One-To forms of wagering and five Ladies' Days, when the members of the fair sex are admitted to the track upon the payment of twenty-five cents, plus the government tax. The first race each day is at 2:30 Daylight Saving Time, while the Daily Duet closes at 2:15. The leading bus companies are offering special rates for out of town visitors.

OVERSEAS FOR THE BOXERS

NEW YORK (CP)—Four United States amateur boxers are getting a free trip to Paris this June. France invited the U.S. amateur union to send along a team for an international tournament. John Marcelline, Philadelphia flyweight; Jimmy Clark, Niagara Falls lightweight; Joe Bauer, Cleveland light heavy and Louis Nova, San Francisco heavyweight, are the lucky punchers.

WATCHES SON FIGHT

EDMONTON (CP) — When Lester Patrick came here recently it was the first time he had visited Edmonton since the old Western Canada Hockey League was sold lock, stock and barrel to National League interests. Lester came here to watch his son Murphy box in the heavyweight division of the Canadian championship.

England has only one male teacher to every 50 boys and one schoolmistress to every 25 girls.

With McLarnin And Ross During Training

Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarnin are here seen in informal shots taking at their training camps as they went through grooming exercises for the welterweight title scrap this evening. The Vancouver Celt, polishing up his boxing skill until he resembles the McLarnin of many years ago, rather than the lethal slugger of later bouts, demonstrates that his nerves are quite in form as he does a tight rope act, at left. Right shows Ross in the rough during a round of golf between sparring jousts. In centre Barney clowns a bit taking a slide down a play chute constructed in his training camp.

Port Hope Eleven Puts Up Great Battle But Lose to Whitakers.

CLEVER BOWLING.

While the School first eleven was scoring a narrow win after an exciting finish in Peterborough, their second eleven was putting up a gallant fight at Port Hope against Whitaker and they managed to avoid defeat leaving the game drawn much in Whitaker's favor.

The latter batted first and a fine innings of 56 not out by Hamilton, who received valuable help from Hawthorne (23) enabled them to declare their innings closed at 127 for 7 wickets.

In the early part of the school innings Brack (32) and Henderson (14) batted well but 6 wickets were down for 37. Gallant batting by Smith (29 not out and Lowe took the score to 82 for 9 and Miller the last man in kept up his end until time was called with the total 117 and an exciting game ended in a draw, which was hard lines on Whitakers and as creditable to the School as many a win. G. Colbran was the most successful bowler with 6 wickets for 53.

WOMEN WORRY ABOUT PANTS

SYDNEY, Australia (CP). "Wimbledon shorts" are the only kind that girl tennis players may wear on the courts of the Sydney golf and tennis club. But nobody seems to know what are "Wimbledon shorts." The girls here learned that Helen Jacobs wears "beach" shorts at Wimbledon, that Dorothy Round sports "divided skirts" and that Mrs. Aileen Bennett Whittingstall wears pleated shorts.

DOUBLES IN NEW SPORT

NEW YORK (CP) — The first game of squash tennis doubles was played here the other day. The new court game was originally intended as a singles affair but after one attempt at doubles, the players decided this team sport has potentialities. They play on a squash racquets court.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Alex Kampouris, Reds.—Belted his second homer of the year and batted in three runs in victory over Braves.

Enel Moore, Phillies.—Blanked Pirates for 4 1-3 innings in relief role as Phillies copped first win of the year over Pirates.

Cecil Travis, Senators.—Led early rally against Indians, connecting for two hits.

Johnny Allen, Yankees.—Held Tigers to three hits to annex his fifth victory of the season.

Al Bejma, Browns.—Hit homer which climaxed Brownie rally, driving in tying and winning runs against Red Sox.

Vernon Wilshere, Athletics.—Limited White Sox to seven well-spaced hits to chalk up his fourth victory of the campaign.

SAN FRANCISCO (CP) — Ben Eastman, the tall blond who holds the world's quarter and half-mile foot racing records, says he won't be competing this summer. The former California ace intends sticking to business in 1935, then training carefully for the 1936 Olympics.

ALLEN BREAKS ROWE 'JINX'

Holds Cochrane's Tigers to 3 Hits for 3-1 Victory.

MACKS DRUB SOX.

BY ANDY CLARKE
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York Yankees, dogging Chicago White Sox in the American Leage ball race, have a lot to be thankful for in John Thomas Allen.

The husky right-hander has a record of five victories and no defeats to date, and when he throws his fire ball in the late innings his arm does not shoot with pain as it did last year. Thus far he has pitched a total of 49 innings, struck out 38 and allowed 40 hits. One of the Yankees' "Dollar a year men," he has changed his price tag.

Yesterday he left the mound with a 3-1 decision over Detroit Tigers. He held Mickey Cochrane's boys to three hits, made four of them whiff and, in defeating 'Schoolboy' Rowe, shook off the hoodoo that chucker has held over the Yanks for the past two years.

Meanwhile Philadelphia Athletics were drubbing the leading White Sox 6-1. Vernon Wilshere, rookie portsider, kept the bingles of the Dykes boys well scattered while his teammates went to work on the opposing twirlers for 11 safe blows.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES!

By ALEX J. MORRISON

Number 616

Some players are afraid of topping the ball. Others worry about hitting too far under the ball. Most of the pros have a dread of hooking too much, but the greatest fear of all comes at the thought of a slice.

Seems funny when you stop to realize that Harry Vardon, one of the most consistent and accurate players of all time, built his whole game around a "controlled slice." Oddly, no player has ever hooked himself into a major title.

Many a chance to win fame and fortune has been blasted by an uncontrollable hook. Yet most players have a perfect horror of the flight that curves to the right. Why? Simply because they have been led to believe that a slice is disgraceful, a sign of weakness. Stop being afraid of slicing and you'll be on the road to eliminating it.

BEARS FALL BEFORE BATS OF SENATORS

Make Gain Effort For Win by 7-run Uprising in Ninth.

FINAL SCORE 13-12.

Redwings End Losing Streak By Defeating Buffalo 7-6.

(By the Associated Press).

Due to a losing streak which has resulted in the loss of five of their last seven games, Newark Bears today found themselves in the unfamiliar position of fifth place in the International League standings.

Playing one of the two scheduled games in the circuit while the Royals were idle yesterday, the Bears dropped a half game back of Montreal and 2½ games to the rear of the pace-setting Toronto Maple Leafs when they fell before the home run bats of Albany Senators, 13-12.

The Bears made a gallant effort to win the game when they staged a seven-run uprising in the last half of the ninth but Jimmy Caruthers, third of the Albany hurlers to see service, halted the rally one-run short of a tie.

Merrill May's second home run of the game with the bases loaded, Bill Baker's double and three singles featured the attack, but before it got underway the Senators themselves did some circuit swatting. Dee Kellett drove two out of the park and Ollie Sax and Bud Hafey got one each, while Ernie Koy added another for the Bears.

Wings End Streak.

Rochester Red Wings snapped out of a losing streak that saw them drop five straight and lose 14 out of their last 18 games when Johnny Mize blasted a long drive over the centre field fence in the 10th inning to give the Red Wings a 7-6 victory in the first night game of the year at Buffalo. Jim Moore and Jimmy Brown also hit homers for Rochester. Ray Fitzgerald was the main Bison threat, belting a home run with the bases full in the third inning.

ROSS REMAINS 7-5 CHOICE TO REGAIN WELTER CROWN

Both Predict Victory For Himself in To-night's Battle — Prospective Gallery of 35,000 Will See Steaming 'Grudge' Fight.

By Sam Robertson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer).

NEW YORK, May 28 (C.P.). — Jarring Jimmy McLarnin and bustling Barney Ross write to-night the third and probably most thrilling chapter of their pulsating ring drama.

Both has predicted victory for himself by a knockout, promising the prospective gallery of 35,000 that steaming punching will replace the rapier thrusts of their first two duels when the spoils were divided.

This morning Ross is a 7 to 5 choice to bang the welterweight crown from Jimmy's brow. The Chicago Jew has the advantage in youth and speed for the scheduled 15-round fight, but the Vancouver titleholder is confident the sleep-inducing power he carries in either hand is weapon enough to make him the winner.

The weatherman provides the only rasping note. "Showers this afternoon or to-night," he says. It seems, however, the fight faithful does not place much stock in him, for the ticket sale continues to bask in the warm sunshine of prosperity. A $200,000 gate is a strong possibility.

Both Optimistic.

Pre-battle statements from the two camps ooze optimism. The end of a training grind that set a record in length for McLarnin found him boxing like the McLarnin of old. The long siege of work also sharpened his timing to a finer edge than it was before either of his tilts with Ross last summer.

It remains, however, to be seen if he is the baby-faced killer he once was. His own opinion that he is came in his prediction that he will "KO" Ross in eight rounds.

Barney predicts that with his newly-found hitting power he can smash McLarnin into the resin of the Polo Ground ring for a 10-count, possibly as early as the sixth round, certainly not later than the 10th.

Talks a Good Fight.

"All I ask is a square deal. It won't be hard for a good official to decide the winner," read a statement from Barney. "The crowd will know who the winner is when they carry McLarnin away."

A counter one under McLarnin's name read:

"Some people have been saying that my days as the best of my class are over—that I am on the downgrade now. I wonder what these people say when they see the referee counting Ross out to-night?"

IS HOOLEY THE LUCK ONE?

MONTREAL (CP) — Hooley Smith, Maroon centre player, is one of hockey's lucky guys. People like him. When he played for Ottawa, Frank Ahearn gave him a fur coat. Somebody gave him a yacht when he came to Montreal. Kenneth Dawes presented him with a horse after Maroons won the Stanley Cup this spring. Now a Maroon director has turned over a Rolls Royce car to Hooley.

PRAIRIE GIRLS LOSE 53 TO 40 IN SECOND GAME

Canadian Champions Defending International Basketball Honors.

MEET AGAIN WEDNESDAY.

EDMONTON, May 28 (CP)—A 2-year record without defeat was ended to-day for Edmonton Commercial Grads, but the 12-times Canadian champions were still going strong in defence of their women's international basketball championship against the challenge of Tulsa, Okla., Stenos.

The swift-shifting United States girls handed Grads, defenders of the International Underwood Trophy since 1922, a 53-40 defeat last night in the second game of their five-game series for the international title. It was the same score as in the opening game, won by the Grads.

All square and at least a fourth game necessary, the teams clash again Wednesday night in the third game of the series. Grads won the trophy the first year it was offered for competition, and have held it since. In an exhibition series in 1933, Grads lost three straight games to Durant, Okla., Cardinals, but between then and last night had not suffered defeat.

GENERAL ROUTINE SOCCER MEETING

Schedule Committee Submits Games—Other Items of Interest.

Many interesting discussions prevailed at the meeting of the Peterborough and District Football meeting last night, in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, with President Ben McMaster in the chair. Only two members of the committee of fifteen—S. Ivison and R. Whitehead—were absent.

Special permission was granted to the C.G.E. and Canada Packers for the C.G.E. picnic at the Oval on June 15th.

Each member was handed a complete copy of the rules and regulations so that he may be acquainted with the laws of the game.

Referee Asa Downer complained about the similarity of the sweaters and brought out the suggestion that the home team must change in future. Also, the referees must be dressed in white shirts and black pants in the games scheduled to handle.

All transfers were confirmed on a unanimous vote.

The league schedule committee composed of William Anderson, as chairman, submitted their propositions to the association as a whole and were accepted. Their recommendation being that the Spalding Cup be given to the league winners and that the Clark shield be given the runners-up.

All Players Welcome.

The ground committee of the Brinton Athletic intimated that any players or prospective players will always be made welcome at their camp. They desire the sportsman co-operation at any practise game. This propcsition met the hearty approval of the executive.

Saturday, June 1st—C.P.C. versus C.C.F. in White Challenge Cup. Referee A. Frick. Linesmen, W. Jones and Ben McMaster.

The first mid-week game is scheduled for Tuesday evening, C. G. E. vs. Brinton on the Brinton ground at 5.30 prompt, with Asa Downer handling the whistle. George Nimmons and R. Carmichael.

All cups must be handed into the secretary, Art Siddell, 218 Braidwood.

A special meeting was called, after the regular business, according to the unanimous decision of the previous executive committee, but J. Isle objected to the ruling because it stated in the rules that it must be in writing and contain five members' names thereon. Immediately the request was signed by stipulated number and president has called a special meeting for Monday evening, June 10th, thereby withholding a decision on the question of players' registration and transfers.

SPORTS

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

DAY BY DAY

(By C. J. P.)

Over a period of quite some time—say a few million years or so—a lot of things have been laid at the door of Adam and Eve. Only the other day we came upon this under the heading "Wrestling" in Frank Menke's All-Sports Record Book: "Wrestling is the most ancient form of combative sport. It is not difficult to imagine that Cain and Abel, never really chummy, settled their early Garden of Eden differences by application of wrist locks, half nelsons and a few scissor clutches. Some grappling enthusiasts assert that Eve was the first wrestler. 'Didn't the serpent tempt Eve? they ask; and arid: 'And doesn't it say she wrestled with her conscience'?"

• • • • • • •

He goes on to outline the history of this sport, claiming it and racing are the oldest popular sports. Grappling was very popular by the Romans and Greeks in the distant past, and by the yellow race. There are three types: Graeco-Roman, a European style; jui jitsu, strictly Japanese; and catch-as-catch-can, the American mode. The latter type has in the past eight or nine years been opened up wide to permit flying tackles, elbow clips, airplane spins and even kicking and punching—although the last two are supposed to be illegal yet. Redhot action and showmanship is the order now and accounts for the newly-acquired U.S. and Canadian popularity of the mat matches.

• • • • • • •

The only real world's champion rassler was Frank Gotch, who retired undefeated in 1913 after 14 years in the game during which time he met them all no matter from what country they hailed. He lost occasionally but always came back to pin his victor next time. Gotch knocked down about $350,000 for his trouble but 250 G's isn't very heavy sugar to the modern headliners who stage several bouts a week instead of six or seven a year as the oldtimers did. And they pack 'em in now with their unorthodox and colorful performances. Gotch learned all about rasslin' under Farmer Burns, old mat warrior. And it was in Farmer Burns' rasslin' school that the Masked Marvel—who comes here next Tuesday got his start.

• • • • • • •

The Marvel is a maestro of every hold and trick known to the modern game but has the fundamentals as taught by oldtimers. He scales 220 pounds, is strong as a bull and local fans who have enjoyed seeing him here before will remember his agility and science. And he can be as dirty as they make 'em! The poor old Marvel always was the villain here but he seemed to enjoy it and looked for more boos. He tackles Bull Findlay, burly Englishman—210 pounds of him—in the main bout in the Armouries June 4th, and it ought to be a worthy top attraction on the three-bout card. This Bull bird is rated high in other centres, but we haven't seen him here so can only go by other newspaper accounts. But it sounds okay.

• • • • • • •

Knotty Lee and his ball team seem to be jinxed so far this season. They lost George Owen—smart Detroit infielder—before the schedule started, although his transfer was passed. Sig Konopka was refused a transfer. Russ Kitchen hasn't been out to practise for two weeks—a stomach disorder, we understand—and will be out for some time yet. Eddie Murphy injured a finger and hasn't been in a game yet. And Cy Whatley got a bad cut Saturday that may keep him out awhile. Have a heart, Miss Fortune, have a heart!

• • • • • • •

Archie Deyell—lanky righthand hurler for the Petes last year—went in for Palconbridge in a relief role yesterday as Frood Mines beat them, 6-5, in their opening intermediate 'A' game. No lineup was announced in the Toronto papers but we suppose Ike Batten was playing, too. Both these ex-locals have been working on the diamond at Palconbridge recently. And Bill Cripps—intermediate O.H.A. player here last winter—will be twirling for Creighton, in the same northern district, in intermediate 'A' ball this summer. We gather that you have to be a puck or ball star to get a job in the north now.

• • • • • • •

Monsieur Freddie Scales is pulling in his stomach and throwing out his chest these days, and why not? His Hood and Cummings' softball team is singing merrily in the canary's perch with three straight wins and no losses. They knocked off Fashion-Crafts, 8-3, last eve with Ted Naish pitching lovely ball and his teammates saying: "Collison? Who's he?" as they strode to the plate. The H.-C. crew seems to be the surprise package to date. The game in Omemee last night was called off. Omemee meets Hood and Cummings at Central tonight.

• • • • • • •

The gals' softball opener at the Bowl was rained out yester gloaming with Westclox leading C.G.E., 11 to 6, early in the fourth. Quite a crowd was on hand and it might have been a smart tussle only for the farmers needing the downpour. The Alarm Lasses went to town for eight runs in the first but the Electrics were settling down to make it a fight when the halt came. Barb Blade looked pretty fair on the mound, her speed and control bothering the other side plenty, though her support was nothing to wire home about. Keene is slated for Bailieboro this evening, Westclox goes to Keene Thursday and Bailieboro tackles C.G.E. at the Bowl Friday.

RAYBESTOS TO ENTER TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE

C. G. E. May Also Place Team in Intermediate "C" Baseball Loop.

"BO" HUNT TO PILOT.

Raybestos have entered the Trent Valley League and will play intermediate "C" baseball this summer with Marmora, Coe Hill, possibly a Belleville squad and the C. G. E. team from here. This decision came after an invitation was received from the T.V.L. yesterday, and the schedule will be drawn up June 3rd. Games here will be twilight fixtures in the Exhibition Grounds. The team will workout this evening in the Exhibition Grounds at six o'clock and all players wanting a tryout will be welcomed.

"Bo" Hunt has been appointed manager. A former player with Charlie Curtis' classy Maple Leafs—O.B.A.A. juvenile champions—and the Lockworks, Mercantile League, "Bo" has also managed numerous teams in the O.B.A.A. in the past ten years. He started such players as Tommy Poley and Cy Whatley—now seniors here—in bantam company in 1923. Hunt knows the game and can obtain results from his players.

The Raybestos team, a big drawing card in the Lakeshore League five years ago, disbanded in 1931 in order to bring back senior ball to Peterborough. They turned over players and equipment to the senior club and remained out of baseball till now. Fans and players alike will be glad to see this colorful aggregation back in the game this summer and playing in a new league—thereby permitting fans to see new squads in action here. It is unlikely that the E.P.L. will operate this year, and the C.G.E. team is expected to join up with the Trent Valley League also.

TRINITY WINS BY THREE RUNS

School Eleven Piles Up 96 Runs Against 93 For Local Cricketers.

PLAYED AT OVAL.

One of the most interesting games in the local schedule is the one with T.C.S. played at the Oval last Saturday, which resulted, after a most exciting finish, in a win for the School by 3 runs—96 to 93.

The School batted first and at 5 Keefer was out to a brilliant one-handed catch in the slips by Dyer. Cochrane, the captain, was out at 39 for a well-played 21, and with 6 out for 43, the locals were doing well. On Fleming joining Seagram a long stand was made taking the score to 91. After that the end soon came, Seagram taking out his bat for 28. Magee was out to a great catch at square leg to Pullen.

Peterborough started badly, Lawrence leaving at 3 and Binks at 5. Roe went in then to begin as good an innings as has been seen here was a very long time, and as long as he was in a win seemed assured. He hit loose balls very hard and showed restraint when the good ones came along. With Gore as partner, the score went to 45 for 3, and with Watson it rose to 66 for 4, and then Dyer stayed in until the total reached 79, leaving 18 to win, with 5 wickets to fall, with Roe still at the wicket. At 36 Roe was unfortunately run out. He had played a splendid innings for his side, as a glance at the score sheet shows, and his 45 included one 6 and six 4's. After his departure in their anxiety to get the few runs needed two more men were run out, and a match was lost which should have been won for the local side. Dyer had 6 wickets for 24. Roe 3 for 30, and Lawrence 1 for 27.

The scores:

MOTORMEN TOP SOFTBALL LOOP

Ford Eights Take Fashion-Craft Into Camp For 8-3 Victory.

PLAY IN DOWNPOUR.

Amid a steady downpour of rain Hood and Cummings wallowed and slid their way to an 8-3 win over the Fashion-Craft outfit last night at Central and went into sole possession of first place in the Men's Softball League. The poor condition of the field made good softball impossible but the winners had it over the losers all the way, starting out with a four-run rally in the first and were never headed after that.

Naish pitched his second win of the season and did it in most convincing style allowing the Hand-Me-Downs but three hits for a total of three runs and while his support was anything but steady he bore down in the pinches and was never in trouble at any time. Collison on the mound for the losers displayed his usual speed but his control, owing to the wet ball had him in hot water most of the time, issuing no less than nine free tickets to first and this led to eight runs being scored against him, enough to win the game with plenty to spare.

Caccavella and O'Leary with two hits apiece led the attack against Collison while Dorrington also with two accounted for all the Fords' hits. Playford with two and Abbott with one did all the hitting for Pashions and while several of their mates got on base by virtue of walks, they were usually cut off before they could get in a scoring position.

The fielding, despite the slippery going, was on the whole fair although many errors were charged to what on good nights would have been easy outs. O'Leary made the standout play of the game in the fifth inning when he raced in to snag a hard hit fly ball off the bat of Gainey while off balance.

The Teams

Fashion-Craft—Smith, 1b; Curry, rf; Playford, cf; Montgomery, lf; Collison, p; Stanger, 2b; Gainey, ss, c; Abbott, ss; G. Dormer, 3b; Mahood, c; Butcher, pinch hitter.

Hood and Cummings — Dorrington, 3b; McCarroll, 2b; Board, 1b; Gillespie, cf; Caccavella, rf; O'Leary, lf; Hartley, ss; McGee, c; Naish, p.

Score by innings—	R	H	E

OLYMPICS FOR DEAF

LONDON (CP) — Deaf people from many parts of the world will hold an international sports rally here from Aug 17 to 24. Seventeen nations will be represented. Track and field events will cover the complete Olympic program and there will be events for women. In addition the deaf people will swim, cycle, play football and lawn tennis.

Single Game Played In Church Softball

Only one of four scheduled Church Softball League games was played last night, St. Paul's Seniors taking a 23-19 decision over Trinity. The juvenile and bantam contests were started but were called off early due to rain. St. James' Juveniles failed to show up for their game with All Saints' and may lose this tilt by default. Games tonight: Murray Street Seniors vs. Mark Street, at the Oval; George Street Seniors vs Knox, at King Edward; George Street Juniors vs. All Saints, at Queen Mary; All Saints' vs. Knox Bantams, at Queen Mary.

In last night's fixture, St. Paul's again won a 5-inning tussle (the team always losing 7-inning games) between and during showers, which made for poor fielding. The Presbyterians pulled out of a 17-all tie in the last frame. Nicholls and Fleming, hurlers, were hit freely, with Clarke, Kelly, Marsh and Fleming hitting the ball hard. The teams:

St. Paul's: Ascott, 3b; Barr, cf; Broadley, cf; Marsh, 1b; McIntyre, c; Duncan, rf; Anderson, lf; Rowan, lf; Brown, 2b; Fleming, p; Leith, ss.

Trinity: Nicholls, p; Mattice, c; McFadden, 3b; Clarke, lf; Davern, ss; Wolstenholme, 2b; Cadd, rf; Sage, cf; McBain, 1b.

St. Paul's .. .. 3 10 2 26—23
Trinity .. .. 1 5 3 82—19

Umpires—J. Weir and M. Cadd.

ISLE OF WIGHT GOLF

COWES, Isle of Wight (CP) — In the final for the Isle of Wight amateur golf championship at the Needles course, J. E. Mellor successfully defended his title, defeating L. H. Campbell by 11 and 9 over 36 holes.

RAIN HALTS GIRLS' SOFTBALL OPENING

Westclox Leading C.G.E. 11-6 When Game Called in First of Fourth.

Intermittent showers of rain which finally developed into a steady drizzle forced the calling of the opening game in the Ladies' Softball League between the Westclox and C.G.E. last night at the Bowl. Russel Kitchen, past president of the league, pitched the first ball, with Alderman Bob Cotton doing the batting to start the season.

The Clockmakers staged a hitting spree in the first, scoring eight runs and when the game was called in the first of the fourth, they were leading 11 to 6. C.G.E. steadied down after a shaky start and would have apparently made it a battle if weather conditions had been right. Barb. Blade pitched for Westclox she walked one and fanned three. Mary McCarthy former Keene hurler, was on the mound for the Electrics, fanning one and passing four. Genevive Mann and Thelma Harris for the Westclox both slammed out clean homers. The teams:

C.G.E.—Martin, cf; Sanderson, 1b; Byers, 2b; McCarthy, p; W. Snowden, ss; Curtis, lf; Thompson, 3b; Ryan, c; Foster, rf.

Umpires.—Frick at the plate; Galbraith on the bases.

Golf

PETERBOROUGH CLUB

(By Mashie Nib.)

Another successful week-end sweepstake was held in perfect weather and some very good scores for so early in the season were recorded.

R. Abbott toured the 18 holes in a gross 72, which is the amateur record for the course; par is 70; his trusty putter was surely doing its stuff, but Dr. Jack Green took first prize. The clever southpaw went around in 77, less 12, net 65, against Bob Abbott's 72 less 6, net 66. Third place was captured by another southpaw, Charlie Cummer, with a 90, less 23, net 67.

Other net scores were:—

G. Edwards, 74; J. Essen, 74; C. V. Elliott, 77; S. Payne, 75; J. H. Vernor, 68; Terry Hall, 74; M. Ruiter, 74; R. L. Dobbin, 81; M. Shaver, 79; J. A. McKone, 71; Dr. C. B. Waite, 80; R. Cutting, 87; G. Richmond, 84; G. Clarke, 81; D. B. Palkner, 70; J. F. Strickland, 78; O. A. DeGraw, 75; C. Ackerman, 80; C. Westbrooke, 73; T. Holyman, 77.

GYPSY GIRL

CHAPTER 36

For an hour Consuelo and Doug drove in silence.

"Gypsy, don't you want to tell me what's the matter?" He was serious now.

She shook her head.

Tell him about this white man who is his friend? Ah, no! Tell him this white dog has another woman and have him say, well what of it, you might have known. The dog! That is why a gypsy was not good enough until she put away her gypsy clothes. That is why he is so busy and can't see me often. Little fool I am, little fool! She is his woman and she is star of the Follies. I am his woman and I am—pooh, one scene, once on, not a dozen times! Ah, how I have been fooling myself. This is a marble palace? This is the high hill? It is a swamp, a swamp of lies!

I have been fascinated by this white man and by the gold that flows through his fingers like water. When I saw him that day beside the train he looked good to me. When I wanted to come to New York to get revenge on Marcu I though it would be part of that revenge to give my body to him. I did not reckon that I might be only making a fool of myself.

"You're shivering, baby." Doug took off his overcoat and wrapped it around her.

But Marcu could laugh now! You sold yourself to me for a diamond and it was only a piece of glass, he would say. You sold yourself to the white man for the palace on top of the hill and it was a hovel! Fool! You thought you could play this game of revenge and win. You should have stayed with the van and been my woman and danced at the country fairs and given me your purse of silver when you had finished. I would love you and I would beat you but I would not take another woman as this white dog has done.

Bitter thoughts! The girl bent her head in her hands and the tears flowed down her cheeks.

Doug's arms were about her.

"Don't cry, my darling, don't cry! Oh, gee, but I love you, Consuelo. I love you. I could kill the person who has hurt you like this!"

She did not hear him.

She is his gal and she is star of the show. I am his girl and I am nothing!

Now is my heart crying out within me that I have been such a bad one. Now is my heart crying out for Girtza and the tenderness of his arms. Now is my heart crying out for the comfort of the forest and the brooks and the good cool earth beneath me. The rumble of the van—music. The sounds of Romany—or Lord! How lonesome I am. Marcu, this revenge I took upon you is bitter—bitter! I can't endure it longer! I go back to my people tomorrow.

The hope that rose within her died.

Back to the van—trailing home in shame? Marcu to kill you—or worse, to spit upon you and in spite turn his eyes upon another woman. Anica to laugh. Papa to hide his head with pain. And you, the Gypsy Consuelo, to admit defeat! No! No! No!

You came to New York to dance. Have you forgotten that? What does this pettiness of love concern you, then? What business of yours is it that this white man has another girl? Perhaps all white men have. That is quite all right—except the fact that she stands first. How do you like that insult? You come from a line of gypsies where their women have been famed for beauty; where the highest prices have been paid for brides and the hottest quarrels have been fought over the sigh of a gypsy girl's smile. Are you less than these? This is a challenge flung in your face. Do not let it blind your eyes that you cannot see to fight.

This man holds for you the marble palace and no man was ever won by quarreling—no white man. Now if he was a gypsy, you could spit on him and he would slap your lips and beat you, but then when he had finished he would take you to his tent and there would be no other woman there. But this is a white dog.

The high hill still beckons? Yes. The call to dance on top of the world? Yes. You know her dances and her songs. You are ready to step into her place. Gypsies get what they want? Have your gorgio clothes made you into a gorgio so soon that you hesitate to take this thing?

This is a game. You have played games before. She said, you know, that this Stewart Blackmire was the big one behind the show—that he had the say so. Well, if he loved you well enough he could say so, couldn't he? He could say so, couldn't he?

"Consuelo, my darling, you're shivering. There's a roadhouse further on a bit. We'll stop and have something hot to eat, eh what?"

No answer.

He could say so, couldn't he?

"Consuelo, will you look at me? I don't know who's hurt you so, but listen, my darling. I'm for you through and through. I'm wild about you and I stand as much chance as a—well, anyway, my dearest, I love you." He sighed. "Well, Doug, be yourself. You can't make love to a deaf wall all night. Snap out of it and remember who's paying you and her!"

Yes, he could.

The girl turned to Doug.

"Ah, my friend, you are a good one to endure this mad, crazy gypsy. I have been dreaming bad dreams, but now I am awake. I wonder if there is nothing in life that is as you think it is?"

"Little, my pet, very little. Here I'm wild about you and I thought you might kiss me and it is not as it is—"

"There you are wrong." She put her arms around him and pressed her lips to his tenderly, without passion, and it was much the same as she had kissed the Dummy that day so long ago—so long—eternities—yet the way man counts, only a short time.

But a tender kiss to a man in love is less than no kiss at all and tells him more than he wants to know. And Doug settled back in the seat and let his arm rest idly around her shoulders.

The next morning Stewart called Douglas over to his club to have breakfast with him. They remarked upon the market; had an eye-opener, and it was not until breakfast was served that Stewart brought up the subject that was on his mind.

"How are you getting along with Consuelo?"

"That's a personal question."

"I've asked you."

"Very well, if you feel that way about it. 'Fine' is the answer."

"Where did you go last night?"

"Say, is this a third degree?" He received no answer. He dropped the kidding. "She was sore about something and we drove into the country and didn't get back until sun-up. After all, you had a date with Lou."

"Know what Consuelo was sore about?"

"No."

"She didn't say anything?"

"No."

"That doesn't sound like a hot-headed gypsy!" Stewart shook his head. "Doug, I'm in a mess. She and Louise got together last night and found out about me—"

Doug whistle through his teeth.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, May 29

A day of more than ordinary activity and liveliness is the forecast based on the prevailing lunar and mutual aspects of the planets. Indeed, a day of upheaval and excitement may be expected, together with the launching of important and eventually successful projects. This may instigate the breaking up of old conditions with the rearrangement of the surroundings, current interests and associates. Much enterprise and initiative are indicated, with surprising and possibly mysterious or intriguing developments.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of great activity and progress, with new plans, projects, environs and associations. It is a favorable time for pushing in the direction of "big business" and advanced employment.

A child born on this day may be enterprising, resourceful, progressive and reactionary. It also may be moody, erratic and "peculiar" at times.

Cancer On Increase In The British Isles

TORONTO, May 28.—(CP).— A disquieting feature of cancer in England is a great increase of cancer of the lungs, Norman Patterson, surgeon of the throat, nose and ear department of the London Hospital, London, Eng., reported to-day. Mr. Patterson is here to deliver an address on cancer of the nose and throat to the American Laryngological Society convention.

English authorities, according to Dr. Patterson, blame the increase of lung cancer on gasoline fumes. He expressed his own conviction cancer was neither contagious nor hereditory.

"Cancer of the nose and throat need not be necessarily fatal," he said. At the London hospital an increasing number of cancer cases have been successfully treated.

61ST ASSEMBLY OPENS JUNE 5TH

Presbyterian Church in Canada to Celebrate Its Diamond Jubilee.

MEETS IN MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, May 28. (CP).—In the city where it came into being in 1875 through the union of four independent branches of the church the Presbyterian Church in Canada will celebrate its diamond jubilee here. The 61st General Assembly will open June 5 in First Presbyterian Church.

The date will be equally important because it marks the 10th anniversary of another church union when a section of the church separated to become a part of the United Church of Canada in June, 1925.

The diamond jubilee will be observed officially at a special night meeting Monday, June 10 and will be referred to in special church services on the previous Sunday. Officials are also considering a Sunday mass meeting in the Forum.

Among those mentioned as successor to Rev. Dr. J. S. Shortt, Moderator, are: Rev. D. T. L. McKerroll, Victoria Church, Toronto; Rev. Malcolm Campbell, First Church, Montreal; Rev. J. B. MacLean, Huntingdon, Que.; Rev. J. Keir Fraser, Alberton, P.I.E., formerly of Knox Church, Galt, Ont., and Rev. Hugh Munro, New Glasgow, N.S.

Prominent in the agenda will be the report of two special committees studying Knox College, Toronto. One investigated administration of the college and the other the complaint of Prof. E. Lloyd Morrow who was restored last year to his post on the staff after being dismissed in 1932. Prof. Morrow charged infair treatment.

BIRTHDAY GREETINGS

Oh there is great joy in Callendar
On this twenty-eighth of May,
For the famous five little sisters
Celebrate their first birthday.

And of course, they're having a party,
Not an ordinary one,
For there's five times as many presents
And there's five times as much fun.

Five little birthday cakes there will be,
By five little candles lit;
While around a table all their own
The world's famous five will sit.

Each one is dressed for the big event,
With ribbons and beads and lace,
And try as you will, you cannot tell
Which one has the sweetest face.

Each one to-day looks her very best,
With her hair so neatly curled;
The five little rogues, they have stolen
The hearts of the whole wide world.

Ten sparkling eyes that rival the stars
Wonder at this and at that;
While ten little chubby hands fondle
A doll or toy pussy-cat.

And costly presents are coming too
From admirers far and near,
Everything, even to diamond rings
For each little girl so dear.

Happy Birthday Quinties, I wish you,
And all the joys life can hold
For the famous five little sisters,
Who to-day are one year old.

Haliburton Village On Fire Several Times

(Examiner Correspondence)

LINDSAY, Ont., May 28.—A resident of Haliburton county, in conversation with The Examiner today stated that the people in the northland were breathing easier as a result of the rain fall on Monday and which continued until late in the evening. All danger from bush fires have passed, he stated.

A thick pall of smoke still hung over the country side. Many of the stories coming out from the northland, he declared were highly colored, the loss in property, etc. had been greatly exaggerated. But the stories relative to the danger to which the settlements were exposed for the past two days were based on facts. Haliburton village, The Examiner was told was seriously threatened.

On Sunday as the sparks fell in great quantities in the village, and ignited two or three fires. The fires covered a large stretch of country, licking up brush and scrub land. A couple of hundred acres of good timber between Eagle Lake and West Guilford were destroyed and W. Nicholls of Haliburton lost about one hundred acres of cordwood which was in the path of the on coming flames. The stories of further serious losses by lumber interests are without foundation.

Biliousness Entirely Checked

Sick since she was 15 years old, Mrs. Walter Smith, 40 Toronto St., Guelph, is now well again. She tells her experience in a legal statement made before a lawyer so you can be sure it is true. Mrs. Smith says, "Since I was 15 years old I was subject to bilious attacks that usually lasted two or three days. They were so severe that I would have to go to bed. The attacks came 5 or 6 weeks apart. No matter what I tried, I got little relief until I started Fruit-a-tives. After taking them for a few weeks I felt in much better health and my biliousness was entirely checked."

Fruit-a-tives are at once natural and scientific. They contain extracts of apples, oranges, figs, prunes and herbs combined with medicinal ingredients in accordance with the formula devised by the famous Canadian doctor who discovered Fruit-a-tives. If you suffer from constipation, indigestion, biliousness, or kindred ills, try Fruit-a-tives at once. You'll be amazed how much better they'll soon make you feel.

Copy of Mrs. Smith's complete legal statement will be sent on request. Write Fruitatives Limited, Ottawa, Canada.

NEW STORY STARTS WEDNESDAY

Lawrence of Arabia

The "uncrowned king of three nations," the leader of desert tribes which had been disorganized for centuries! While Luckner roved the seas like a pirate, Lawrence ruled as a mysterious, spectacular potentate in Arabia. Adventurer, poet, mystic, spy, and military genius, Lawrence, at twenty-six, rejected by the British Army as physically unfit, went to Arabia and single-handed destroyed the Turkish Empire! His career has been more eventful, more adventurous than that of any Arabian Nights hero. And his great adventure had as its stake the lives of thousands and the sovereignty of great kingdoms of the East. His genius altered the destiny of nations—and beneath the triumphant glory of his adventure, beneath the desperation of his battles and the paean of his victory, he remains at heart inscrutable, enigmatic. Read his story—told by himself with the fire and the genius of his heroism. It is the accepted classic of our time—read by 200,000 in the United States alone.

"Revolt in the Desert"

BY T. E. LAWRENCE

This story as outlined above will start in The Examiner Wednesday, the right of publication having been secured by the management, knowing that our readers will give it an enthusiastic reception and eagerly read the installments—more particularly in view of the recent tragic death of the author, the most attractive and mysterious historical personage of this generation.

Publication starts Wednesday, be sure to read the first installment and you will not fail to read each succeeding one.

Supreme Court Kills Farm Relief In U. S. A.

COURT BLASTS FARM RELIEF

CONSTITUTION CITED.

WASHINGTON, May 28.— (AP) Legislation enabling debt-burdened farmers to obtain a partial five-year moratorium on their mortgage debts was blasted off the statute books yesterday by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Unanimously, the high tribunal held the Frazier-Lemke act unconstitutional, speaking these words through the mouth of the veteran associate justice, Louis Brandeis:

"For the fifth amendment commands that, however great the nation's need, private property shall not be thus taken even for a wholly public use without just compensation."

This ultimatum pitched out of the court the 11-month-old moratorium act a measure designed to allow farmers to retain their lands for five years at a reasonable rental, despite efforts of mortgage holders to foreclose, and at the end of the five years to permit the farmers to fulfil the mortgage by paying the appraised value of the property regardless of the amount stipulated in the mortgage.

Reaction to the court's ruling was instantaneous.

Many Farms in Peril.

The bill was not considered a New Deal measure, although approved by President Roosevelt with reservations, and there was little official comment. In the northwest, whence originated the moratorium idea, Attorney-General Peterson of Minnesota said thousands of farms would be lost "unless a new law is passed to provide proper extensions."

In taking cognisance of such arguments, the court said:

"We have no occasion to consider either the causes of the extent of farm tenancy; or whether its progressive increase would be arrested by the provisions of the act.

"Nor need we consider the occupations of the beneficiaries of this legislation.

"These are matters for the consideration of Congress; and the extensive provision for the refinancing of farm mortgages which Congress has already made shows that the gravity of the situation has been appreciated."

Senator Frazier, Maryland Republican, a co-author of the legislation, said it was the only workable method so far devised to save the farmer who was deeply in debt and about to lose his home.

They May Rule Greece Again

A move for reconciliation between former King George and former Queen Elizabeth of Greece as a preliminary step to the restoration of the monarchy in Greece has been reported in political circles in Athens. This is one of the last photographs of the two together. They have not been in their native land since 1923 when the Greek republic was established.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy enter the mind;
But each shall seek the common weal—
The good of all mankind.

MADOC, May 28. — (Examiner Correspondence).—The twenty-fifth annual meeting of Madoc Women's Institute was held on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. James Whytock, with an attendance of 33, Mrs. Robt. Bristol presiding.

Events of the month were capably reviewed by Mrs. Gavin Wallbridge, after which Mrs. J. G. A. Stevenson gave two much appreciated vocal solos, "The Lass With the Delicate Air" and "Fires."

The president's address contained a brief review of the organisation of Madoc Women's Institute and its work from 1910 to 1935. This being its silver anniversary, she gave the names of the past presidents, among them being Mrs. T. H. Tumelty, Mrs. J. A. Caskey, Mrs. Nickle, Mrs. W. H. Kells, Mrs. T. E. Burnside, Mrs. C. N. Whytock, Mrs. W. J. Hill, Mrs. A. H. Watson.

She spoke of the excellent work accomplished by the institute in community work, war work and relief work, and thanked all for hearty co-operation during the year.

The secretary-treasurer reported 11 regular meetings and 3 special meetings, with an aggregate attendance of 609, and 35 papers and addresses given. Total receipts for 1934-5 are $269.05; expenditures, $208.22. Cash on hand, $40.83.

Reports of committees were then received:

Memorial — Mrs. E. West, convenor. Picnic table and benches supplied Thompson Memorial Park. Balance cash on hand, $104.96.

Flower committee—Mrs. C. Henderson, convenor. Flowers and fruit supplied to shut-ins and a wreath supplied on Remembrance Day. Expenditures, $11.90. Balance cash on hand, $5.06.

Relief committee—Mrs. G. White, convenor. Cash expended, $25.96. Box of fruit sent to Children's Hospital, groceries from cooking class, and clothing, shoes, rubbers and stockings sent to needy families.

Home economics—Mrs. R. Wickham, convenor. Papers: "Economies in the Home," "Dainty Trifles from Scraps of Silk, Lace and Wool," demonstration of inexpensive Christmas gifts, and "Dainty Supper Dishes from Leftovers." Roll calls: "Economy Wrinkles" and "Aids for Summer Cottagers."

Health and child welfare—Mrs. J. Irvine, convenor. Demonstration, five trays illustrating soft diet, liquid diet, etc., for the sick room. Papers on "Diet in the Sick Room," "Etiquette in the Sick Room," "Food Fads and Fallacies" and "Greens as Tonics"; also an illustrated lecture by Dr. McCullough on "Cancer and Its Cure."

Mrs. C. N. Whytock reported on historical research—Current events are capably reviewed each month. An address was given on "Pioneer Days" and a contest given on "Early History of Madoc."

Agriculture — Mrs. James Aylesworth reported a program. Roll call, "Insect Pests of the Farmer," and paper on "Evolution of Agriculture from Early Days in the World's History."

Girls' work—Mrs. A. Parks reported a complete Christmas program of solos, choruses, carols, readings and instrumental music put on by the girls which delighted everyone present. A class of 24 girls attended Miss Hopkins' coaching lectures.

Community activities were well summed up by Mrs. S. Ashley.

Reports on education, legislation and Canadian industries were not given owing to the absence of these convenors.

Mrs. C. N. Whytock presented the report of the nomination committee, which was unanimously approved and accepted, on motion of Mrs. J. Rupert and Mrs. W. E. Connor.

The following officers were appointed for 1935-6: President, Mrs. R. Bristol, re-elected; 1st vice, Mrs. R. P. Wellman, re-elected; 2nd vice, Mrs. J. L. Rutherford; 3rd vice, Mrs. A. Smith, re-elected; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. T. L. Nickle, re-elected; district director, Mrs. W. J. Rupert; branch directors, Mesdames James Whytock, A. C. Anderson, B. Tanner, R. Taylor, R. Wickham, W. Parks.

Chairmen of committees were also appointed: Memorial, Mrs. E. West; home economics, Mrs. E. Howell; health and child welfare, Mrs. L. McCarey; education and better schools, Mrs. W. Hart; relief, Mrs. W. E. Connor; historical research, Mrs. W. A. Hunter; legislation, Mrs. James Irwin; Canadian industries, Mrs. Ford Tumelty; community activities, Mrs. A. Corrigal; agriculture, Mrs. William Miller; publicity, the secretary; flowers, Mrs. W. Parks, Mrs. C. Henderson and Mrs. E. Phillips; music, Mrs. A. Kincaid and Mrs. W. Heslin; auditors, Mrs. Hugh Davies and Mrs. George White; representatives to district annual meeting, Mesdames R. Bristol, W. J. Rupert, C. N. Whytock, James Aylesworth, W. E. Connor; alternates, Mrs. E. Phillips and Mrs. W. Stewart.

New business introduced a discussion as to a new flag for Thompson Memorial Park, and on motion of Mrs. C. N. Whytock and Mrs. George White, it was decided that a large flag be purchased and donated, to be in charge of the veterans. Mrs. C. Whytock and Mrs. G. White were named as the purchasing committee.

The program committee, consisting of the executive and the chairmen of standing committees, were asked to meet on Friday, 7th, to prepare the year's program for 1935 and 1936.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. J. G. A. Stevenson for her vocal solos, and on motion of Mrs. G. Wallbridge, seconded by Mrs. C. N. Whytock, thanks were tendered to the president and her staff for the excellent work of the past year.

The National Anthem closed the afternoon, and a social half-hour was enjoyed.

FIREMEN CALLED OUT.

TWEED, May 28. — (Examiner Correspondence).—The fire brigade was called to a fire which occurred on Saturday morning at the home of M. McAvoy. It was caused by a faulty chimney, setting the attic on fire. Considerable damage was caused to the upper part of the home before the fire was extinguished.

CLEAN-UP DAY HELD IN APSLEY

Women's Institute and Burleigh Council Purchases Dumping Ground.

MEASLES AT OWENBROOK.

APSLEY, May 28. — (Examiner Correspondence). — Saturday was clean-up day in Apsley. The Women's Institute provided a team and wagon with men, who were kept busy all day carting refuse to the dumping ground, which has been bought jointly by the Municipal Council and the W.I. Placards will be posted by the Board of Health prohibiting the dumping of refuse at any place except this dumping ground, in an effort to combat the practice recently followed of depositing rubbish along the Jack's Lake road and other places.

Measles are very prevalent at Purdeyville and Owenbrook, and seem to be spreading westerly towards Apsley.

Mr. and Mrs. George Daniels, Sr., and Jr., of Brighton, with the former's daughter, Nellie, and Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Fuller, of Coe Hill, and Raymond Covert, of Brighton, were all guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Rosebush, Owenbrook, over the week-end.

Mr. Samuel Jay, of Toronto, and his brother, Albert, of Sheffield, England, spent the week-end Mr Apsley and Chandos.

Several of the summer cottages on Loon Lake were visited by their owners on the holiday.

TWO BALLOTS ARE REQUIRED FOR PRESIDENT

Bay of Quinte Conference Elects Belleville Minister As Its President.

CIVIC WELCOME.

Retiring President, Rev. G. C. R. McQuade Scores Tactics of Some Ministers and Congregations.

Rev. Dr. James Semple of Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, was chosen the new president of the Bay of Quinte Conference as the Conference sessions continued at St. Andrew's Church to-day. His election came with the casting of the second ballot by the assemblage of 400 lay and clerical delegates.

Considerable discussion regarding the election procedure preceded the casting of the first ballot. A move for nominations was defeated, and it was decided to choose the new head without nominations and without debate. The first ballot gave Dr. Semple leadership with 88 votes, Professor J. O. Watts of Queen's University running up with 38 votes. The second ballot gave Dr. Semple a clear majority with a total vote over the required 147.

Accepting Calls.

Ministers who accept calls to pulpits already occupied, in cases where no vacancy is in view, were rapped by retiring president, the Rev. Geo. C. McQuade of Oshawa as he spoke his farewell address to the Conference. He rebuked also the minis-

HELLMUTH PLEA IS OVERRULED

Asks For Stated Case For Presentation to the Court of Appeal.

SUCCESSION DUTY CASE.

LONDON, Ont., May 29 (C.P.).—Overruling the objections of I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., counsel for the Spencer family in the succession duty investigation, Commissioner John Cowan ruled to-day the question directed by Government Counsel B. A. Macdougall to Col. Alexander C. Spencer was a proper one and Col. Spencer must answer.

Col. Spencer must therefore disclose his present holdings in the Imperial Oil Company.

When the question was asked by Macdougall he argued it was vital to the proper conduct of the investigation which involves seven Spencer estates and possibly $2,000,000 in assets which the Government maintains were undisclosed for duty purposes.

Mr. Hellmuth immediately protested, declaring it left the way open for a probe of the private affairs of all beneficiaries. He said he was prepared to carry the issue to the Privy Council. The commissioner considered the objections overnight and when court opened this morning handed down his decision.

Mr. Hellmuth at once asked for a State case for presentation to the Court of Appeal.

The commissioner decided, however, to postpone his decision until further questions had been asked by Government counsel.

CROLL VISITED DIONNE PARENTS

Definite Proposition is Believed Made to Parents of Quintuplets.

MINISTER PLEASED.

CALLANDER, Ont., May 29 (C.P.)—Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare, paid a visit to the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne last evening after the broadcast ceremonies in connection with the quintuplets' first birthday, it was revealed to-day.

The Minister, under whose department the babies are special wards of the King, remained with the parents half an hour.

He had nothing to say about the interview, but appeared pleased. It was understood a definite proposition was made seeking a better understanding between the Ontario Government and the parents who have objected to the legislation governing their famous children, and that Oliva Dionne wished to consult Leo Kervin and Leon Dionne, his managers. Kervin was in the house during the interview, but took no part in it.

He was chairman of the board during the year 1926-27. Carey was born in Lucan, Ont., in 1867.

DR. ALLAN DAFOE GUEST OF HONOR

52 YEARS OLD TO-DAY.

CALLANDER, Ont., May 29.—(CP).—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe was all but smothered under an avalanche of congratulations to-day as he celebrated his own 52nd birthday and looked back on the happy observance of the Dionne quintuplets' first birthday anniversary yesterday.

Some congratulatory wires were addressed to the quintuplets and their parents but most of the hundreds that continued to pour in to-day were directed to Dr. Dafoe, the physician who delivered the "triplets and two more" to Mrs. Oliva Dionne before sunrise May 28, 1934.

Broadway stage stars and members of the Roosevelt cabinet joined leading Canadian figures in sending congratulations. The names included Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York, Secretaries Ickes and Perkins of the United States' Cabinet, Speaker Byrne of the U. S. House of Representatives and scores more.

Presentation Made.

The modest little physician who was born in Madoc, Ont., May 29 1883, piled them all on his desk for his attention when the excitement of the birthday observances had died down. Last night newspapermen marked the double event by entertaining Dr. Dafoe at dinner in North Bay and presenting him with an engraved silver pitcher.

It was held soon after the broadcast that sent the coos and cries of the year-old girls to countless listeners.

SIX ARE BURIED EIGHT INJURED BY EXPLOSION

Three-storey Dwelling in Manhattan is Completely Wrecked.

FIRE IN DEBRIS.

Several Buildings Adjoining Wrecked Structure Badly Damaged.

NEW YORK, May 29. (AP).—Six persons were feared buried and eight more were injured to-day when a powerful explosion of undetermined origin demolished a three-storey brick building on the east side of Manhattan.

Fire in the debris balked fire fighters who attempted to dig for bodies believed buried under bricks and timbers. After about two hours of frantic work, the flames were brought under control and searchers began systematically to tear the ruins apart.

Seriously Hurt

Four persons rushed to nearby hospitals were described as seriously hurt.

An added danger was threatened by the proximity of a huge gas tank located near the burning building. After frenzied efforts to prevent the flames from overheating the reservoir, the gas was drawn out.

Several buildings adjoining the wrecked structure were damaged by the force of the explosion. In a bird and pet shop next to the auto shop about 100 canaries were killed.

Officials were undecided as to the cause of the explosion but some believed an acetylene tank in the auto shop was responsible.

SEARCHERS FIND MISSING MAN

Missing Since May 19 Prospector Found in Northern Woods.

30 MILES FROM CABIN.

JELLICOE, Ont., May 29 (CP) — Exhausted from nine days of aimless wandering in the dense bush country south of here Joseph Belanger 55-year-old prospector and object of a widespread search rested in the Red Cross hospital today.

The missing man, who disappeared 19 while making a journey to Jellicoe from his mining cabin a mile south of here, was found by a searching party last night. He had walked approximately 25 miles a day, he said, and considered it a "lucky break" he was found although he was only 30 miles from his cabin.

Never Inside

"At night I built a fire and gathered wood during the night to keep warm. . . The nights were damp and cold—sometimes with snow and rain—I was outside all the time. Sometimes I shouted but there was never any answer.

"My clothing became torn, my hands became badly cut and my feet blistered. My only food was the buds from bushes and water."

"What does it feel like to be lost in the bush?" he was asked.

"Well," he replied, "it is an awful experience. Sometimes you felt like giving up—ending the dreadful suspense such as drowning yourself but you go on and on, always hoping you will be found, it is so quiet. You have nothing to do but think."

NEW YORK, May 29 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario left aboard a chartered plane for Indianapolis, Ind., today to attend the air races there.

Mr. Hepburn, along with Amelia Earhart, the flier; her husband, George Palmer Putnam; several newspapermen and airline representatives, chartered the Eastern Air Lines plane in which Captain Eddie Rickenbacker more than a month ago established a new transcontinental record. MissEarhart, airline officials said, will referee some of the races.

TWO HOUSES SEVEN BARNS BLOWN DOWN

Roofs of Other Houses, Orchards, Telephone Poles Swept Away By Wind.

ROADS ARE BLOCKED.

Damage is Estimated at $75,000—One Young Woman is Hurt.

SARNIA, Ont., May 29.—(CP)—Literally swept out of her home when a windstorm of almost tornado proportions hit this district early last night and did $75,000 damage, Miss Eva Park, 20, was in hospital today with a badly bruised arm and cuts and bruises about her body. Miss Christina Purves, 20 daughter of Robert Purves, farmer, was also in hospital with badly cut legs.

Sarnia Escaped

The storm went high over Sarnia itself and did not commence its destructive work until eight miles from the city, in Sarnia township.

Two houses and seven barns fell before the tornadic blast. Roofs on other houses, orchards, telephone poles, were swept away by the wind. A heavy rain followed and in several cases families took refuge with neighbors.

Miss Park was in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Park. She was swept out of the house with the door and carried over a wire fence into a field. Her father's automobile was blown out of a garage.

Escaped Injury

Purves was in his barn when the storm struck. The structure was uplifted but he escaped injury. His home was badly damaged.

Hydro and telephone lines were battered down by the storm and linemen worked throughout the night in an effort to restore service.

Roads were being cleared of fallen trees and poles.

J. M. Godfrey Conducting Inquiry Into Bankrupt Finance Corporation.

SEDGWICK'S REPORT.

Commissioner Promises Mr. Stevens He Will Be Given Opportunity to Explain.

TORONTO, May 29.—(C.P.)—Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Trade and Commerce Minister, suddenly appeared at the afternoon sitting of the inquiry into the affairs of the Manufacturers' Finance Corporation. A former director of the bankrupt corporation, Mr. Stevens stated he intended to demand that he be heard.

Mr. Stevens listened to the proceedings without interruption until that part of the report made by Joseph Sedgwick of the Attorney General's department concerning his activities as director was read. Mr. Sedgwick had stated Mr. Stevens had received $200 as "overseas expenses" from the corporation.

The Vancouver member jumped to his feet. "No, no," he shouted. His counsel, Norman Sommerville, K.C., interposed. "That just shows", he said, "the effect of having this evidence produced without allowing us a chance to prepare. Mr. Stevens did not receive any money to go overseas from the company and did not go overseas for the company. He did not receive a nickel."

Saved Man from Drowning

Plucky Girl Holds Fatally Injured Man's Head Out Of Water Until Help Arrives.

STRATFORD, Ont., May 29 (C.P.). — Fatally injured when a borrowed automobile he was driving plunged from No. 23 Highway on a wide curve near Monkton and overturned in a water-filled ditch late last night, Joseph Morrison of St. Mary's died in Listowel Memorial Hospital to-day. Miss Rose Dillon, St. Mary's girl, riding in the car with Morrison, is a patient in the Listowel Hospital, suffering from minor injuries.

Police credit Miss Dillon with saving Morrison from immediate death by drowning after the car had turned over in the ditch along the highway. Miss Dillon held the injured man's head out of the water until help arrived.

Coroner Dr. Riddell of Palmerston is arranging for an inquest to inquire into the fatality.

He had nothing to say about the interview, but appeared pleased. It was understood a definite proposition was made seeking a better understanding between the Ontario Government and the parents who have objected to the legislation governing their famous children, and that Oliva Dionne wished to consult Leo Kervin and Leon Dionne, his managers. Kervin was in the house during the interview, but took no part in it.

MARTIN CAREY IS DEAD

PORT HURON, Mich.—Martin Charles Carey, 68, veteran railroad man, died here yesterday. He was vice-president of the Order of Railroad Conductors from 1913 to 1927, and served on its board of adjustment for the western region from 1922 to 1927. He was chairman of the board during the year 1926-27. Carey was born in Lucan, Ont., in 1867.

DR. ALLAN DAFOE GUEST OF HONOR

52 YEARS OLD TO-DAY.

CALLANDER, Ont., May 29.—(CP).—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe was all but smothered under an avalanche of congratulations to-day as he celebrated his own 52nd birthday and looked back on the happy observance of the Dionne quintuplets' first birthday anniversary yesterday.

Some congratulatory wires were addressed to the quintuplets and their parents but most of the hundreds that continued to pour in to-day were directed to Dr. Dafoe, the physician who delivered the "triplets and two more" to Mrs. Oliva Dionne before sunrise May 28, 1934.

Broadway stage stars and members of the Roosevelt cabinet joined leading Canadian figures in sending congratulations. The names included Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York, Secretaries Ickes and Perkins of the United States' Cabinet, Speaker Byrne of the U. S. House of Representatives and scores more.

Presentation Made.

The modest little physician who was born in Madoc, Ont., May 29 1883, piled them all on his desk for his attention when the excitement of the birthday observances had died down. Last night newspapermen marked the double event by entertaining Dr. Dafoe at dinner in North Bay and presenting him with an engraved silver pitcher.

It was held soon after the broadcast that sent the coos and cries of the year-old girls to countless listeners.

Hon. David Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare, and Judge J. A. Valin, chairman of the Board of Guardians, joined Dr. Dafoe in the

SIX ARE BURIED EIGHT INJURED BY EXPLOSION

Three-storey Dwelling in Manhattan is Completely Wrecked.

FIRE IN DEBRIS.

Several Buildings Adjoining Wrecked Structure Badly Damaged.

NEW YORK, May 29. (AP).—Six persons were feared buried and eight more were injured to-day when a powerful explosion of undetermined origin demolished a three-storey brick building on the east side of Manhattan.

Fire in the debris balked fire fighters who attempted to dig for bodies believed buried under bricks and timbers. After about two hours of frantic work, the flames were brought under control and searchers began systematically to tear the ruins apart.

Seriously Hurt

Four persons rushed to nearby hospitals were described as seriously hurt.

An added danger was threatened by the proximity of a huge gas tank located near the burning building. After frenzied efforts to prevent the flames from overheating the reservoir, the gas was drawn out.

Several buildings adjoining the wrecked structure were damaged by the force of the explosion. In a bird and pet shop next to the auto shop about 100 canaries were killed.

Officials were undecided as to the cause of the explosion but some believed an acetylene tank in the auto shop was responsible.

SEARCHERS FIND MISSING MAN

Missing Since May 19 Prospector Found in Northern Woods.

30 MILES FROM CABIN.

JELLICOE, Ont., May 29 (CP) — Exhausted from nine days of aimless wandering in the dense bush country south of here Joseph Belanger 55-year-old prospector and object of a widespread search rested in the Red Cross hospital today.

The missing man, who disappeared 19 while making a journey to Jellicoe from his mining cabin a mile south of here, was found by a searching party last night. He had walked approximately 25 miles a day, he said, and considered it a "lucky break" he was found although he was only 30 miles from his cabin.

Never Inside

"At night I built a fire and gathered wood during the night to keep warm. . . The nights were damp and cold—sometimes with snow and rain—I was outside all the time. Sometimes I shouted but there was never any answer.

"My clothing became torn, my hands became badly cut and my feet blistered. My only food was the buds from bushes and water."

"What does it feel like to be lost in the bush?" he was asked.

"Well," he replied, "it is an awful experience. Sometimes you felt like giving up—ending the dreadful suspense such as drowning yourself but you go on and on, always hoping you will be found, it is so quiet. You have nothing to do but think."

Saved Man from Drowning

Plucky Girl Holds Fatally Injured Man's Head Out Of Water Until Help Arrives.

STRATFORD, Ont., May 29 (C.P.). — Fatally injured when a borrowed automobile he was driving plunged from No. 23 Highway on a wide curve near Monkton and overturned in a water-filled ditch late last night, Joseph Morrison of St. Mary's died in Listowel Memorial Hospital to-day. Miss Rose Dillon, St. Mary's girl, riding in the car with Morrison, is a patient in the Listowel Hospital, suffering from minor injuries.

Police credit Miss Dillon with saving Morrison from immediate death by drowning after the car had turned over in the ditch along the highway. Miss Dillon held the injured man's head out of the water until help arrived.

Coroner Dr. Riddell of Palmerston is arranging for an inquest to inquire into the fatality.

40 Fishermen Are Feared Lost At Sea

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., May 29. (C. P. Cable).—The French trawler, Marechal de Luxemburg was feared to-day to have sunk off the coast of Newfoundland with her crew of 40 fishermen.

The Marachal de Luxemburg has not been heard from since May 18, when she reported she was leaking and trying to make St. John's. Search for the crippled craft has been fruitless.

Men who must wear spectacles may now serve in some capacities in the British Navy and Marines.

Hepburn Will See Indianapolis Race

NEW YORK, May 29 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario left aboard a chartered plane for Indianapolis, Ind., today to attend the air races there.

Mr. Hepburn, along with Amelia Earhart, the flier; her husband, George Palmer Putnam; several newspapermen and airline representatives, chartered the Eastern Air Lines plane in which Captain Eddie Rickenbacker more than a month ago established a new transcontinental record. MissEarhart, airline officials said, will referee some of the races.

TWO HOUSES SEVEN BARNS BLOWN DOWN

Roofs of Other Houses, Orchards, Telephone Poles Swept Away By Wind.

ROADS ARE BLOCKED.

Damage is Estimated at $75,000—One Young Woman is Hurt.

SARNIA, Ont., May 29.—(CP)—Literally swept out of her home when a windstorm of almost tornado proportions hit this district early last night and did $75,000 damage, Miss Eva Park, 20, was in hospital today with a badly bruised arm and cuts and bruises about her body. Miss Christina Purves, 20 daughter of Robert Purves, farmer, was also in hospital with badly cut legs.

Sarnia Escaped

The storm went high over Sarnia itself and did not commence its destructive work until eight miles from the city, in Sarnia township.

Two houses and seven barns fell before the tornadic blast. Roofs on other houses, orchards, telephone poles, were swept away by the wind. A heavy rain followed and in several cases families took refuge with neighbors.

Miss Park was in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Park. She was swept out of the house with the door and carried over a wire fence into a field. Her father's automobile was blown out of a garage.

Escaped Injury

Purves was in his barn when the storm struck. The structure was uplifted but he escaped injury. His home was badly damaged.

Hydro and telephone lines were battered down by the storm and linemen worked throughout the night in an effort to restore service.

Roads were being cleared of fallen trees and poles.

DENIES GETTING $200 EXPENSES FROM COMPANY

J. M. Godfrey Conducting Inquiry Into Bankrupt Finance Corporation.

SEDGWICK'S REPORT.

Commissioner Promises Mr. Stevens He Will Be Given Opportunity to Explain.

TORONTO, May 29.—(C.P.)—Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Trade and Commerce Minister, suddenly appeared at the afternoon sitting of the inquiry into the affairs of the Manufacturers' Finance Corporation. A former director of the bankrupt corporation, Mr. Stevens stated he intended to demand that he be heard.

Mr. Stevens listened to the proceedings without interruption until that part of the report made by Joseph Sedgwick of the Attorney General's department concerning his activities as director was read. Mr. Sedgwick had stated Mr. Stevens had received $200 as "overseas expenses" from the corporation.

The Vancouver member jumped to his feet. "No, no," he shouted. His counsel, Norman Sommerville, K.C., interposed. "That just shows", he said, "the effect of having this evidence produced without allowing us a chance to prepare. Mr. Stevens did not receive any money to go overseas from the company and did not go overseas for the company. He did not receive a nickel."

103 OTHERS ARE FINED.

TORONTO, May 29.— (CP). — Pleading guilty to keeping a common gaming house at the Jolly Miller Inn, Hogg's Hollow, Louis James was fined $200 or six months by Magistrate Douglas Davidson in county court to-day.

In addition, James paid fines of $20 each plus costs of $1.50 on 103 persons who pleaded guilty to "being found in." His total fines amounted to $2,414.50.

John Holt, cook and waiter at the Inn, and William Bustin, chef-caretaker, were dismissed.

The scene in the court room today was the sequel of one of the largest gambling raids in Toronto police history.

WRITING DOWN C. N. R. CAPITAL WAS OPPOSED

Liberals Charge Government With Interference With C.N.R. Management.

MANION GIVES DENIAL.

Bennett Vetoed Writing Down Capital Structure Euler Claims.

OTTAWA, May 29 (CP)—Members of the House of Commons Committee on Railways and Shipping today were considering Liberal member charges that the present administration, through Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, had interfered with the management of the Canadian National Railways, and government denials that such was the case.

With Hon. C. P. Fullerton, chairman of the board of trustees of the government-owned system present, Liberal members clashed with Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals, yesterday on the question of whether or not the Prime Minister had opposed writing down the capital structure of the road. Liberal members of the committee charged that this was the case. Dr. Manion denied it.

Chairman Fullerton had made a statement indicating what had been done by the trustees in the direction of studying the question of writing down the railway system's capital structure, when Liberal members started their barrage. The chairman told of discussing this matter with Prime Minister Bennett, and receiving a letter from him indicating the Prime Minister "was against writing down the capital and that what was there would remain there."

Hon. W. D. Euler, Liberal member for North Waterloo, immediately took up this point. It was clearly indicated that the Prime Minister was completely opposed to writing down the capital, he said.

Dr. Manion denied this, and also strongly objected to a further statement by Ross W. Gray (Lib., Lambton West), that Mr. Bennett had exercised political interference with the management of the system. The present administration, said the Railways Minister, had been less guilty of political interference than had its predecessor or any other government, he declared.

Charges that the debate was merely "playing politics" were made by Dr. Manion.

The committee finally adjourned to meet at the call of the chair.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, May 29 (C.P.)—The cattle market was still very weak on the Toronto Livestock Exchange here to-day with only 400 head sold up to early afternoon. The holdover from yesterday was 1,100. The hog market was still unsettled but the calf, sheep and lamb divisions were steady.

Receipts as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch, were: Cattle, 470; calves, 580; hogs, 820; sheep and lambs, 310.

Butcher cattle were again 15 cents lower with a few choice at $6 to $6.35, and there were no sales on weighty steers. Plain butcher cattle sold down to $4.25. Cows were steady to 15 cents lower at $4.25 to $4.75 for the best down to $3 for common. A few canners and cutters moved at $1.50 to $2.50 while bulls were slow at $3.50 to $4.50 according to quality. A few good fed calves brought $6.75 to $7, with mediums ranging downwards to $5.50. Prices generally were on the downgrade and a heavy holdover was expected.

The calf market was slow, but prices were steady at Tuesday's decline. Choice calves sold mostly at $6 to $6.50, with a few tops at $7. Common to medium calves brought $4 to $5.50.

The hog market was still unsettled.

Spring lambs sold steady at $10 cwt., for choice, with common to medium selling at $7 to $9 according to quality. Sheep were unchanged at from $1 to $3 cwt.

ONTARIO GRAIN

TORONTO, May 29. — Ontario grain, approximate prices track shipping point—Wheat, 87c to 88c; oats, 32c to 33c; barley, 43c to 45c; corn, 56c to 61c; rye, 43c to 45c; malting barley, 53c to 56c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, May 29.—Winnipeg wheat was firmer yesterday with recovery at Liverpool in the later stages of trading and a moderate export business in Canadian wheat. Comparative steadiness in Chicago aided in creating better market feeling.

Pit buying was not large, but export sales were estimated at 500,000 bushels, with a little low grade domestic business also reported. Liverpool started out poorly, with losses as high as 1⅝d, but staged a strong rally to finish ⅝d to ¾d higher.

Winnipeg prices, after the previous day's slump of 2½c, closed ⅜c up to unchanged, with May at 83⅛c and July at 84⅝c. Buenos Aires prices were also steady, with noon prices ⅜c to ½c higher. Need of rain to germinate new seed was reported. Reports indicated that European weather is now more seasonal and the Continent remains a small buyer of foreign wheat.

In cash wheat there was a little demand for No. 1 durum and the spread on this grade was 1c better than in the late trading. Sale of coarse grains for export was the best in some days, and consisted of oats and barley, worked chiefly from Eastern points.

A 10c break in flax the past two days featured the coarse grain pit trade. At the opening Tuesday prices crashed to their 5c limit, but at the bottom levels good resting orders were encountered and 3 cents of the early losses were recovered.

TWO CHARGED WITH MURDER AT CORNWALL

YOUNG MOTHER AND TRANSIENT NAMED BY JURY

Coroner's Jury Finds Bonville Farmer Came to Death by Being Strangled.

THROAT FRACTURED.

First Believed Louis Volvey Had Died From Neck Fracture.

CORNWALL, Ont., May 29.—(CP)—Mrs. Louis Volvey, 28, mother of three children, and Clarence Cameron, 28, transient, today stood charged with murdering the woman's 55-year-old husband, a farmer of Bonville, 10 miles north of here.

The pair were arrested yesterday after a coroner's jury returned a verdict finding "Volvey came to his death by being strangled or throttled. We believe both Mrs. Volvey and Cameron had knowledge of this fact and were accessories to said act of strangulation."

Dr. E. E. Franklin, medico-legal

The death of Louis Volvey, 55-year-old Bonville farmer, who died on the night of April 22 was ascribed by a coroner's jury at the third inquest held in Cornwall, to strangulation. The jury also believed from the evidence that "both Mrs. Volvey and Clarence Cameron had knowledge of this act or were accessory to the said act of strangulation." Cameron, a friend of the family, who testified at two previous inquests, was arrested recently on a perjury charge. Mrs. Volvey was arrested after the inquest. Above are: (1) Clarence Cameron, with Provincial Officer Kennedy, following his arrest on a perjury charge. (2) Louis Volvey. (3) Mrs. Viney Belle Volvey, wife of the dead man, with two of her children, Tean and Jean. (4) Another photograph of the 28-year-old widow on the steps of her farmhouse. TRAVELLING BAG WINNERS NAMED CONTEST CLOSE FOR THE LEADERS

Race Was Very Close for Five Special Prizes for Travel Club.

STANDING THURSDAY

It is now 7.45 p.m., Tuesday, and the editorial department of The Examiner is anxiously awaiting the important Travel Club news which will announce the winners of the five special travelling bags offered to the five contestants turning in the greatest amount of subscription money up to last Saturday night, May 25th. It will still be several hours before the records are completely checked and re-checked to make sure who the winners are going to be. Some indication of the amount of space necessary to make the announcement, a portion of the copy should be in the hands of the editor prior to midnight tonight, and therefore since we are unable to give a complete story on the race for the special awards, the best we can do is to prepare a statement on what we now know about the standing and hand in the remainder of the copy before press time in the morning, because, as previously mentioned, it will no doubt be in the wee hours of the morning before the complete standing is decided.

Up to this hour of writing, we know that there are seven contestants who are extremely close for the special awards, and while we have a good idea who the winners

YOUNG STUDENT IS CONVICTED

SENTENCED JUNE 14.

NEW YORK, May 29 (A.P.). — Joseph L. Steinmetz, 22-year-old divinity student, was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree early to-day for the hotel room slaying of his 17-year-old bride, former Hollywood, Calif., High School girl. He faces a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison, although the jury "strongly" recommended mercy.

Steinmetz was accused of shooting his bride, the former Ruth Armstrong, and a priest, Rev. Joseph L. Leonard, when he found the former partly unclothed in the priest's room in the hotel here last November. He was tried only for the death of his wife.

The jury brought in its verdict after deliberating 14 hours and 35 minutes.

Judge Charles C. Nott, Jr., set June 14 as the date for sentence.

The prosecution charged Steinmetz shot his wife and the priest in a jealous rage. The defence maintained he was so intoxicated he did not know what he was doing.

Nature Is Refreshed By Heavy Rains

Terminating an unusually prolonged spell of dry weather, a beneficent life-giving deluge of rain descended upon Peterborough and district last night bringing relief to parched crops and joy to farmers and market gardeners alike.

Prior to the rain general concern over the abnormal dryness of the season had been growing. Forest fires were taking their toll in the northern section of Peterborough and adjoining counties; manufacturers locally were complaining of power shortage due to lack of water energy; and farmers and gardeners sought anxiously for many days for the expected relief.

While gardens and flower beds throughout the city had been kept fresh by water from the city mains, the unseasonable weather had been reflected in the slowness of the trees to burst into full leaf, and in the drab appearance of pastures and the countryside generally.

This morning the entire picture was changed, and the whole of nature appeared refreshed and re-energized.

FARMS REQUIRE RAIL SERVICES BOARD IS TOLD

Millbrook and Campbellcroft Vitally Dependent on Peterborough-Port Hope Line.

DECISION RESERVED

C.N.R. Regards Motor Truck Competition as Permanent, Solicitor Says.

Decision of the Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners on the application of the C.N.R. to abandon the Peterborough - Port Hope branch of the railway was reserved yesterday afternoon at the conclusion of Port Hope's appeal for the retention of the service in which the municipality is said to have invested more than $800,000 three-quarters of a century ago.

The chairman of the Commission, Dr. S. J. McLean, in closing the enquiry said that the case had been presented in a very fair spirit by both sides. The other Commissioners are Hon. T. C. Norris and George A. Stone.

Dr. Gibson briefly remarked in closing that the Board's duty was to weigh the local phases of the railway's service against the background of national economy.

Competition of Trucks

I. C. Rand, K.C., of Montreal, was present as solicitor for the C.N.R. He emphasized throughout the enquiry the serious inroads by motor trucks into the carrying business of the railways, and was inclined to discount the opinions of most of the farmers who were heard yesterday that farmers were returning to the railways for the shipment of their products, especially cattle and grain.

"I am not greatly impressed with the hopes or views expressed here that a considerable part of this business is coming back to the rail-

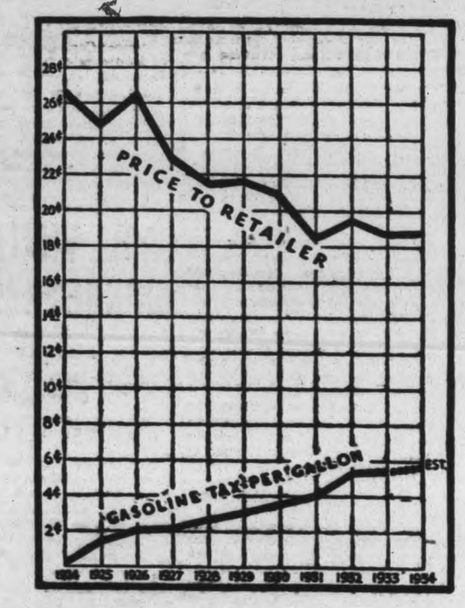
Hungary has tightened its ban on the importation of coffee, tea and spices.



The accompanying chart shows how the price of gasoline to the retailer has decreased and the gasoline tax has increased since 1924. The data for this graph are based on figures published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

LOWER PRICES—HIGHER QUALITY

EVER since 1920 the price of gasoline has steadily declined. Few people realize this however because during the past ten years as the price dropped the tax increased. In 1923 there was no provincial gasoline tax and the average price of gasoline to retail dealers across Canada was 27 1/10 cents per gallon. Today the average price of gasoline to retailers is 18 9/10 cents but to this is added a tax of from six to eight cents per gallon which goes directly to the provincial governments.

Not only has the price of gasoline fallen steadily since 1920 but the quality has consistently improved. The gasoline consumer today gets more value than ever before.

Sometimes you hear talk of large profits earned by the gasoline refiner. In 1934 Imperial Oil earned $3,023,400.12. This may seem to be a large sum but to earn that Imperial Oil had to make and market gasoline and other products amounting in value to $82,841,311.15. That is to say Imperial Oil's earnings were relatively no greater than those of a merchant who, selling $8,280 worth of goods in the course of a year, made a net profit of $300.

Conference Celebrates Tenth Anniversary of United Church

BAY OF QUINTE CONFERENCE IS OPENED IN CITY

Need of Greater Evangelism Stressed at Opening of Conference.

REV. PAWSON PREACHES.

Fitting Service Commemmorates Tenth Anniversary of United Church.

Ministers and laymen, filling to capacity St. Andrew's United Church, looked back over the brief but happy history of the United Church of Canada and commemorated the ten years which have passed since Union as the Eleventh Annual Bay of Quinte Conference continued last night. In anniversary addresses, Rev. W. P. Woodger of Cobourg and Rev. A. J. Wilson, minister and editor from Napanee, both reviewed the past achievments and looked into the future of the church.

The conference, which embraces one of the largest United Church regions in the province, got under way shortly after four o'clock yesterday afternoon. Presiding, Conference President, the Rev. George C. McQuade of Oshawa, led the large gathering in a service of worship and administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Emphasize Evangelism

A warning that the United Church must emphasize the evangelistic nature of its program if it is to combat a steady loss of members to certain newer Christian sects which have sprung up in recents years, was expressed in an eloquent sermon by Rev. Harry Pawson of Napanee at the opening service. Moderns have swung from the extreme position of Wesley, who said a minister had no other business than that of saving souls to the other extreme view that the minister's chief business is to save society, he said.

In the midst of all the "high-powered" social campaign towards saving the world, he continued, the deepest needs of the human soul are being allowed to go unmet.

Christian Science

"Whenever the Christian Church leaves out an essential part of its message, some movement always arises to emphasize it. That happened with Christian Science. Our churches had left out a vitally important truth: that it is possible in daily life so to demonstrate the available presence of the living God as incalculably to heighten the tone of one's health and happiness. Through that empty place in the church's message, walked Christian Science."

"The testimony of our rural pastors is that in certain areas our churches are becoming more and more embarrassed through losses to those who style themselves as representatives of an evangelical Christianity which they say we once had, but now have lost. It may be said that those who are thus won by the presentation of the Gospel which characterises the utterances and methods of such groups, belong to a social, mental, emotional grade which automatically strikes them out from the special mission of our church. We can scarcely heal our consciences though by such a consideration when we contemplate the work of the Oxford Group Movement.

"Not the people who flock to the Evangel Hall, but a quite different sort throng the "house parties" of Oxford Group. Their clientele —so even the group's critics say — is among the intelligensia and the rich and well-to-do. As the groupers say, their methods are designed for a special want and the justifiration is that not only do the "down and out" need Jesus, but the "up and out" need Him, too. And they are getting them.

Stresses Evangelism.

"Have we left out an essential part of our message? Shall we not humble ourselves and be ready to learn the lessons which God, it seems, is waiting to teach us? Do the work of an evangelist. Evangelism. The evangelism which stresses the personal relation to Christ."

The speaker mentioned several causes of the beclouding of evangelism in recent years, citing as one a narrowness toward the growth of modern knowledge. "That gracious word, 'Come to Jesus,' has been drowned in controversy."

Evangelism also has created a distaste for itself in the minds of Christians by disparaging and denouncing all ways but its own, he continued.

"We do well we ministers, to refuse to be arbiters in matters such as tobacco, moving pictures, theatres and the dance. It is not for me to tell a man what he has to give up or take on. All I have to do is to bid him 'come,' and when he gets to the feet of Jesus he will know what for him is sin and selfishness.

"This is not a small matter, for it touches the human soul at a point where it is most sensitive. Men refuse to be regarded as second or third-grade Christians or not Christians at all, because they do not bow to the arbitrary repressive ultimatums of men who are in no wise their superiors in the lasting and distinctive vestures of character."

President McQuade reviewed in a brief address the steps which led up to union ten years ago as he introduced Rev. Woodger and Rev. Wilson to the Conference congregation at the evening commemoration service.

Rev. Woodger

Rev. Woodger devoted his address to the subject "Ten Years of Union in Retrospect."

"The first years of union were devoted to getting acquainted and we all discovered we were doing the same work. Only the terminology and vocabulary were different."

He said he believed the United Church had acted wisely in not re-organizing to a too-extensive degree. Ten years have shown the wisdom of proceeding slowly, he said.

"I think we can say our church has experienced a wonderful sense of a growing solidarity" he continued. "No factions have been allowed to dominate the councils of the United Church in those years." He referred to the help the eastern members of the church have given the needy in the congregations in the drought-stricken West as evidence of the solidarity.

"We have sought to administer to our whole constituency. I think we can say we have kept our people definitely committed to a Christian life.

Dominant Note

"Looking back over these years, I think there is one dominant note we can sound, namely, one of thanksgiving." He said that, considering the many obstacles in the way of true unification which had been overcome, the peoples of the United Church ought to have a definite feeling of gratitude.

The United Church has stood many difficult tests since union, he said. No feeling of denominationalism has cropped up and no channelling along the former lines of division has occurred. A feeling that the United Church embodies the best points of the ingredient churches, exists, he said. He claimed that there also exists a feeling that the church is not just a United Church but also a "uniting" church—that union in 1924 was only the first step towards a really great union in Christianity.

Great Archievement

"There is a change of climate of which all churches are conscious to-day and in which lies all possibilities of growth" Rev. Wilson declared. He pointed to church union in Canada as one of the great achievements of recent years. The Canadian union, along with steps toward Christian union in England and elsewhere which have been apparent recently, augurs a hopeful future, he said.

The United Church is a living organism which must change to keep abreast of the times and keep in sympathy with the ever-changing thought environment of the modern world, he continued. The United Church is a "uniting" church but not with a view merely to make itself larger. It is a uniting church in the sense that it is prepared to move with evolving needs for greater unification of Christianity.

Speaking of possible future changes in the administration of the United Church, Rev. Wilson suggested the system of settling ministers might well be changed. He said the settlement should be carried out in a manner in keeping wth principles of brotherhood the ministers preach and believe. He mentioned as acceptable in Canada the system in England by which all ministers of the church are paid equally. Many other changes may be found desirable as the years go on, he said.

"We must continue and adopt ourselves to changing conditions or die" he concluded.

Haiti has a new law penalizing countries which sell to it but do not, in return, purchase at least one per cent of its exports.

expert of Ontario, said the Bonville, Ont., farmer died of strangulation due to pressure applied to his throat. It was first believed Volvey died from a neck fracture resulting from a fall downstairs in his home, April 22.

Cameron, charged with perjury at a previous session of the inquest which had been trice postponed, will appear in court Friday on that charge while Mrs. Volvey after appearing yesterday was remanded until June 4. It is expected Cameron will be remanded Friday until that date also when the pair will likely be jointly arraigned for preliminary hearing.

Mrs. Volvey, young brunette and of quiet disposition, had listened with much interest to the inquest proceedings. When the jury returned the verdict after retiring for only ten minutes she started with surprise as her name was linked with that of Cameron.

She turned to a woman companion and seemed about to speak, when a constable tapped her on the shoulder and asker her to step outside. She hesitated for a moment and then walked quietly out of the room.

Obituary

JOHN FRANKLIN DAVIDSON

TRENT RIVER, May 29 (Examiner Correspondence) — The death took place early Monday morning of John Franklin Davidson at his home near Trent River, West Seymour, after an illness of one week of pneumonia. The community was shocked to hear of his passing as Mr. Davidson was able to do his work only the week previous and had made a trip to Campbellford.

Deceased was in his 72nd year. Born in Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Davidson, he came to Seymour Township 60 years ago. He was twice married, his first wife was Edith Nixon, later he was married to Margaret Van Volkenburg. Surviving are his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Douglas Redner (Maimie) of Rednersville, Leatha at home, and one son Chas. of West Seymour, also one adopted sister, Mrs. Wm. Preston of Havelock road.

The late Mr. Davidson was a faithful member of Trent River United Church. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon, service at the house at two o'clock conducted by Rev. S. A. Kemp, pastor of Trent River United Church. Interment at Centre Church cemetery.

WILLIAM E. CARNAHAN.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 29 (Examiner Correspondence).—The funeral of the late William E. Carnahan whose death occurred on Monday afternoon at the private pavilion, Toronto General Hospital, took place from his late residence, Grand Road, on Wednesday afternoon, and was attended by large numbers of friends and relatives.

The late Mr. Carnahan was born in Raglin in 1873 the son of Barnar Cole Carnahan. He was of United Empire Loyalist descent, his great-grandfather having come to Canada in 1784 and settled in Adelphustown. The old homestead was on Carnahan Bay. For several years the deceased resided in Toronto, and was a charter member of the Bay of Quinte Lodge A.F. and A.M. During his residence in Campbellford he took a keen interest in the affairs of the community, and it was through his efforts that the Carnegie Library was built in this town. He was a member of the Library Board, and also served as town councillor.

Surviving are his widow, two daughters (Ruth) Mrs. Barrett Partridge of Toronto and (Helen) Mrs. Norman Griffith of Stratford, and one son, Edmund, of Buffalo, N.Y. Rev. Harold B. Neal, of St. John's United Church, conducted the services at the home and graveside.

The pallbearers were Messrs. John A. Anderson, Anson Connor, John Gay, John A. Irwin, Neil Morrison and Richard Weston.

Interment was made in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

POLICE BEFRIEND YOUNG TRANSIENT

Picked Up on Side of Road Suffering From Lack of Memory.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 29 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — Responding to a call from a Seymour Township farmer, Campbellford police made a hurried trip to the 8th Line near the Garnet Lloyd farm, where they found a young man, neatly dressed, apparently asleep on the side of the road. Repeated questioning bringing no answers, the lad was driven to town and made comfortable for the night, but still refused to talk or eat, so the police had a problem on their hands. A doctor was called, who stated that the man was suffering from a lapse of memory.

After a night's rest and a fairly hearty breakfast his mind seemed to clear up, explaining to the officers that he was subject to such spells as the result of a fall when a child, gave his name as Ronald Pollard of Toronto, and his age as 22. He thanked the police profusely for their kindness even offering to pay them for all the trouble he had caused, took his neatly packed suitcase, and started down the road towards Warkworth, bearing a note from the officials here explaining his condition should a similar attack come on again before he reached his home in the city.

St. John's League Closes For Season

CAMPBELLFORD, May 29 (Examiner Correspondence).—St. John's League held the closing meeting on Monday evening, with the president, Reta Palliser, presiding. Elva Mowat, social convenor, presented the program as follows: Solo, Mr. Hazell; reading, Enid Richardson; duet and guitar selection, Elsie MacPherson and Elva Mowat. A game period was then conducted by Enid Richardson. A feature of the evening was a very worthwhile address given by the Rev. F. G. MacTavish. A very interesting edition of the league paper was read by Kay Wilson and Ruth Palliser. Light refreshments were then served and the evening closed with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" and the Benediction pronounced by the Rev. Harold B. Neal.

Cars Badly Damaged Campbellford Crash

CAMPBELLFORD, May 29 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — In order to avoid striking two women at the intersection of Grand Road and Canrobert Street on Tuesday afternoon about 2.30, J. H. Bingham of Millbrook, traveller for a Peterborough firm, took the rap himself, and in the eyes of the spectators who quickly gathered, proved himself a hero.

The accident was unavoidable. Mr. Bingham was driving his coach south on Grand Road when a heavy Packard driven by Dwight Bennett, local undertaker, made the turn at Canrobert Street. Bingham had the choice of crashing either the women or the heavy car, and he chose the car.

No one was hurt, but both cars was badly damaged. The Bennet car had a front spring buckled, while the coach received a crumpled fender, twisted frame, and the steering gear put out of commission.

ceremony, but there was no voice from the Dionne home across the road from the hospital. The parents continued their objections to guardianship control of their children.

All the speakers eulogized the "sturdy, virile French-Canadian stock" as largely responsible for the continued life of the quintuplets. No representative of that stock would consent to have a part in the birthday party.

Considered No Honor.

"We don't consider it an honor to be invited by pure strangers to visit our own children," said Oliva Dionne in one of the few statements he has made in the year since the quintuplets were born.

Said Mr. Croll: "We have at heart only the best interests of the babies and their parents, and every step that we take is for their protection."

Oliva Dionne, however, charged he could not even attend yesterday's Mass at Corbell Church because he felt it was a plan to make him an object of photographers who, he charged, seek to make money "for their own pocket."

He charged further efforts were made to limit the rights of himself and his wife to see the babies, and he intimated improper profits were being made from exploitation of the infants.

PATENT RACKET IS CHARGE MADE BY HON. STEVENS

Electric Light Bulbs Too Dear Former Minister Says in House.

PROHIBIT IMPORTS.

Manufacturers Using Patent Act to Penalize Public is Charge Made.

OTTAWA, May 29 (C.P.).—Speedy progress in the passage of legislation, based on the report of the Price Spreads Commission is indicated in the House of Commons today. One bill amending the Weights and Measures Act on the recommendation of the commission, met with a favorable reception last night, and four more, amending the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, the Criminal Code, the Livestock and Livestock Products Act and the Interpretation Act, are down for second reading to-day.

A new patent act, amending and consolidating the law relating to inventions and the rights of inventors, occupied the House yesterday and drew Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Minister of Trade and Commerce, into a mild dispute with his former colleague, Hon. C. H. Cahan, Secretary of State.

Stevens Assails Measure.

While Liberal members sat silent Mr. Stevens assailed the Government measure which, he claimed, weakened rather than strengthened the protection afforded the public against exploitation by holders of patents.

The former Minister of Trade and Commerce charged the Canadian Patent Act was used by Canadian manufacturers, particularly electrical concerns, to enhance their own prices and exploit the public by stopping importations from abroad.

He claimed four companies, Canadian General Electric, Canadian Westinghouse, Canadian Laco Lamps and Service Lamp Company, had their patent rights to prevent dealers from importing bulbs from the United States and Holland, which they could sell from 28 to 35 cents each, after paying all royalties and tariffs, compared to 60 cents for the Canadian article.

Mr. Stevens claimed he brought the situation to the attention of the Secretary of State last July, while he still was a member of the Bennett Government, and nothing was done, not even his letter acknowledged.

The Secretary of State insisted he had investigated the complaint but could do nothing because there had been no petition as required by law. In any event, the revision of the Act, now before the House, would obviate any difficulties and redress any abuses which patentees might create.

Pigeon-hole Inventions

The former minister claimed corporations used the Patent Act for their own benefit, buying up inventions and pigeon-holing them instead of making them available to the people. He suggested a federal trade board—as proposed by the Mass Buying Commission—be established to administer the commercial side of patents. Mr. Cahan disagreed, he believed in responsible government.

The electrical companies, Mr. Stevens charged, were taking advantage of the act to enhance their prices 100 oper cent "and now we are calmly, deliberatly sanctioning the situation." They belonged, he said, to an international cartel which divided territory among themselves, including Canada.

If the government enacted the revised act in its present form, it must accept responsibility inside and outside the House, he insisted making his only reference to politics. He asked for nothing revolutionary, but simple justice for the consumers of Canada."

Moves Amendment

As a climax, Mr. Stevens moved an amendment to the new act which would empower the patents commissioner to revoke patents which were abused. It was one of the sections of the old act which had been left out because Mr. Cahan believed the revised bill had been strengthened by enabling the Minister of Justice or anyone interested in a patent to take proceedings. The day ended with the Stevens amendment undecided.

Under the new bill, Mr. Cahan said, if a patentee did not offer his goods to the Canadian people at a fair price or in sufficient quantities, his patent could be revoked. He claimed the new act was stronger than the old and offered more protection to consumers, an opinion not held by his former cabinet collegue.

Increases Penalties.

The bill amending the Weights and Measures Act receieved second reading in short order and was also passed through the committee stage except for one section which requires amendment. It was the first of the measures from the Price Spreads Commission to be dealt with. It increases the penalties imposed for giving short weights and allied offences and makes other changes in the Act designed to improve its effectiveness.

The move to force a lowering of interest rates on insurance policy loans sponsored by G. G. Coote (U.F.A. Macleod) received a temporary setback last night when its opponents talked long enough to prevent a vote in private members' hour. The measure fixes a maximum interest rate on such loans of five per cent.

A new fair wages and hours law received its first reading in the House yesterday. Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, sponsored it on behalf of Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Labor, who was absent. It provides for an eight hour day, a 44 hour week and fair wages on all work carried on under contract for the government and on all work to which the government contributes in any way by subsidy or grant.

The House at the same time received the assurance of Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals, that workers engaged in railway equipment shops on oders by the railways under the proposed government guarantee will receive fair wages and will work on an eight hour schedule.

Church Anniversary Is Subject Of Talk

RYLSTONE, May 29 (Examiner Correspondence) — The regular weekly meeting of Rylstone Community League was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Spencer with a good attendance.

Devotional talk on the 10th anniversary of United Church of Canada was given by Mr. Foley. Current events were given by Della Mumby.

Herbert Hoover of Wellman's Corners then gave a very interesting talk on a new economic situation and the church. Debate "Resolved that the auto is more of a curse than blessing to mankind." Affirmative side was taken by Fred Rutherford. Clarence Anderson: negative side. James Barnett, Kenneth Ray. Judges were Mr. Hoover, Mr. and Mrs. Foley, and decided that affirmative side won.

Rural Route Driver Is Lucky Fisherman

CAMPBELLFORD, May 29 (Examiner Correspondence).— George Leguire, rural route driver, is a lucky fisherman. George was not quite satisfied with a 5 lb. pickerel which he caught near the Hydro power house on West River road, so he tripped up to Hastings and threw a line in off the pier near the tannery, where he landed a fine specimen of the same tribe which weighed exactly six and one half pounds. The bait which took this one's fancy was a live minnow on a plain hook, so George now holds the record for the biggest fish caught in the waters of the Trent so far this season.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 29, 1935

THE SIGN OF A SQUARE DEAL.

In these days when "big business" is under more or less steady fire, it is a fortunate business concern that is able to present a clean sheet as regards criticism of its methods, and it is a wise concern that sees to it that the public is made fully aware of the fact.

In this respect the Imperial Oil Company, Limited, may be described as both fortunate and wise, for it has to its credit a record of fair dealing both with its employees and with the public, and it is presenting its case to the public through the medium of a very striking series of advertisements, several of which have already appeared in this paper, with the balance to run during the next few weeks.

These advertisements, effectively worded, are designed to impress the Canadian people with the fact that when they see an Imperial Three-Star oval sign they can count upon a square deal for everybody, for the consumer and for the worker who is engaged in making and marketing Imperial products.

Much has been heard in recent months of unethical treatment of workers, and the Imperial Oil Company does well therefore to show through the medium of newspaper advertising that those who work for the company are well treated, that they are not only paid good wages but they have sickness and death benefits and old age pensions, so that in affliction or old age they and their families do not become dependent on funds which must be raised by taxation from the public.

These advertisements strike a new note, and they should be read carefully by the Canadian public.

SMASHING THE NEW DEAL.

There is no disguising the fact that the unanimous judgment of the United States Supreme Court pronouncing the NRA unconstitutional has created a most serious situation across the border.

The verdict knocks the New Deal into the proverbial cocked hat, and leaves the Roosevelt administration flat against the ropes, with no solution as yet in sight.

The compulsory feature of the 731 industrial codes in force before the Supreme Court upset the apple-cart has, of course, been completely wiped out, and while industry is being appealed to to carry on with the schedules, and some concerns will do so, there is no doubt that many others will disregard the agreements and return to lower wage scales and longer working hours.

Organized labor regards the decision as a crushing blow, and union heads are already talking of immediate strikes should code wages and hours be scrapped.

General Johnson predicts that very nearly all the benefit of the NRA codes will be lost, and declares that a return to sweat shop conditions and child labor is inevitable.

The whole situation is most unfortunate, and Canadians who realize that, to some degree at least, their own fortunes are affected by conditions in the United States, will hope that some plan will be found to salvage the New Deal.

Incidentally the decision of the Supreme Court will serve to emphasize the constitutional side of Canada's reform legislation by which provincial rights are said to be invaded.

THE LAST OPPORTUNITY.

It cannot be too often or too strongly emphasized that those citizens whose names are not on the voters' lists prepared last fall, and who do not take advantage of the revision proceedings, will find themselves disenfranchised when the election is held.

Rural voters are in particular reminded that the revision of their lists is being held at the present time, and that this is the last opportunity for them to make sure of their votes.

They should not be misled by the fact that in other elections they have had the opportunity of exercising their franchise by being "sworn in" on election day, a privilege that was enjoyed exclusively by rural voters, because the new Dominion Franchise Act does not permit an elector whose name does not appear on a rural polling subdivision list to exercise his franchise.

If rural names have been omitted, they can only be added during the present revision, and when the revising officers have completed the sittings advertised by proclamation there will be no further chance for country voters to get on the lists.

Urban voters have until the end of June to have their names added, but after that date they, too, will be out of luck if they have failed to make use of the machinery that is provided for correcting omissions in the lists.

The wise elector will consult the lists at once and make sure that if his name is not on that there is ample time in which to have the correction made.

If this is not generally done there may be a large number of disappointed people when polling day comes round.

DANGEROUS PRACTICES.

Only two Peterborough cases are listed in the bulletin issued by the Board of Railway Commissioners in regard to dangerous practices of motorists, drivers of other vehicles and pedestrians at protected railway crossings.

It is reported that on December 12, 1934, at the King street crossing of the C.N.R. the driver of motor vehicle KK-533, after being stopped at the crossing by lowered gates, proceeded across just as the train cleared the crossing and collided with the gates, which were damaged.

On January 3, at the C.N.R. Charlotte street crossing, the driver of motor vehicle HO-118 is reported as driving too fast to stop, and skidding into the gate, breaking it off. The roads were slippery at the time, the bulletin states.

The carelessness depicted in these two local instances is duplicated or exceeded in numerous cases listed in the latest statement, which shows that the Canadian National Railway lines from September 1, 1934, to February 28, 1935, had 49 cases where there was danger at protected crossings, owing to the negligence of those using them, while from August 1, 1934, to January 31, 1935, on the eastern lines, and from July 1, 1934, to December 31, 1934, on the western system, the C.P.R. records shows 155 such cases.

As the bulletin points out, motor accidents are becoming more frequent because people take chances and disregard safety, notwithstanding safety devices and cautionary signals.

Certainly this statement from the railway commissioners shows a deplorable neglect of ordinary precaution and indicates the need of education for the culpably negligent motorist.

SOCIAL CREDIT.

With the arrival at Edmonton of Major C. H. Douglas, British economist and founder of the social credit movement in Great Britain, developments at the Alberta capital will no doubt be awaited with interest. As intimated in press despatches from Edmonton, only preliminary discussions have taken place so far, and it may be some time before any announcement of policy is made, if in fact any change should be made. Meanwhile, however, there is considerable conjecture as to just what is going to happen. It has been pointed out in this journal previously that Alberta's legislative powers in regard to currency are practically non-existent, and this being the case, it is a question whether there is anything likely to result from his visit to Edmonton or not other than that he will probably have considerable to say in the way of general economic advice.

There is much in Major Douglas' proposals that is difficult to understand; it would appear, however, that one of the main pints is that he would place a value on all the real assets of the nation, and would add to this the value of the capacity of the people to produce and deliver goods and services. Then it appears the value set on these assets would be credited in a national credit account under the control of the national treasury. This wealth would then be turned into money by issuing currency and credit against it under certain specified conditions. Then as national wealth increased it would be added to the national credit, and as it was consumed it would be debited.

Out of this account would be paid to every adult in the country what Major Douglas calls a national dividend by virtue of what he describes as the unearned increment of association.

In this connection he states that owing to the accumulated scientific knowledge which the world now possesses it is possible by machine processes to produce more real wealth with less labor. This capacity for increasing wealth, he argues, belongs to the community as a whole, not to any particular class or section of the people, and accordingly that is the reason that that part of it should be distributed out of the national wealth from time to time in the form of a national dividend.

Major Douglas is quoted in a newspaper interview as defining the national dividend as the difference between the consumable goods now (under our present economic system) bought or distributed and those which could be bought or distributed with the same amount of labor.

He claims to be opposed to communism and states that social credit is the greatest menace in the world to communism. He is quoted as saying that by socializing money and credit, that is the issuing of money and credit by the Government against the real wealth of the community and the community's capacity to deliver goods and services, the means will be provided of overcoming poverty without the necessity of the state taking over and operating the means of production. For this reason he maintains that social credit is the greatest menace in the world against communism.

It is pointed out in a recent article in the Journal of the Canadian Bankers' Association dealing with the Douglas theories that goods, whether durable or consumable, cannot be produced without somebody being paid to produce them, and the payments fall into three classes or groups—payments for labor services on the one hand, rent on the other hand with a residual amount for interest and dividend payments. "In the aggregate they represent that curious thing we call the net national income."

Saving, according to the Douglas theory, would appear to be something that throws the whole matter of distribution of income and the productive arrangements of the community out of gear.

One great weakness in the whole theory, however, would seem to be that in the world to-day one community cannot live to itself. It wants the goods produced elsewhere and it wants to sell its surplus elsewhere. This is one condition making it exceedingly difficult to see just how the Douglas plan would work. Surpluses of various kinds to-day exist. There is no doubt that faulty distribution of goods has much to do with it, but this will have to be remedied rather by practical processes than by complicated theories.—Monetary Times.

MEN ON THE BUSH FIRE LINES.

Camp B. Apsley, May 25, '35

To the Editor:

Dear Sir,—In regard to 'phone message I gave you a few days ago as to the extent of forest fires in this district, namely in the townships of Anstruther and Methuen, I noticed a few days later a lengthy report from Mr. Whitmore who is, I understand, fire marshal in this district. In that statement, if I have read it correctly, he claimed the message you received by 'phone was grossly exaggerated as to the seriousness of the fire and the number of men fighting it. To be exact, he stated there were 85 men all told and thirty-five of these men were from the road camp, whereas my 'phone message stated that at the different fires about 200 men were engaged in trying to check them.

Now to make myself clear to your readers I am stating that I personally am not assuming any responsibility for the correctness of my statement as I was only the instrument that did the talking over the phone and the information was passed to me by Mr. James McGregor, a resident of Apsley, and as far as I know a very reliable man. He is clerk for the northern development at this camp. In conversation with Mr. McGregor today in regard to Mr. Whitmore's statement he told me when the fire marshal phoned to our camp asking assistance on the date in question he told him that there was at that time 150 men engaged in that work and he requested 35 more from our camp so he based his number engaged in fighting fire on that date on the figures supplied him by the fire marshal himself. So, according to that statement Mr. Whitmore is solely responsible for "the gross exaggeration" of reporting the number of persons employed on the above dates.

Thanking you for your space, I remain,

Yours very truly,
W. Y. Scollard, Apsley.

What's in the Name of Canadian Cities and Towns?

BOBCAYGEON, ONTARIO

Situated in the centre of the Kawartha Lakes district, about 700 feet above Lake Ontario, Bobcaygeon was first settled approximately 10 years ago by Irish settlers who moved in to cut the heavy timber lands.

In the centre of a rich game and fishing district, Bobcaygeon is an attractive tourist centre in summer. The name is of Indian origin and means "shallow rapids."

TO ATTEND CONFERENCE

TORONTO.—Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Public Welfare and Labor, will be the province's representative at the conference of the Empire Parliamentary Association in London in July, it was reported at Queen's Park to-day. Official confirmation was lacking, and it was understood Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn would not attend.

Your Health

by DR LOGAN CLENDENING

The best food for the new-born baby is human mother's milk and, if possible, the mother should feed the baby up to the seventh or eighth month. If this time happens to fall in the summer months, it is best not to wean the baby even then.

Weaning is a gradual process, and in some instance supplementary feeding, which is partial weaning, may have to be given from the first. The question of whether to do this or not is one that calls for medical judgment, and is based largely on the question of increase in weight.

We are fortunate today in that medical ingenuity has been able to devise so many different kinds of artificial foods. Mother's milk differs considerably from cow's milk, especially in the form which the fat takes, but there is on the market available a product which is a very close imitation in all ways of mother's milk. This is a so-called synthetic milk. The basis of the mixture is cow's milk, to which has been added potassium salt and lactose, and special fat in the proportion of 4 per cent, incorporated by homogenization. The fat is a mixture of vegetable and animal fats with cod liver oil, having a melting point and chemical contents approximating those of the fat of human milk.

Cow's, Goat's Milk Standard

Either cow's milk or goat's milk will probably remain as the standard which most mothers will select to give the baby at the weaning period. The animal milk should be pasteurized or, preferably, boiled for infant use. If artificial feeding is to be the main source of nutrition from birth, animal milk will have to be modified, but if a child has thrived on mother's milk for seven or eight months, it is possible to introduce other things into the diet so that cow's milk or goat's milk is usually given unmodified and whole.

There are, however, many good form of milk that can be obtained. These so-called processed milks and evaporated milk are extremely good preparations. Evaporated milk can be obtained irradiated so that it contains Vitamin D. Evaporated milk is just what its name implies, cow's milk that has had half the water removed. It is put up in sterile packages and to be made ready for use simply has to have the water put back in. It is strongly recommended by most of the children's specialists that I know. It is not the same as condensed milk, and condensed milk is not recommended very widely by children's specialists.

Vitamins Added to Diet

Vitamin C and Vitamin D have to be added to any diet in order to prevent nutritional disorders. Vitamin C can be added in the form of orange juice or tomato juice, and Vitamin D in the form of cod liver oil.

Soon after the baby is entirely weaned other articles of food may be added to its diet. The most prominent of these are the cereals, such as oatmeal, corn meal, farina, wheat cereals, etc. Corn flakes, shredded wheat and puffed grain, or ready cooked package creals, are easily digestible and add variety to the diet.

Vegetables such as spinach, carrots, peas, string beans, lima beans, tomatoes, cauliflower, cabbage and potatoes can now be given, and the child should receive the yolk of one egg daily, at least up to the age of 14 months. After that a whole soft-boiled egg should be fed once a day.

Scraped meat—beef, lamb, mutton or chicken, can be added.

Fruits, such as oranges, stewed apples, peaches, prune pulp, or thoroughly ripe bananas, may be given as a dessert once a day. Simple desserts, custards and puddings, are also permissible.

Drying lakes and rivers in Africa are leaving millions of fish stranded.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Red Williams

OUR FIRST WESTERN ANGLICAN SYNOD

On this date (May 29) in 1857 the first synod of the Church of England was voted for in Western Canada. Just a year less one day before (May 30, 1856) Bishop Machray called a conference of his clergy and laity at Fort Garry at which he expressed the hope that the conference would be the first step to a synod. The matter was given careful consideration, both in the diocese and by the church societies in England, but no objection was raised, and on May 29, in Confederation year, the conference was, on motion of Archdeacon McLean (afterwards Bishop of Saskatchewan), seconded by William Drever, a lay delegate "resolved into a synod, to be called the synod of the diocese of Rupert's Land."

There was no legal obstacle to the further organization of the synod, but Bishop Machray, moving with that wise caution towards a determined end which characterized all his acts, deferred further progress until the proposed constitution of the synod had been submitted to the church societies in England, whose wishes had to be considered since they were the source from which finances came. Thus it was not until February 24, 1869, that the first synod actually met at St. John's College. The delegates were told that the constitution had been submitted to and endorsed by the Archbishop of Canterbury and the London societies, and the constitution was adopted without delay.

Bishop Machray was big enough to realize that he could not do everything himself and that Rupert's Land must become the mother of many dioceses. When he became bishop in 1865 Rupert's Land was one see, with 18 clergy; when he died in 1904, it had become an ecclesiastical province, with nine sees, over which he presided as archbishop and metropolitan. This great father of the church was, like Bishop Strachan of Toronto, born in Aberdeen and was only 34 when he was called to the direction of the church in the then wilderness of Rupert's Land.

DECIDED CHANGE IS EXPECTED IN STANDING OF TRAVEL CLUB

Club Members and Supporters Right Behind Their Candidate.

PLENTY OF EXCITEMENT

The winners of the special prizes are announced elsewhere in this issue of The Examiner. There is every evidence of decided changes in the standing from that of last week. This shows the possibilities of what might happen before the end of the race. Every Travel Club member who has been and is still putting forth a reasonable effort is still an important factor in the race for the first ten positions. Competition is keen and close—astonishingly close in many cases. Those who have gained an advantage in the race will have to strive to hold it. Those who would appear to be in less favored positions will be striving to better their standing.

It has been very gratifying indeed to see how both the club members and their supporters have entered into the spirit of this friendly competition, which is a good indication of the high pitch of interest and excitement that will be reached by the close of the contest. A general feeling of good sportsmanship exists everywhere. Truly the trip of a life-time is within reach of every lady competing, and it is worth everyone's while to make the best of the short time remaining.

Plenty of Excitement.

It is a long time since so much interest has been aroused, especially through the rural communities, as has been since The Examiner Travel Club commenced. A little excitement and fun is good for everyone, and the Travel Club seems to produce just that thing.

In practically every case, readers express their desire to help the club members, and the reason that more assistance is not given in many cases is because there is a lack of knowledge as to what will bring the most votes. For after all votes are going to decide the winners. A common expression is, "We'd love to help; we'd love to see you win." It might be well, therefore, to mention a few points that would be of interest both to the club members and their supporters. It isn't a case of obtaining just a CERTAIN NUMBER of votes to win. Every candidate needs every vote that can be obtained to-day, to-morrow, the next day and so on—to the end of the contest. Club members should explain clearly to their supporters how most votes can be obtained. Something very important for club members to keep in mind from now on—and explain to supporters—is the additional votes obtained on SECOND PAYMENT subscriptions, and also on NEW subscriptions. Supporters of the club members may have friends who would appreciate The Examiner. A new subscription, by sending the paper to a friend, will bring thousands of extra votes to the club member.

Some supporters, with the best of intentions, say to club members, "If you need my help before the contest is over I'll give you a subscription." NOW is the time for help—the earliest possible moment—because no club member knows what their competitors are doing. Moreover, help now brings thousands of votes more than later. Then again, subscribers are not committing "the Unpardonable Sin" by supporting more than one candidate. Remember, the first ten ladies win trips! Why shouldn't a subscriber help more than one to win?

The other day one of the club members, after driving some distance from home, called on a gentleman who had subscribed with another member. When asked for support, his reply was: "I subscribed with ———, but I am only paid six months in advance. I would like to see you both win a trip. Six months will soon slip by and I'll be renewing again anyway. It isn't going to cost me anything extra, so I might as well give you six months and I won't need to bother with it again for a year." This was a very reasonable attitude, and doubtless there will be two happy ladies as a result. Subscribers will be well satisfied if they renew in advance to help a candidate. Both will be happy, the one because of the help given, the other because of the help received. Because after all it would seem a shame, in the case of subscribers renewing a month or two after the contest was over, when someone might have realized thousands of votes for renewals paid a little before their expiration date. Where renewals have been overlooked and papers are in arrears, money paid in to cover arrears counts the same for the club member as money paying the subscription in advance.

Paying at the Office.

The club members are being saved a good many back calls by supporters paying at the Travel Club office when convenient. This is real co-operation, because the time of the club members is valuable—every call takes time. Subscribers from distant parts of Canada can co-operate by boosting the various club members with their renewals.

We have now entered the third period of the contest. Votes have dropped considerably, and the end of the week will see a further decrease. Votes will never be higher in future than they are this week.

Heenan And Gordon Reach Agreement

OTTAWA, May 29.—(CP)— Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests, Peter Heenan, announced today a "satisfactory agreement" had been reached with Dominion Minister of Labor W. A. Gordon, regarding the Trans-Canada Highway. The agreement now awaits ratification by the Dominion Government.

Mr. Heenan came to Ottawa several days ago seeking Dominion funds for continuance of the Trans-Canada Highway work and has had several conferences with Mr. Gordon.

COIN OF 1774 FOUND

LEAMINGTON, Ont., May 29 (CP)—A silver coin believed to be of Spanish origin and bearing a 1774 date was dug up by W. Richards while he was gardening at his home here. The coin is slightly thinner and larger than a 25-cent piece.

BIBLE NOT TOUCHED

KINGSVILLE, Ont., May 29 (CP) —Workmen dismantling the ruins of the Epworth United Church, scene of a fire some weeks ago, discovered a Bible inside the pulpit. The Bible, which contained the sermon notes of Rev. J. M. Colling, is still readable from first to last page. Only the brick walls of the church were left by the fire.

OILS-METALS CLOSE LOWER

Trade Heavy in Brazilian, Ford A and C.P.R. in Industrials.

GENERAL LIST DOWN.

TORONTO, May 29.—(CP).—Selling pressure continued to run its course on the industrial section of the Toronto exchange to-day with action outstanding in the oils and metals, all of which closed lower. The trade was heavy also in Brazilian, Ford A and C.P.R. and these along with the distillery stocks, 75 per cent of other listings closed on the down side. The market had had a couple of periods of firmness during the day but prices at no time displayed definite recovery.

International Petroleum limited its losses to about a quarter point and Imperial and British American weakened ¼ to ⅜ net. Walkers Common lost a point to 24½ while Distillers Seagrams was down ¼ and Industrial Alcohol A ⅛ to ¼. Nickel closed with losses of about ⅜, Smelters lost three.

Dominion Stores dropped about a half point on announcement of the passing of the summer dividend. Reductions were posted for Hinde and Dauchre, Photo Engravers, Russell Pfd, Cosmos and Riverside.

NEW LOWS SET SILVER STOCKS

White Metal Issues Show Lowest Mark For Current Reactionary Movement.

SOME GOLDS SOFT.

TORONTO, May 29. (CP)— The mining market again had considerable selling to contend with today and Tuesday's losses were expanded, particularly in the silver and base metal groups. Some of the golds also were definitely soft with offerings rather Liberal in Hollinger Little Long Lac and McWatters. New low prices for the current reaction were registered in the silvers.

Lower copper quotations on the London and New York markets gave a new rap to the copper shares. Noranda declined to $38, down $1.50.

Eldorado Silver at 1.63 was off 24 cents, Castle at 93 was down 6 cents and Bear at 47 was off 6 cents.

Hollinger, Bralorne, Dome and Wright Hargreaves weakened 25 cents each and Teck Hughes lost nearly 10 cents. A decline of 11 for Royalite to $24 was the only important adjustment in the oils.

RAIN BIG HELP TO THE FARMER

All Crops Immediately Take on New Life With Heavy Rainfall.

WHOLE SCENE CHANGED.

The farm crops of the district were on the march again this morning flushed with new verdure and vigour born of last night's reviving rain.

Even before this morning's misty sunrise surveyed the quickening grain fields new confidence and cheerfulness were astir, attuned to the gay music of the song sparrows, the bobolinks and the robins, and bolder overtones of the golden oriole.

The whole scene and the setting had swiftly erased and forgotten the Springs' long stretch of dry weather, and in the over-night transformation suggested that John A. Dewart's phrase "a two million dollar rain" was an obvious underestimate.

"It will work magic on the spring crops," Mr. Dewart remarked to The Examiner this morning, "and I think the amount of rain was sufficient to carry the fall wheat and the hay through. The fall wheat crop will probably average fifty percent. It was badly killed in some sections. South Monaghan lost quite a lot of their seeding, but in sections of Cavan it looks like a hundred per cent crop. Where the snow held on a little later, the wheat came through the early frosts in much better condtion.

I think the outlook is very hopeful now, and that rain came just in the nick of time."

A. D. Runnions said a big change would be immediately shown in the pasturage of the district, the Spring grains would start to make real headway, and the hay and clovers would no longer be marking time as they had been for several weeks while the rain was holding off.

RESEMBLED CLOUDBURST

WALLACEBURG. — The first heavy storm of the year occurred last evening, closely resembled a cloudburst. The rain came down in torrents and flooded lands in some of the low-lying sections, also flooding pavements in Wallaceburg and other nearby towns.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK, May 29 (A.P.). — Railroad shares lost most of their early gains during late trading on the Stock Exchange to-day and the other groups with the exception of Utilities continued to display heaviness.

At the beginning of the final hour losses averaging a point were well scattered over the list and included such favorites as Dupont, U. S. Steel, American Can, General Motors, U.S. Industrial Alcohol, American Smelting, Kennecott, Union Pacific, and Standard Oil of California. Among utilities maintaining a steady tone were such shares as Consolidated Gas, North American, Public Service of New Jersey, and Pacific Gas. The late tone was heavy.

Sales approximated 1,600,000 shares.

Mr. Macdougall then resumed his examination of Col. Spencer.

"What are your present holding of Imperial Oil registered stock or share warrants either as a beneficiary or otherwise?"

"He refuses to disclose what he purchased himself or what he acquired other than as a beneficiary," Mr. Hellmuth declared.

"As a beneficiary, what are your holding in Imperial Oil registered stock or share warrants?" asked Government counsel.

Witness said he had received and still has 6,000 shares in bearer warrant form from his mother's estate; 1,000 shares in the same form from his father's estate, and 10,000 registered shares from his father's estate. He received none from the Caroline Bagley Spencer estate.

Questions as to Col. Spencer's holdings at the time of the deaths of his mother, father and sister were likewise unanswered on advice of Mr. Hellmuth.

Similarly, Col. Spencer said he could not answer as to personal dealings in Imperial Oil stock.

"You have made income tax returns since 1919?" Mr. Macdougall asked.

"Yes."

"Are they available? Can you produce them here?"

"He can, but on advice of counsel, will not," Mr. Hellmuth objected.

Listowel Police Get Escaped Man

LISTOWEL, Ont., May 29.—(CP) —Bernard Leavey, escaped prisoner from the county jail at Kingston, was arrested today by police while speeding through Listowel in an automobile.

Chief of Police Carl Rooker of Listowel saw the car dash through town at a high rate of speed. He fired a shot into the air and Leavey halted. Leavey who escaped from the Kingston jail last week with Archie Hyatt offered no resistance and was taken to the Listowel jail. The car was believed to have been stolen from Wingham. A .22 calibre rifle was found in the automobile.

Search for Leavey's companion, Hyatt, continued with renewed energy. Police believe Hyatt is on foot and armed.

Tip Top Tailors Have Insurance Plan

TORONTO, May 29 (C.P.) — A program of unemployment insurance for 1,600 employees of the Tip Top Tailors, Ltd., was announced to-day by David Dunkelman, president. The plan, effective July 1, is non - contributory, the company bearing the whole cost on the basis of a contribution of one per cent of the total payroll.

"If the Dominion Government enacts unemployment insurance we will be glad to co-operate and put it into effect immediately," Mr. Dunkelman said. "But in the meantime we are inaugurating this plan as a part of our company responsibility to our employees."

HAMILTON CONFERENCE ELECTS REV. GALLAGHER

GUELPH, Ont., May 29.—(CP).— Rev. W. J. Gallagher of Guelph today was elected president of the Hamilton Conference of the United Church of Canada on the second ballot.

Rev. Dr. R. B. Cochrane, general secretary of the Home Mission Board, in addressing the Assembly soundly scored so-called Christians who "profess to have temperance homes but who keep liquor in their cellars and give it to young people."

Declaring the people have never had an opportunity of expressing themselves on the liquor question, he demanded a plebiscite and called on clergymen to use their influence to prevent the opening of new beverage rooms.

"We have a government by brewers in the interests of politicians," he charged.

terial charges which arrange settlements without consulting the Settlement Committee of the Conference.

"There is, as we all know, a widespread unrest," Rev. McQuade said, urging that the time is at hand for some radical change. He said according to the present system ministers still good for many years of service are being shoved out of the active ministry. Ministerial charges should be more ready to consult the Settlement Committee in arranging changes, he said.

"I feel certain there would be fewer men shoved out of the active ministry if all our settlements were left to the body constituted to deal intelligently and fairly with the problem. I believe our settlement committee serves us well and conscientiously."

Ministerial Salaries.

Rev. McQuade dealt also with ministerial salaries, urging that steps toward equalization of salaries be taken in the near future. The average income of several ministers in certain northern charges is $518.43. Out of that sum, only $316.17 each year is available for family use, he said, declaring that the ministers and their families are not getting decent living remunerations. "I am making a plea for the adequate support of these great spirits who have not failed the church in these ten years since union."

The retiring head reviewed briefly his tenancy of the chair during the past year. The presidency was a great honor, but also a great responsibility, he said.

"To know these ministers is to admire them, esteem them and love them," he asserted. He lauded the self-sacrificing work of the United Church ministers throughout the Dominion toward alleviation of the hardships of the depression. He praised also the lay support given the church.

Civic Welcome

Representing Mayor Roland Denne, City Clerk S. R. Armstrong addressed the conference, welcoming the delegates to the city. "Our gates are always open to visitors and are never open wider than to Christian visitors," he said. He commended the progress of the United Church in its first ten years of existence and expressed the hope that the church would go ahead in the future years with new energy, zeal, and devotion.

Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, president of the Peterborough Ministerial Association and pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, bore greetings from the association and his own congregation to the conference. "It is a duty to recognize increasingly a common fellowship," he said. "The evidence of our Christianity in practice will come from a demonstration of this common fellowship." He contended that the present-day churches must give up the spirit of competition and rivalry and work together toward a common end.

Dr. Sockman Speaks

An inspiring sermon was addressed to the conference by Rev. Dr. W. Sockman of New York City, secretary of the Council of Churches of Christ of America and noted radio preacher and writer. The noted speaker based his address on the dimensions of a modern minister—length, breadth and depth.

Referring to the length of a minister's stay in one charge, he said far more resourcefulness, intellect and ability is required of a minister to stay a lengthy period in a small town or city charge than in a charge in a large city. He declared the length of the stay is governed largely by the minister's own enthusiasm and his faith in his message.

Dr. Sockman spoke of the Christian church as a stockade standing on the boundary of a rich background on the frontier foreground yet to be pioneered. The church as a stockade is a place where the soul may be rested and recharged for the pioneer work in society.

Not a few ministers in New York City are yielding to a certain trend of opinion of the times and saying that it is no use relying on the methods of Jesus in combatting the present muddled condition of the world he continued. They are saying that the only way out is to sweep the decks clean by violence or otherwise and begin anew he said. Fortunately however, he went on, the great body of Christian ministers still have faith in peaceful ways of Jesus based on faith in love and brotherhood.

Transfer of Rev. Dr. C. W. Bishop of Fenelon Falls from the Bay of Quinte to the Hamilton Conference was mentioned by Rev. McQuade following the opening morning devotions in which Dr. Bishop assisted.

Giant Liner Starts Her Maiden Voyage

LE HAVRE, May 29.—(CP-Havas)— The giant liner Normandie, France's bid for supremacy on the high seas, sailed on her maiden voyage for New York at 6:28 o'clock this evening as a huge crowd of cheering Frenchmen had her good luck.

Sirens shrieked over the harbor, mingling with the cheers of thousands of spectators and those on board, as the 79,280 ton liner, largest vessel ever built, moved slowly away from the dock and nosed toward the open sea.

DENIES GETTING $200 EXPENSES

ens an opportunity to give his explanation.

According to Mr. S. L. Springsteen, commission counsel, Mr. Stevens had been a director of the company from 1924 to 1928.

Mr. Sommerville insisted the commissioner had not the power to inquire into a fraud which might have been committed before the Securities Act came into effect.

"There was no statute of limitations about that act," Mr. Godfrey said.

"Hearsay" Insinuations

Mr. Sommerville urged, too, he should be given the opportunity to prepare to meet 'hearsay' insinuations and statements. The report prepared by Mr. Sedgwick he maintained was just his opinion of the facts. "Let's have the facts," he urged.

Peter White suggested if to-day Mr. Sedgwick's report said there was a fraud and that, a week later it was proven there was no fraud, the damage by publicity would be done. "We should have a chance to prepare to answer at once" he said.

Dana Porter declared the intention of the Securities Act was for the commission function to prevent fraud. "This commission was never constituted as a glorified collection agency to collect money which may have been lost seven or eight years ago," he said.

But the commissioner turned a deaf ear to the pleas for adjournment and instructed Mr. Springsteen to commence examination of Mr. Sedgwick.

Mr. Sedgwick said as a solicitor in the Attorney General's Department in 1929, he had examined the books of the corporation.

Mr. Springsteen read from the prospectus of the company which, he said, advertised their securities as "good securities for people of moderate means to invest in." Mr. Springsteen explained the corporation set up "five elements of protection" in recommending investment. The corporation guaranteed the lien notes, he said. The notes were endorsed by the dealer and were "insured against loss."

White Protests

Mr. White interposed to again protest the making public of the entire report of Mr. Sedgwick until he has a chance to refute it.

"In an inquiry of this kind you are not limited to the ordinary rules of evidence," Mr. Godfrey replied to Mr. Porter's charge much of the evidence as to documents was "merely hearsay."

"There doesn't seem to be any limit at all," Mr. Porter retorted.

"This is a report made to the Attorney-General and Mr. Sedgwick charges certain irregularities," said Mr. Springsteen. "All we can do at the outset is to lay this report before you."

"I don't think Mr. Sedgwick's conclusions should be published," Mr. Godfrey finally agreed.

"I am referring to Mr. Sedgwick's opinions as to certain directors."

"I don't want to do injury to any person," Mr. Godfrey added.

"If these 'opinions' are to come up," said Mr. Porter, "you could use your power to prevent the unfortunate publicity that might ensue."

"I do not intend to transgress," said Mr. Springsteen.

Objects to Report.

Mr. Sommerville objected "holus bolus" to the report.

"Any investigation should be conducted with consideration to the ordinary decencies of an inquiry," said Mr. Sommerville.

"This whole story can't be spread out like a panoramic photograph so you can see it all at once," said Mr. Godfrey.

The Commissioner ruled the report would be read in full omitting the conclusions reached.

Examiner Starts New Serial "Lawrence of Arabia"

UNPLEDGED ALLEGIANCE ARAB MIND MADE THEM MOST OBEDIENT SERVANTS

The Examiner Publishes Today the Introduction to Book, "Lawrence of Arabia."

NEVER REAL SOLDIER

Lawrence Has Become One of Most Famous Heroes of Great War.

"Arabs could be swung on an idea as on a card; for the unpledged allegiance of their minds made them obedient servants. None of them would escape the bond till success had come, and with it responsibility and duty and engagements. Then the idea was gone and the work ended—in ruins. Without a creed they could be taken to the four corners of the world (but not to heaven) by being shown the riches of earth and the pleasures of it; but if on the road, led in this fashion, they met the prophet of an idea, who had had nowhere to lay his head and who depended for his foot on charity or birds, then they would all leave their wealth for his inspiration. They were incorrigibly children of the idea, feckless and colour-blind, to whom body and spirit were for ever inevitably opposed. Their mind was strange and dark, full of depressions and exaltations, lacking in rule, but with more of ardour and more fertile in belief than any other in the world. They were a people of starts, for whom the abstract was the strongest motive, the process of infinite courage and variety, and the end nothing. They were as unstable as water, and like water would perhaps finally prevail. Since the dawn of life, in successive waves they had been dashing themselves against the coasts of flesh. Each wave was broken, but, like the sea, wore away over so little of the granite on which it failed, and some day, ages yet, might roll unchecked over the place where the material world had been, and God would move upon the face of those waters. One such wave (and not the least) I raised and rolled before the breath of an idea, till it reached its crest, and toppled over and fell at Damascus. The wash of that wave, thrown back by the resistance of vested things, will provide the matter of the following wave, when in fullness of time the sea shall be raised once more."

The strange and still mysterious figure of T. E. Lawrence has become, if not the best known, certainly one of the most famous in all the small gallery of true heroes of the war. An unimpressive, rather studious young man of twenty-six he was rejected in the opening days of the war as physically unfit for military service. The authorities who rejected him can be forgiven; for not even Lawrence himself had guessed that he added, to the unusual combination of archæologist, philosopher, diplomat and student of military affairs, the genius of a surpassing leader of irregular cavalry. After his failure to enlist, his knowledge of Arabia and the Arabian peoples brought him a commission as a subaltern in the Intelligence Service of the British command at Cairo. For his subsequent, single-handed organization and leadership of the Arab revolt, through two years of bitter and weird adventure, in an atmosphere of incredible romance and under a veil of profound secrecy, the authorities were not to blame. It was his own masterpiece, and it was one of the miracles of the war.

Lawrence in 1914

In 1914, T. E. Lawrence was serving as a more or less unnoticed assistant in the British Museum's excavation of Carchemish on the Euphrates. Under the appearance of a brilliant and somewhat eccentric student of archæology, he concealed a lively initiative, a sympathetic understanding of the country, and a relationship to more than one soldier prominent in British history, including—it is supposed—a Sir Robert Lawrence who fought as a crusader under Richard Coeur de Lion. Casual travellers found him unobstrusively digging Hittite remains out of the banks of the Euphrates; he left them reassured by his tactfulness with the Arab labourers as to the future of the British Empire. He knew the Near East intimately. His first direct knowledge of the complicated peoples of Araba had been gained while he was still an undergraduate, alone and in native dress, a two-year expedition among the tribes behind Syria, in order to gather material for his thesis on the military history of the Crusades. Such experience placed him obviously in the direct line of those remarkable British Orientalists like Doughty and Burton who have done so much to enrich British letters. It could hardly have been anticipated that it was preparing him for the very different and more romantic achievements in reckless leadership and masterful strategy which are described in these pages.

Lawrence was not the author of the revolt; his was the more difficult, and also more dangerous task of being its inspiration. A subaltern officer with no respect for his superiors, with a sensitive and vigorous mind, undisturbed either by military regulations or a desire for glory, and with a scholarly taste in reading, he was clearly an unexpected figure among the soldiery and camp followers at Cairo. Since then he has allowed very little to be known of himself. After his triumph in Syria, the famous guerilla leader (who nevertheless remained an ethnological expert) served in the British peace delegation at Versailles, and was later a member of a special commission on Near Eastern affairs headed by the Colonial Secretary. But an almost passionate dislike of notoriety and a seemingly deliberate eccentricity have continued to conceal his character; and he is now (February, 1927) actually serving as a private soldier in the British Army, while the mists of a gathering legend have cloaked him in the obscurity of an almost mythological hero.

However, in 1919, he wrote out in a 400,000 word book the whole bitter account of his adventure and of his disappointment over the conclusion which the Peace Conference seemed to put to it. He left the book together with some of his notes and many photographs, in a handbag in the Reading railway station; a few minutes later it had disappeared. There was a flurry of rumour to the effect that it had been stolen by high authorities; subsequently it has seemed more likely that the bag was taken by a casual sneak-thief, but Lawrence at any rate sat down with an heroic effort of memory to rewrite the account. He never intended it, however, for publication. He had it printed on a newspaper press in Oxford, in an edition limited characteristically to eight copies of which three, in what seems almost an excess of reticence, were afterwards destroyed.

Of all the honours that an astonished government tried to force upon him, the war-time rank of Lieutenant-Colonel was the only one which he accepted, and that largely because of his necessity for maintaining his status with the Arabs. The latter called him simply "El-Orens' or else by the more picturesque title of "Wrecker of Engines". The titles which the newspapers afterwards invented only annoyed him; and not long ago the astonishing discovery was made that he had enlisted under an assumed name in the Royal Air Force, presumably to avoid attention. There was, of course, another wave of notoriety, and it is understood that he is now occupying the even less explicable position of a private in the Tank Corps.

The re-written book, with which Lawrence himself, was never quite satisfied, was a purely personal record. His impregnable reticence was, however, broken down to the extent of allowing a lengthy abridgement for publication by "a friendly man of letters." The book in its present form opens abruptly with Lawrence's arrival with the Arabian armies, long after he had taken up, along with others of the more brilliant younger men in the intelligence service at Cairo, the enthusiastic advocacy of the Arabian revolt.

Unrest In Arabia

At the very outset of the war British diplomacy had remembered the unrest among the Arab-speaking population of Turkey, and its possible value in the defence of the Suez Canal. A revolutionary movement, fostered both by powerful secret societies and the repressive measures of the Turks, had been growing ever since the Young Turk revolution of 1908. It included many high civil and military officers of the Turkish Government, while a third of the Turkish Army was Arabic-speaking and consequently disaffected. Even before Turkey declared war, Sir Henry McMahon, the representativeof British civil power in Egypt had written to Hussien the Grand Sherif of Mecca, to promise British support of the independence of the Arabs. The secret societies did not agree that the Allies' cause against the Central Powers was identifcal with the Arab's cause against Turkey; many of their members were still loyally commanding Turkish troops at the end of the war, and a doubt among the Arabs as to the disinterestedness of the British explain many of Lawrence's latter difficulties. The Arabs, however, did plan a revolution on their own account, under the banner of Hussein and his four sons, but it came to nothing.

Meanwhile Lawrence had taken up his modest duties in the Intelligence Service at Cairo.

"I had been many years," he has said, "going up and down the Semitic East before the war, learning the manners of the villagers and tribesmen and citizens of Syria and Mesopotamia. My poverty had constrained me to mix with the humbler classes, those seldom met by European travellers, and thus my experiences give me an unusual angle of views, which enabled me to understand and think for the ignorant many as well as for the more enlightened whose rare opinions mattered, not so much for the day, as for the morrow. In addition I had seen something of the political forces working in the minds of the Middle East and especially had noted everywhere sure signs of the decay of imperial Turkey."

There were other archaeologists, orientalists, and younger experts of the political service, who, although wearing the unfamiliar uniform of the army and navy, believed in the Arabian revolt as much for the sake of the Arabs as for the sake of the Allies. Lawrence was united with them in their interest in Sir Henry McMahon's correspondence with Hussein, although the more orthodox minds among the military found it difficult to understand such unconventional methods of warfare. As Lawrence adds:

"We called ourselves 'Intrusive' as a band; for we meant to break into the accepted halls of English foreign policy, and build a new people in the East, despite the rails laid down for us by our ancestors. Therefore, from our hybrid Intelligence office in Cairo (a jangling place which for its incessant bells and bustle and running to and fro was likened by Aubrey Herbert to an Oriental railway station) we began to work upon all our chiefs, far and near."

It is a process of which chiefs seldom approve; but Sir Henry continued both his correspondence and his promises. The long agony of the Dardanelles was played out and ended, the British came to disaster at Kut-el-Amara, and the Turks were as close across the Suez Canal as ever. But in the summer of 1916 Sir Henry triumphed, and at the beginning of June Hussein proclaimed the revolt of the Arab people, with British money and support.

Both Jidda and Mecca fell in the first rush of the Sheriffian armies, but Feisal's attack upon Medina, the Turkish strongpoint at the end of the Hejaz Railway, failed, and the revolt began to go rather precariously astray amid the simplicities of Arab patriotism and the complex departmental and international jealousy at Cairo. The military authorities still seemed incapable of grasping the value of a war started by the civilians; and a staff perturbed by the eccentric brilliancy of an Intelligence Service made up of experts began to show tendencies toward suppressing them. Sir Henry was recalled to England, and the Sheriffian forces led by Hussein's son Feisal and his three brothers, Ali, Abdulla and Zeida got neither the supplies nor the advice which they needed.

"Never A Soldier"

Lawrence (he was only twenty-eight years old) had never regarded himself as a soldier; he liked his work of making maps and running a secret Arab newspaper, and he felt it meanness in him to pretend to be a man of action. Yet his Arab revolt was in serious difficulties. The Turks had sent out a formal attacking column from Medina, and the Arab levies were in danger of being jammed—by the inapplicable principles of orthodox war—into the area around Mecca, instead of using their dash and mobility in the irregular combat for which they were supremely fitted. Meanwhile Lawrence found himself in danger of being politely eliminated, as an upstart, while other men ruined the plans for which he was largely responsible.

His reply was, first to make himself as obnoxious as possible to his military superiors, and then to ask for leave. It was granted with alacrity, in the hope that he could be gently put out of the way on his return. But he did not intend to be put out of the way. He boarded a naval vessel on the way down the Red Sea, ostensibly as a "joy ride" with Sir Ronald Storrs, another of the 'Intrusives' who was making an official trip to Jidda. He was without authority or passes, and Feisal, the principal commander, was in the interior, from which as a Christian he was debarred by order. But it was his precocious intention to see what he, a staff-captain on leave, could do for the confused armiesof Arabia.

"Storrs and I then snarched off together, happily. In the East they swore that by three sides was the decent way across a square; and my trick to escape was in this sense oriental. But I justified myself by my confidence in the final success of the Arab revolt if properly advised. I had been a mover in its beginning; my hopes lay in it. The fatalistic subordination of a professional soldier (intrigue being unknown in the British army) would have made a proper officer sit down and watch his plan of campaign wrecked by men who thought nothing of it, and to whose spirit it made no appeal. Non nobis, Domine."

Lindsay Boys' Band To Play At Hastings

(Examiner Correspondence)

HASTINGS, May 29.—Plans are going ahead fast for the Old Boys and Girl's Reunion. On Monday Andy Rutter of Peterborough had a conference with the entertainment committee, as a result of this meeting, Mr. Rutter's nine-piece orchestra was engaged for the street dance. Mr. Rutter needs no introduction to the dancers of this district as he is in charge of Brock Street Summer Gardens in Peterborough.

Lindsay Boys' band was also engaged on Monday. They will be here all Dominion Day and will lead the monster century of progress procession on that morning.

"Dit" Clapper has received word from the Boston Bruins that they will donate a handsome silver cup for the softball tournament.

Twenty events are scheduled for the water on Saturday with big prizes up for each.

BRIDGENORTH

On Friday afternoon a very enjoyable time was held in A. McGregor's field, Lindsay highway, when the young people of Lily Lake Sunday School invited Lakevale and Bethel young people. The afternoon was spent in softball games and races, after which at the old Temple a picnic supper was enjoyed by every one.

Rev. Mr. Haddow of Bolivia was guest speaker at Gilmour Memorial Church on Sunday morning. While here he was entertained at the home of Rev. and Mrs. R. D. Wright, pastor of the church.

Mr. K. Jakens of Lindsay spent the holiday week-end with his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. D. McAdams of Lindsay highway.

Mr. Frank Mitchell of Lindsay highway visited at his home in Whitby over the holiday.

Ask your DOCTOR if the Cathartic Habit is Good for You!

Here are TWO WAYS to fight Constipation . . .

THE OLD WAY

YOU TAKE any one of the numerous laxatives or cathartics on the market. In one large drug store, there were 312 such items, by actual count.

WHAT HAPPENS: If the laxative or cathartic which you take is potent enough, it irritates the delicate lining of your intestines, draws water from your tissues—or otherwise promotes an "unnatural" and forced bowel evacuation.

RESULT: You may get a partial or complete "cleaning out," perhaps accompanied by griping. Such results are purely temporary . . . and may ultimately weaken your whole digestive system—lead to the dangerous "cathartic habit."

THE NEW WAY

YOU EAT a cake of Fleischmann's new Yeast half an hour before meals or at bedtime—plain or in a little water. You can get it at grocers, drug stores, restaurants and soda fountains.

HOW IT WORKS: Almost at once, it starts the flow of your digestive juices and strengthens—yes, strengthens—your entire intestinal tract from the stomach on down. This gradually builds up a healthier condition all through you.

RESULTS: You feel better. Appetite and digestion improve. Your food does you more "good." And, as you continue eating Fleischmann's Yeast, your evacuations become regular and natural. You can discontinue harsh cathartics!

In one hospital alone, 93% of constipation cases were corrected by "DIGESTIVE ACTIVATOR" method

IF YOU want to get rid of your constipation . . . if you want to say "good-bye" to your indigestion, that run-down feeling and the skin troubles that go with it . . . then here is news for you!

No longer need you rely on cathartics that may actually harm you. No longer need you be content with a mere occasional "cleaning out."

For a new, entirely different way of dealing with the constipation problem is now available . . . a way that is giving astonishing results in thousands upon thousands of cases of the most chronic kind.

It is called the "digestive activator" method, for it supplies to your stomach and intestines a remarkable tonic substance just like your digestive organs themselves produce when healthy. Fleischmann's Yeast—alone of all foods—is naturally rich in this remarkable substance!

Peps up lazy digestive muscles

When you eat this new Fleischmann's Yeast, you immediately start your digestive "machinery" working. Your stomach juices flow stronger and those lazy digestive muscles become more active. Food, inside you, is softened . . . and your bowels have an easier time in disposing of waste.

So extraordinary are the results of this new method that in one great Eastern hospital 93% of chronic constipation cases were corrected—while in others 83% of indigestion cases and 89% of skin cases of digestive origin were also relieved!

Just eat two or three cakes (or more) of Fleischmann's Yeast daily—preferably half an hour before meals. If you're now taking cathartics, discontinue them gradually, as the yeast strengthens your bowels.

Then, watch for results . . . in your appetite, digestion, skin! Your energy should reappear. You should feel like doing things—enjoying things again!

But, don't be impatient. Fleischmann's Yeast is a food, you know, not a medicine—and you're eating it to correct your troubles and keep them corrected. So keep it up.

And above all . . . BEGIN! Don't delay another day in getting Fleischmann's Yeast's benefits.

Fleischmann's Yeast is also richer than any other food in the group of 4 vitamins (Vitamins A, B, D and G) which everyone needs to build up a reserve of health.

IN SPEAKING OF THE CATHARTIC HABIT, Dr. Robert Latzel, head of a famous Vienna "internal" clinic, says: "Such measures only aggravate constipation. The best way to correct this evil is to eat fresh yeast." The new fresh yeast gave "remarkable results" in the tests in his own clinic.

BALLYDUFF S. S. HOLD ANNIVERSARY

Rev. C. Smith of Courtice, is Special Speaker at the Services.

BALLYDUFF, May 29 (Examiner Correspondent) — Very successful anniversary services in connection with Ballyduff Presbyterian Sabbath School were held in the church on Sunday afternoon and evening, May 26 with Rev. C. Smith of Courtice and formerly of Janetville, the special speaker for this annual occasion. The church was beautifully decorated for the day with pretty blooming geraniums and house foliages.

A number of old friends of Rev Smith from neighboring centres including Yelverton, Janetville, Lifford and Bethany joined the local congregation in filling the church to capacity at both services, extra chairs being carried in to provide seating accommodation.

The Bethany choir led by Miss Paton, A.T.C.M. at the organ provided special music at both services. Miss Hazel Jackson and Mr. Douglas Driver of Toronto former members of the Bethany choir who were home for the holiday week-end also assisted.

Rev. Smith voiced his deep appreciation of the invitation extended to him to be present at these special services to meet with his former associates and of the splendid attendance at the services. He also spoke appreciative words regarding the local pastor, Rev. W. Walker who took charge of his services at Courtice during his absence and with whom he had such pleasant associations while on the Janetville circuit.

In the afternoon a patriotic talk was addressed to the boys and girls by Rev. Smith who spoke on the maxims of King George impressing the examples shown by him of courtesy, honesty and good sportsmanship in particular.

The special offering for the day was in the interests of Sabbath school work.

FENELLA

A splendid talk on "Rural Life in the Church" was given by Rev. L. W. Scott in the Fenella United Church on Sunday.

Mrs. H. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kinnon and son Jack of Toronto were holiday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Ray Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Macklin and son Charlie spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Wetherburn, Brighton.

Miss Ila Smith, Toronto called on her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Smith on the holiday.

Miss Donna Talling, of Welcome, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Talling.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Walden and son Albert and Mr. Jas. Walden, Toronto called on Mr. and Mrs. Ray Smith during the holiday.

TRAVELLING BAG WINNERS NAMED

are going to be from the checking already done on the records, a complete re-check must be made to make absolutely certain that no error occurs in the announcement.

It would be well for contestants and subscribers to read the article that appears elsewhere in this issue of The Examiner. It was written by a member of the Travel Club staff while the records were being checked early this morning. It explains the closeness of the race for the special awards and for the free trips, as was evidenced during the early part of the work on the records. While the winners were not then known, and are not yet known for certain, the story is typical of the keenness of the race as viewed at that time, and as still exists up to this hour.

1.30 A.M., Wednesday, May 29th.

HERE ARE THE WINNERS OF THE SPECIAL PRIZES:

Miss Marjorie Frankish, R.R. 2, Lakefield.

Miss Mary Jones, Hastings.

Miss Marjorie Francis, Keene.

Miss Viva Shearer, Hall's Bridge.

Miss Margaret Sullivan, Ennismore.

As the final pencil marks in the Travel Club records indicate the winners as above named, the same keen race is still indicated for the free trips. Closeness, even among the five leading ladies, is astonishing. From the fifth special winner right down the list a remarkable closeness exists for the free tours, and up to this time of writing it is still anybody's race, even for the double tour. Those who failed to be among the special prize-winners need not be in the least discouraged because, while working for the special awards, they were piling up a reserve of votes that will stand them in good stead when the names of the ten fortunate winners are announced in just a little better than two weeks from now. Another standing of the members will appear in to-morrow's Examiner. Reader, please turn to the article elsewhere in this issue and learn how you can be of material assistance in helping your district member win one of the Travel Club trips.

TORONTO.—Lionel Taylor, 17, fought with two robbers to-day when he found them in the office of Dr. H. S. Jamieson. The men fled when they feared the struggle would attract attention. Taylor led above the office.

FARMS REQUIRE RAIL SERVICE

ways," Mr. Rand said. "That is not the way these new efficient agencies are evolved. I think we must discount the hopefulness and desires we have heard. The whole province is covered with a network of motor truck lines that are carrying grain and other products."

Cavan Reeve's Opinion

Reeve W. Wood of Cavan told Mr. Rand yesterday after lunch that he believed the trucking of cattle had been economically adverse to farmers.

"It was a new idea and the farmer fell for it," Mr. Wood said. "He has found the error of his ways. I trucked about four loads to Toronto to try it out, but I don't truck now."

Mr. Wood contended that there was more shrinkage in the weight of cattle transported by trucks, than by railway.

Threat to Merchant

J. A. Waddell, Campbellcroft, said he operated a coal business and managed a grain elevator for Dewart Brothers.

"I brought in four cars of coal last year, but in good times it was twice that quantity. If the railway is closed I will have to go out of the coal business."

Mr. Waddell told the Commission that the Durham county roads were not kept open during the winter. The road from Welcome to Millbrook is often blocked from Christmas until spring.

"If they take up the railway we won't be able to carry on the grain business at Campbellcroft. We couldn't get a trucking rate that would meet outside competition."

Mr. Waddell said his coal used to come by way of Cobourg and Port Hope, but during the last year it was hauled by way of Belleville and Peterborough.

Mr. G. A. Stone, Commissioner, remarked that a haul of 124 miles against 18 miles seemed a strange practice if it was general. The rate was the same each way.

Important to Farmers.

Reeve C. G. Mercer, Hope Township: "We have $75,000 invested in this railway and still have $30,000 invested, and I feel that it would be unjust to our farmers to be deprived of this service which we helped to build. The debentures were issued in 1864.

Mr. Ryan informed the Board that Hope's investment was originally, as recorded in the statutes, and Mr. Mercer added that the agreement to buy the debentures stipulated that at least two trains a day would be run over the line.

H. M. Foster, general merchant at Campbellcroft, stated that most of his goods were delivered by railway.

"I have about $16,000 tied up there and if we lose the railway I don't think I could carry on. There is no trucker who will bring goods in to us."

Mr. Foster said he shipped nothing out by truck. Cement deliveries to Campbellcroft were retailed to farmers in the district for building barns and houses.

To Hon. Mr. Norris, Mr. Foster said his store was a local market for farmers, especially in winter. He buys most of their eggs and forwards them to Montreal.

Elevator Aids Farmers

Francis O'Hara, Hope Township farmer, said two-thirds of the people in the township were dependent on Campbellcroft for shipping facilities.

"Most of us are engaged in mixed farming," Mr. O'Hara said, "and often when we have grain to store until prices get better in the fall or at harvest time we can take it to Mr. Waddell's elevator where we can store it. If the elevator was closed I think it would be a real loss to our community."

Mr. O'Hara declared the branch line had declined in business for three years because the farmers could not get prices that would induce them to ship such products as grain and potatoes. With an improvement in prices of farm products railway business would increase substantially.

"I notice," said Mr. O'Hara "that Mr. Beatty, president of the C.P.R., has said in his addresses that the farmer has got to play a big part in lifting the burdens that are on the country and getting back to general employment again. If that is the case surely it would be a mistake to add any more handicap to the farmers by taking away any help they have at present."

Mr. O'Hara suggested that it would be the best plan to delay closing the branch line for a year or two until the effects of better prices and markets had a chance to be felt by the railway.

Asked by Mr. Norris whether the abandoning of the line would cause any financial loss to Hope farmers, Mr. O'Hara said he believed it would, although he could not quote definite cases.

"I know that is the general opinion of many farmers I have talked to about this."

He believed that it might put off the shipping of cattle to the Montreal market. If farmers trucked to Port Hope for rail shipment to Montreal, Mr. O'Hara said their cost would be increased.

Port Hope's Claim

H. R. S. Ryan, Port Hope lawyer, informed the Commission that the town invested $800,000 in the company that built the branch line. This bonussing or purchase of stock was completed by 1857 to the amount of $780,000, and later $30,000 was invested.

"We feel the interest that capital would have paid the deficits of the branch for many years. This was a pioneer railway, built to open up the north country. Millbrook grew around it, and it was a large factor in the development of Peterborough and Lindsay. I understand the company will scrap the line and sell the land if it is abandoned, and Port Hope would then see the end of their investment for which the town will still have to pay for some years.

D. H. Chisholm, Port Hope lawyer, suggested to the Board that his case for the Port Hope harbor board be submitted in writing as a means of abbreviating the session of the Board, and also because the importance of that topic recommended a broad survey of the town's interest in the port and its development.

Dr. McLean, chairman, approved the proposal by Mr. Chisholm.

Millbrook Anxious

A few paragraphs are quoted in conclusion from the informative and voluminous brief submitted to the Board by W. R. Howard, solicitor for the village of Millbrook.

"The railway is a public utility. That is to say it is a public service, and for that reason should not be withdrawn unless it is not capable of rendering any further service to the communities through which it passes. The branch of the C.N.R. between Port Hope and Peterborough serves a large area with a population of many thousands. The railway has been in operation for 77 years, and on the strength of continued service people have invested heavily in homes, businesses and farms. These people have a vested interest in the railway in question and should not be deprived of it...

Abandonment of the branch under consideration would cause an inestimable loss to Millbrook. There would be a direct loss of $600 in taxes on property adjacent to the right of way. A far greater loss would result from the general fall in the value of real estate in every part of the village and surrounding territory. A corresponding reduction in assessments would be rendered necessary and the tax returns would be materially affected. The village has expended large sums of money on two miles of paving and a grade A Continuation School which have yet to be paid for. The removal of the railway would seriously impair the ability of the village to meet its obligations. These obligations would never have been incurred had there been the slightest possibility that the rails would be lifted.

The removal of this branch would mean the removal of the chief factor which made Millbrook a distribution and shipping point for a large area. The loss of business through the loss of shipping facilities cannot be estimated. It is true that the volume of shipments is low at present, but they will increase with the return of the demand for produce and the elimination of such keen motor transportation. The facilities are there and they will be used to a greater extent before long. To remove them would be disastrous to Millbrook and the territory it serves.

The alternative facilities suggested by the C.N.R. are totally inadequate and impracticable. Gravel roads will not bear motor truck traffic, and the one paved road out of Millbrook is very little better. For long periods during the winter months the railway is the only means of shipping and receiving goods, and the only way by which a person can enter or leave Millbrook....The railway is similar in many respects to other government services such as post offices. These and many other government services do not pay their way, but they are continued in operation. The railway is still a vital element in Millbrook's business life. The service is indispensable, and will be used to a larger extent when business conditions improve as they are doing already."

FAMILY LEAVES TACOMA ESTATE

Believe Contact Will Soon Be Made With Kidnappers of Nine Year Old.

RANSOM IS READY.

TACOMA, Wash., May 29 (AP)—Sudden desertion of the Weyerhaeuser home by almost the entire family brought rumors arrangements had been completed for payment to-day of $200,000 ransom for the safe return of nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser.

To-day was the deadline for payment of the ransom set by kidnappers who snatched the curly-haired lumber heir from Tacoma streets last Friday.

Apparently all of the other members of the family to-day had gone to the American Lake home of J. Rodman Titcomb, uncle of the missing boy.

Watchers speculated the unexplained movement of the family were made in response to directions outlined in a registered letter delivered yesterday afternoon. The original ransom demand had said, "You will be notified where to go when the time comes."

Half-Day Closing To Start Next Wednesday

The annual half-day closing on Wednesdays of each week during June, July and August will be generally inaugurated by local merchants a week from to-day, it is understood by The Examiner.

Under a city by-law enacted last June, according to James J. Dorris, secretary of Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, Wednesday half-holiday is compulsory for grocers and butchers.

While there is no regulation compelling other classes of retailers to close, Mr. Dorris believed, there was a tacit understanding between the majority of merchants for the half-day closing period to start on Wednesday of next week.

Weekly half-day closing, he said, would continue for a three-month period the same as last year, and indications are that it will be adopted generally by all classes of retailers.

Magistrate's Court

Following preliminary hearing before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., to-day, Murney and Muriel Martin, who formerly resided at various addresses in this city, were committed for trial on charges of bigamy.

The charges on which committal was made alleges that the accused were unlawfully married at Toronto on September 10, 1932.

On a further charge which alleges that she was unlawfully married to Isiah Woodcock on April 25, 1931, the woman accused was remanded until June 4.

A charge of vagrancy against Murney Martin was withdrawn by the Crown.

The accused were represented by E. F. Sheehy, while Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., conducted the prosecution.

Minor Price Wars Continue In Stores

NEW YORK, May 29.— (CP).— The minor price wars continued in New York department stores to-day as a result of the lifting of NRA restrictions.

Hundreds of people stood in long lines at the leading stores for the privilege of buying cigarettes at 72 cents a carton, where they had been paying 25 cents for two packages.

One executive termed it "highway robbery" and pointed out the department stores' sale of cigarettes at "30 cents below cost per carton purely as an advertising stunt" made it entirely impossible for tobacco stores to compete.

The other general field where cuts were most apparent to-day was in cosmetics.

ART DISPLAY OF LOCAL PUPILS SHOWN AT Y. W.

Pupils of Miss Mamie McCarthy Present Most Interesting Exhibit.

MANY CLEVER WORKS.

Beautiful art work of many different types was exhibited yesterday in the green room of the Young Women's Christian Associations, where a display was made of the artistic efforts of the pupils of Miss Mamie L. McCarthy. Despite the very inclement weather of the evening, many art lovers from different parts of the city came in to view the work, while a large attendance was marked in the afternoon hours. The exhibit is continued again to-day and this evening.

Several hundreds of pictures are on view in a display that is unique and noteworthy. The exhibit comprises work done in oils, water colors and pen and ink by many pupils from the various afternoon and evening classes taught by Miss McCarthy. Each pupil chooses according to individual preference and resulting display showed a wide and varied range of preference and a very broad field covered by the pupils in senior and junior groups. Many flattering comments were heard with regard to the talent displayed by the pupils and the skill of their teacher.

The dainty little silhouettes are fascinating things in black and white, mainly of old-fashioned ladies and gentlemen, in profile and full figure.

One unique small picture that is quite different is done in water colors combined with fine pen strokes, with a pretty damsel as the subject.

The widest range of artistic effort never confines itself to one field alone. Along with work done directly from natural sources, such as posed sitters or free figures or scenes of natural beauty, are the copied pieces which fall in line with the methods of the most outstanding teachers when training the youthful mind and hand to artistic effort. So the exhibit includes many clever things done from life in self portraits executed in pen and ink by the young students, in drawings and paintings in oils and water color, portraying beauty spots in and around Peterborough, and in flower and fruit pieces painted from the actual objects. And the copied pieces also are notable, the student catching in this fashion some of the method and coloring of the original artist.

Pupils Draw Own Portraits

Quite outstanding are the self portraits in pen and ink, done by students from their own reflections; the Indian and Egyptian heads; the heroes of the sports world and miscellaneous portrayals of the Duchess of Kent and a haughty Navajo beauty. The flower pictures are enchanting and brilliant in their striking colorings, and there are many sketches that show the gay hues of Autumn and the soft blues and greens of earth, sky and water, in landscape and marine paintings. Sepias are plentiful also, with their soft browns. And there are advertising posters with quaint letterings, and decorative things in black satin, painted in floral designs of natural and conventional type.

There are many pictures of the 'story' type that tells a tale of romance or of childish play. Children and babies figure largely in the display, along with pen and ink sketches of roly poly kittens and some very beautiful dog pictures, many from real life.

Nature in its many manifestations is portrayed in these dainty pictures, mainly of small sizes, with a peacock parading its beautiful tail in one flower-filled garden.

Miss McCarthy includes several of her own paintings in the exhibit. A tiny miniature on ivory is a lovely example of delicate, skilful handiwork; there are yellow nasturtiums in one flower picture and the delicate blossoms of gladioli in another; a large portrait of a girl, done in oils, and posed from life, is intertsting, and her conception of "The Crucifixion" is also on display. This very large picture, about three feet wide and nearly five feet long, was painted for the family of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hurtubise on the occasion last year of the silver anniversary of their parents, and was lent for the exhibit. It is in colors and depicts in glowing colors and lifelike fashion the tragic drama of Calvary, with the dead Christ on the Cross, companied by the Blessed Virgin Mary, St. John and St. Mary Magdalen.

Miss McCarthy also shows a collection of her own sketches of local scenes, mostly in water colors, with the natural hues repeated in lovely pictures which attracted much favorable comment. They reproduce local and district beauty spots, such as Chemong in many aspects, picturesque old buildings and barns of the vicinity, scenes from Jackson Park, the Smith street bridge with its triple span, the Hunter street bridge with the Quaker Oats building in the background, Trinity church with autumn trees in the foreground, and bathers in the summer waters at Inverlea Park.

Members of the various classes taught by Miss McCarthy whose work is on view include the following: Mrs. C. B. Hughes, Mrs. R. G. Cottrell, Mrs. J. Miller, Mrs. Gordon Davis (Oshawa), Mrs. G. Stabler, Mrs. E. W. Edkins, Mrs. W. Dorrington, Mrs. R. J. McGrath, Mrs. W. Amos (Kitchener), Mrs. Ted Burnham, the Misses Amy Bowles, Florence Corcoran, Mildred Dobbin, Aileen McCoy, Donnie McDonald, Jean Black, Rosali Clancy, Connie Downes, Dorothy Lowden, Gertrude Cox, Irene Cox, Muriel Wilson, Helen Wootton, Margaret Fairbrother, Anna MacKenzie, Hilda Thompson, Gladys Watson, Dorothy Blade, Veronica Scollard, Josephine Lynch, Hilda Sullivan, Madeline Henry, Bernadette Galvin, Clare Quarrie, Helen Ludbrook, Nina Andrus, Helen Fisk, Berta Belleghem, Catherine Corkery, Helen Huppe, Margaret Corkery, Vivian Sullivan, Nora Corkery, Edna Borland, Kathleen Lacey. Also Mr. Hugh Lush, Mr. Gordon Clarke and Master 'Buddie' Miller.

Owing to the rain last night, the exhibit is to be continued to-day (Wednesday), and may be seen at any time up to ten o'clock to-night.

Obituary

MRS. THOMAS LAPLANTE.

A senior resident whose demise will cast a shadow over the group of which she was a loved member, passed away last night, when the death took place at her home at 230 Rubidge street of Margaret McGrath, relict of the late Thomas LaPlante.

The deceased, who was born in Peterborough eighty-two years ago, was a daughter of the late Cornelius McGrath and Catherine Butler. Her whole life was spent in this city and she watched it grow from a tiny place to the pleasant residence it now provides for its citizens.

Known not only by the older residents, but also by a host of the younger people, she will be greatly missed. She had that quality of whole-hearted interest and enthusiasm in local matters and in the simple pleasures of daily life that is an attribute of a fast-passing older generation whose members knew how to live sanely and comfortably and to die serenely, confident in the hope of an eternal rest and happiness in a life to come.

Her long life was spent in the interests of her home, her neighbors and her friends. She was known for her wide sympathies and kindly comprehension, for her unfailing gift of mild humor and pleasant interest in the good things that befell those she cared for. Throughout her long existence, she was unfailingly active in the promotion of good endeavors, and was never known to refuse a helping hand in works promoted by her church and other charitable organizations.

Predeceased by her husband, eighteen years ago, death companioned Mrs. LaPlante in recent years, in the demise of two sons, Fred, who passed away several years back, and Harold, who died within the past six months, while her sister, the late Mrs. D. Donoghue, of Simcoe street, died just three weeks since.

Survivors are two daughters, Mrs. M. C. Goodwin of 230 Rubidge street, and Mrs. R. M. Glover, of 572 Charlotte street, and two sons, Frank LaPlante, of Rochester, N. Y., and Roland J. LaPlante of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place from the home of her son-in-law, R. M. Glover, on Saturday morning, at a quarter to ten o'clock, proceeding to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery for interment.

MRS. EDWARD WALSH.

Following a brief illness, the death occurred on Tuesday of Mary McGrath, the beloved wife of Edward Walsh, of 186 Edinburgh Street, in her 63rd year. A life-long resident of Peterborough, she was a daughter of the late James McGrath and Elizabeth Sanderson.

Besides her husband, she is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Mark Fitzgerald, Toronto, and the Misses Pearl and Marie Walsh at home, also sisters, Mrs. Blake Turney, Michigan, Mrs. William Staples, Apsley, Miss Annie McGrath, Lindsay, and Mrs. Frank McGuire, Hastings, and brothers John and Edward McGrath, Westwood, Richard McGrath, this city, and Charles McGrath in Western Canada.

The late Mrs. Walsh was of a quiet and kindly disposition, her chief interests centering around her home and family and her church. She was a very devout member of St. Peter's Cathedral congregation.

The funeral is to be held from the family residence on Friday at 8.40 a.m. to St. Peter's Cathedral for Requiem Mass at nine o'clock. Interment at St. Peter's Cemetery.

MRS. DENNIS HOOLIHAN.

DOWNEYVILE, May 29. — The funeral of the late Mrs. Dennis Hoolihan was held on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock from the residence of her son-in-law, Dennis C. Scully to St. Luke's Church, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father McFadden, who also said the prayers at the grave.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. William O'Brien, Vincent O'Connell, Patrick N. Winn, John J O'Leary, and Frank Milloy.

The late Mrs. Hoolihan, who was born in Emily some 85 years ago, was of a kind and lovable disposition. She was a friend of all who in time of trouble looked to her for comfort. A few days ago she fell and fractured her hip and seemed to be getting along well, but her death came suddenly and was a great shock to her friends and neighbors. Her husband predeceased her a number of years ago.

She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Monahan (Martha) of Detroit, Mich., Mrs. Jennings (Agnes) of Rochester, N.Y., and Mrs. Dennis O. Scully (Marie), with whom she resided, and two sons, Joseph of Kirkland Lake and Edward C. on the homestead. The funeral was largely attended by relatives and friends from Toronto, Lindsay, Dunsford, and Peterborough.

Bailieboro

Mrs. Fred White and sons Jack and Douglas have returned from Kingston where they have been spending the past fortnight the guests of the former's parents.

Mr. M. B. Perrin is a business visitor to Western Ontario this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Lang, Miss Esther Lang, Messrs. Carl and Haig Lang and Mrs. C. Byers were visitors to Belleville on Sunday.

Miss Ruth Dawson of Precious Corners spent the week-end the guest of her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rutherford and little daughter Mary of Toronto visited Mr. and Mrs. J. W. White over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dawson and little daughter visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Dawson on Sunday.

Keith Barnard of Toronto spent the holiday the guest of his parents.

Mr. P. J. Biglow of Port Hope visited friends in the district on Saturday last.

Sidney Lang of Oshawa spent the week-end the guest of his parents.

Among those from the village who attended the evening Sunday School anniversary services at Millbrook on Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. O. Williamson, Misses I. Jewison, and A. Heaslip, Messrs. H. and G. Dean and J. Porter.

JOIN IN LINE-UP

GUELPH, May 29.—(CP)—Adopting a procedure used in larger cities Guelph police staged a "line-up", so a citizen might identify a man regarding whom a complaint had been made. There was, however, a shortage of material. So court officials and city hall employees joined the row.

A drive has been organized under the name 'Better Bedding Week' and co-operating in this effort are Canadian Department Stores, A. Comstock & Sons, Home Furnishings, McBride & Franks.

These progressive stores have special displays of the newest bedding and furniture creations put out by Simmons Limited and home lovers will be well repaid for taking the time to visit all these stores. Even those who are not in the market for new equipment will enjoy seeing the new styles in beds, springs and mattresses, as well as in Simmons Metal Bedroom furniture, which with its great color possibilities and its suitability for clever decorating has swept the style world by storm and is today the fastest selling line of furniture in Canada.

The nation-wide reputation of Simmons Limited for producing the finest quality merchandise at all prices is reflected in the new Simmons products such as studio couches, chesterfields, metal card table sets of extraordinary beauty and strength, and many novelty pieces for occasional use. The same experience that taught Simmons how to make the famous Beautyrest and other fine long-wearing mattresses enables them now to produces living room furniture that is unquestionably the finest that can be bought. The hiddent construction which made Beautyrest and Deepsleep mattresses the most comfortable and the longest wearing now gives greater comfort and far longer life to chesterfields, to upholstered chairs and to studio couches. The stores stress the importance of the Simmons label; one merchant saying that surprisingly enough few purchasers seemed to appreciate the value of sound construction. A manufacturer who labels his products plainly is always careful to safeguard quality, and with a Simmons label in plain view no woman needs to worry about hidden quality.

Simmons Limited with its great experience in buying materials is able to present a tremendous range of interesting patterns from all the style centres of the world, making this new Simmons merchandise the most decorative ever shown. You can see the ultra fashionable all cotton homespuns, the silk and cotton jacquards, dobbestries, figured reppas; the smartest coverings in the world are on view and at prices within the reach of all.

Introductory prices will prevail during this 'Better Bedding Week' which means that you can buy the latest and finest bedding and living room furniture at amazingly low levels. The stories displaying these features will have all made special announcements of low prices and easy payment terms to encourage attendance and sales.

TALKS TO THE PEOPLE—J. H. BURNHAM

Many years ago, as those who do their own thinking will remember, churches were filled with sermons and addresses on "Leadership." As Kipling said of it, "Where there are leaders they must be led," and thus the individual was gradually relieved of his responsibility which was kindly transferred to others. Now one of the "leaders" at a recent conference has announced that it is the duty and the message of ministers to "interpret" the Scriptures in the language of to-day. These ministers are to be called, he says, "interpretators." It is to be hoped that no one will call them in derision, "tators," or anything like that. However, this is to be the new office of those who established the school of criticism of the Bible, and since they know more than God, they certainly ought to be listened to.

CROYDON GOLD THEFT CRIME IS CROOKS' LAUGHING STOCK

'Plane Lost, Cars Broke Down, Dumped Gold on Roadway

SEVEN YEARS IN JAIL

Croydon.—The great gold theft at Croydon aerodrome in connection with which Cecil Swanland, an artist, was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude at the Croydon quarter sessions will go down in the history of the underworld as the theft at which crooks laughed

In a little Soho cafe a reporter heard an astonishing story of how the robbery was planned and carried out.

The informant was a man who was able to give the police assistance in their inquiries.

Plans of Aerodrome Made

The police have reason to believe that the theft was financed and engineered by a person who for years has been one of the most dangerous receivers in the country, but they are having difficulty in getting definite evidence of this man's complicity, in the same way as they are experiencing difficulty in tracing other persons concerned in the theft.

"The theft was the most haphazard job I ever heard of," said the informant.

"The idea was hatched not very far from here less than a fortnight before it took place.

"A certain man went into a cafe and talked. Three people were very interested in what he was saying, and they got into conversation with him.

"Two of the three were amateurs, and the other man—who ought to have known better—had a record but had never been on a job similar to this.

"A plan of part of the aerodrome was sketched, and two copies made. Then the fun began, and only the fate which watches over fools prevented an arrest within a few hours of the 'job' being done.

"One man lost his plan. The arrangements for getting the gold to the fence at the aerodrome went wrong because two cars in succession broke down.

Dumped on Pavement

"One man was so terrified at the second breakdown that he got his section of the 'stuff' out of the car and dumped it on the pavement, where it remained until he recovered his nerve and the car was repaired.

"I never heard of such a chapter of accidents and foolishness.

"There is only this to be said about it—the gold is still missing, and I should think it is likely to remain so."

"It is most extraordinary in the history of crime that even with the cleverest criminal in the most elaborate and cleverly designed crime some stupid little thing is overlooked," said the judge sentencing Swanland.

$300 for Clothes

Although the accused had been earning less than $10 a week as an artist the court produced orders he had made for $300 worth of clothes the day after the robbery.

Swanland had a long record, seven convictions, five of them long prison terms.

"It is the kind of evidence we do not like—evidence of prisoners who come to swear away other prisoners," said the judge when police produced a statement from a cell-mate of the accused.

EXPERT IS FOOLED BY ARTIFICIAL DIAMONDS

$20,000 Offered for One Stone of New Synthetic Type

London.—A mysterious scientist, who refuses to allow his name to be disclosed, and who lives in a hidden country villa, is the genius behind a new system of producing artificial diamonds.

Victor Jourado, an antique dealer of Mount St., Mayfair W., who has secured world rights for the process, said that the new "diamonds" defy detection by all but the most expert of jewel authorities.

"The mystery scientist is a very old man," Mr. Jourado declared.

"Only now, after he had worked on his plans for 45 years, has he achieved success.

"The stones are produced by the use of intense heat on a secret compound. It is all very simple; but it is something for which scientists have been searching for years.

"I first heard of the system when a friend of mine brought a beautiful stone to me and offered to sell it for $20,000.

"I examined it very carefully and agreed to pay the price. Only when I had filled in a cheque did he tell me the stone was synthetic."

E. P. Biggs, a member of the firm of Messrs. Carrington, the Regent St. jewellers, said that he had seen many artificial diamonds, but never one that could deceive an expert.

"If the new system is as good as is claimed," he said, "it will be a remarkable thing."

Protest Against High Cost of Funerals Under State Monopoly

Budapest.—"We want to be buried more cheaply."

Under this slogan the public and press of Budapest have issued a protest against the state monopoly of undertaking in the Hungarian capital.

FALLS FROM WINDOW ON PEDESTRIAN'S HEAD

Corset Worker Killed in 60-Ft. Drop—Victim Survives

London. — While Oxford Circus was crowded with shoppers a woman crashed from the fifth-floor window of a building—to land on a young woman walking below.

The woman who fell, Miss Millie Watson, 50, of Burges Rd., East Ham, E., died within an hour of being admitted to Middlesex hospital.

Mrs. Lilian Doughty, 27, of Mansell Rd., Greenford (Middlesex), the other woman, was also rushed to Middlesex hospital, suffering from concussion.

She was not seriously injured.

"I heard a thud and rushed out to find a woman lying on the ground face downwards," a shop clerk stated.

"A few yards away, lying almost in the roadway, was a younger woman, who had been struck by the other woman in her 60-foot fall.

"People immediately below the window from which the woman fell had no warning of the accident; no shriek was heard.

"Oxford Circus was crowded at the time, and police had to push back people who gathered round the two women."

A friend stated that Miss Watson had been suffering from nerves through helping to keep her home going. She was employed as a machinist by a corset firm with offices in Oxford St.

CRACK JUVENILE GANG CUTS BIG CRIME DASH

Leader Well Educated, Expert Organizer "Can Climb Like a Cat"

Deptford.—The existence of a gang of about 30 expert boy burglars has just been disclosed at the Deptford juvenile court.

Twelve alleged members of the gang were charged with a number of shopbreaking offences in the Downham district.

The goods stolen ranged from 6,000 cigarettes, 100 packets of tobacco and 90 cigars, to two pairs of hair clippers and seven pounds of peanuts.

A detective said that the gang's organization was so efficient that by posting scouts when they were breaking into a shop they had always succeeded in evading the police.

One of the leaders, he said, was a boy of superior education, who could climb like a cat and almost squeeze through a letter-box.

The officer added that the gang broke into the Salvation Army citadel at Downham and stole a concertina and two cornets (one of silver). They sold the concertina, and the cornets were placed on the railway line for trains to run over.

Four of the boys were remanded to a home for a fortnight. The others were allowed bail.

COUNTESS IN KITCHEN LEARNS CULINARY ART

Copenhagen Has "Positive Passion" for English Food, Says Beauty

London.—Patrons of two famous west end restaurants will shortly be eating dinners cooked by a Danish countess who has come to London to learn the secrets of English cuisine.

She is the Countess Elna Trampe, daughter of Count Jorgen Trampe, head of a Danish family which had its beginning in the middle ages.

Countess Elna is, for the first time in her life, embarking on a business career, for in September she will open in Copenhagen's Bond St. a fashionable restaurant on English lines, where Danish women will be able to indulge their passion for English tea and bridge.

Dark, chic and petite, Countess Elna, who is a niece of the first equerry to the king of Denmark, is spending $100,000 on the equipment of her restaurant, but before she can secure a license to open it she has to prove that she has had practical experience in all branches of restaurant management. That is why she is here.

"I shall shirk nothing to master the essentials of restaurant catering," she said. "I shall cook dishes and take my turn as bookkeeper and receptionist.

"I expect most of my time will be spent in the kitchens, for in Copenhagen there is a positive passion for English food."

PLAYED A LAST GAME AFTER WIFE'S SUICIDE

Carried Her Body to Bed, Scored at Skittles, Gassed Himself

Burnham-on-Sea, Somerset. — A man returned home to find his wife dead from gas poisoning; he carried her body upstairs to a bedroom; went out; made top score at a skittles match; returned home, and took his life.

This was the story told at an inquest here on Henry Trangman and his wife, Alice Honor, of College St., Burnham-on-Sea, who were found dead in their house.

Medical evidence was that both had died from gas poisoning.

It was stated that the woman was found on her bed with horn-rimmed spectacles over her eyes and a rosary round her neck. There was no gas in the room.

The man was found in a armchair before a gas stove in the kitchen and on the door was a notice, "Gas, beware."

The coroner read extracts from the letters left by the husband. Passages were:

"I have played my last game of skittles, and I would like to leave on record that I am sorry to leave it like this. What can I do?

"Alice was a Roman Catholic, and one of the purest women I have ever met. She has gone first and I have carried her dear little body upstairs."

Evidence was given that the couple were in financial difficulties.

SIX-LANE VIADUCT TOLL ROADS PROPOSED TO CUT FATALITIES

80 m.p.h. on Auto Speedways Going Over Roads and Cities

THREE CENTS A MILE

London.—Giant six-lane highways with a 40-mile-an-hour minimum speed, carrying traffic on viaducts over busy roads and towns, with no crossings, are highlights of a vast highway building scheme just submitted to the ministry of transport by S. Newman, a Leeds business man, after ten years of traffic study.

With neither pedestrians, wagons or buildings of any sort such roads, it is claimed, would practically abolish road fatalities and permit motorists to reap the full advantages of the speedy travel their cars provide.

One-way ramps would provide for the cars to enter or leave the roads.

Traffic would be divided into three lines in each direction—the nearside line reserved for minimum speeds of 40 m.p.h., the next for 60 m.p.h., and the outer for 80 m.p.h.

"In the case of the London-Brighton motorway," said Mr. Newman, "my proposal is that viaducts should carry it over the ordinary roads until the outskirts of London are reached. This would prevent demolishing buildings for a new trail to be plazed.

"Once outside London the road would flatten out and cross roads could be tunnelled beneath it or bridged over it.

"It would run by way of Redhill and would be forty-seven miles long. The cost of building it would be approximately $300,000 a mile.

Pay For Itself

"The total expenditure of $20,000,000 for the road would be paid by a toll for its use.

"If three cents a mile were charged the annual yield would be about $1,000,000.

"It would employ a vast number of men for years and save much of the unemployment outgoings.

"And all that is needed to get this scheme working is a short bill in parliament giving power to acquire the land and facilitate the building of the road and a government guaranteed three per cent. loan for the cost.

"Even if the government got nothing from it their duty is to build the roads and see that many others all over the country are also constructed."

END SUNDAY COACHING

Objectors to Church Alterations Return as Rector Leaves

Botley, Hants.—Some of the villagers of Durley, near Botley, have been travelling by specially chartered motor coaches eight miles to church services at Swanmore on Sundays for the past three years because they took exception to alterations at Durley church.

With the announcement that the rector, Rev. A. J. Sinclair Burton, is leaving for another church, the objectors have agreed to discontinue their Sunday coaching parties and return to church. Their last trip was on Jubilee Sunday.

WONDER HORSE DIES STOCK WON FORTUNES

Blandford, Greatest Sire Turf Has Known, Killed by Pneumonia

Whatcombe. — Blandford, greatest sire the turf has ever known, is dead.

He died of pneumonia at R. C. Dawson's stud at Whatcombe, Berkshire.

Although Blandford's progeny have been racing for only eight full seasons, in that time he sired three winners of the Derby, two winners of the St. Leger, one winner of the Oaks, and one winner of the 1,000 Guineas.

Beat 70-Year Record

His Derby winners were Windsor Lad, Blenheim and Trigo. Windsor Lad and Trigo also won the St. Leger.

Yet his owner, R. C. Dawson's wife, bought him for $3,850 as a yearling in 1920.

Last year Blandford beat a record which has stood for nearly 70 years. His stock won races valued at $378,535, beating by over $70,000 the figures set up by Stockwell in 1866.

To his death his stock had won in Great Britain and Ireland 202 races, worth $1,011,445. That figure, it is expected, will soon be much greater.

Derby Favorite

Bahram, regarded as the pick of the two-year-olds in England last year, is also by Blandford. He is expected to win one or other of the classic races this year.

He runs in the 2,000 Guineas at Newmarket, and is the present favorite for the Derby.

Blandford was also the sire of the French horse, Brantome, which so far is unbeaten.

Blandford's stud fee this year was 500 guineas. Only two other sires, Tetrarch and Solario, have commanded such a high fee.

INSIDE FOR 30 YEARS TO AVOID PNEUMONIA

Caught Cold in 1905—Never Been to Front Door Since

Sheffield.—Just so that he should not catch pneumonia, John William Scaife, a Sheffield lime merchant, has stayed at home for the last 30 years.

In 1905 he caught a severe cold and, since then, he has not even been to his front door, so afraid is he of a draught.

Mr. Scaife, who lives in Abbeyfield Rd., Pitsmoor, Sheffield; has refused to see any visitors except the manager of his business.

Daily, the books are brought to him and he examines them in consultation with his daughter.

But there is no telephone in the house and Mr. Scaife has never been to the cinema or travelled in a car or bus.

All he has known of the outside world during these 30 years—years of wars, revolutions, great scientific discoveries—is what he has gleaned from newspapers and conversation.

He watches the traffic from the window of his house and is quite satisfied with his life.

"He misses a lot of excitement, but," said one of his family, "he avoids a lot of worry."

VILLAGE THAT BANS SHOPS SAVED FROM 'IMPROVEMENT'

Rector Buys Whole District to Keep It a Quiet Beauty Spot

NOTHING TOUCHED

Cirencester.—Most of Barnsley, a pretty village of 200 people in the Cotswold Hills, has been bought by its rector, the Rev. J. W. H. Toynbee.

His purchases include 25 homes, three farms, the village hall, the school and the Barnsley post-office.

The little community was suddenly disturbed by rumors of an upheaval which would affect them all.

Their homes were to be sold and there were stories of the possibility of what builders to-day call "developments" in the village.

It was whispered that new and unknown owners might descend on the village and build bungalows and flats. The villagers wondered if their old cottages might be wiped out.

All the village, all the homes were to be put up for sale and passed into the hands of syndicate. Then came the rumors . . . and now the rector's action to save the old-world village.

"Nothing will be touched, nothing will be interfered with, the people will remain in their homes," Mrs. Toynbee stated.

Barnsley has one inn and a post-office, but it does not contain a single shop. There is not even a sweet shop where the school children can spend their pennies.

Shops Not Allowed

Up till now shopkeeping had not been allowed. What will happen under the new ownership remains to be seen, but any articles that tradesmen do not bring into the village from outside have to be fetched from Cirencester—miles away.

Barnsley is in the heart of hill country; green pasture land dipping up and down divided according to the ancient rights of property by low walls of gray Cotswold stone that bend and twist across the hills.

The walls are splashed with green, brown and yellow lichen. Down in the valleys the little Cotswold hamlets nestle like flocks of gray sheep, the spire or tower of the church rising in the centre with the gabled farms and the cottages around.

Just a winding road with gray cottages on either side, gray farms and a gray church—that is Barnsley.

A mansion where the squire lived.

The old-time builders in the Cotswolds seem to have taken as much pains over the cottages as they did over the mansions, and so you see the gables, the stone mullions and the lattice windows even in the tiny homes.

. . . And this the rector has bought to save it from any alteration.

OPEN BIGGEST ESCALATOR

Underground Station at Leicester Square Handles 25,000,000 Yearly

London.—The world's longest escalator has just been opened at the new underground station, Leicester Square.

This 161-foot-long moving stairway is really a jubilee escalator. It is just over 25 years since Londoners first timidly entrusted themselves to the escalator at Earl's Court, W.

In those days Leicester Square station handled a trifle of 8,000,000 passengers a year; now the number exceeds 25,000,000.

The speed of the new escalators will be high—165 feet per minute—or roughly two miles an hour. They are arranged in sets of three, and each set requires 1,000 horse-power to operate it at full load.

'THE PIG GOT UP AND—' IS NEW B.B.C. WORRY

Apologies Follow Censors' Ban on Song Hit

London.—Much more strict censorship of the words of songs broadcast by outside dance bands has been undertaken by the B.B.C. since it issued a public apology recently for "the inclusion of certain objectionable remraks" in a "music hall" program. It is understood that all dance band leaders have been instructed by the B.B.C. that when in future they play over the air a popular song of the moment called "The Pig Got Up and Slowly Walked Away," the words are not to be sung.

Irwin Dash, the publisher of the song, said that although he did not necessarily agree with the B.B.C.'s ban, he would abide by it.

"It is a much-liked song," he said, "but the B.B.C. does not care for the words, and that is that so far as I am concerned."

Chosen by B.B.C. Producer

The ban on this song is tinged with a certain flavor of unrehearsed comedy.

"The Pig Got Up, etc.," was personally chosen by a B.B.C. producer to be sung in a forthcoming "music hall" broadcast by a well-known comedian.

The producer had heard nothing of the ban until told by the comedian, who had been told by the publisher.

It appears that one-half of the B.B.C. does not know what the other half bans.

SAFER ROADS IS AIM OF FIVE-YEAR PLAN

Spend $500,000,000 Car License Fees on Highway Improvement

London.—A vast program of road improvements is being formulated by county road engineers following the announcement of the government's five-year plan for safer roads.

From April 1, when operations begin, there will be an orgy of road reconstruction throughout the country.

The road fund is out of debt. Without any increase in the number of car registrations the minister can rely on a yearly sum of $125,000,000.

If new cars continue to come on the roads at the present rate he will have many millions more.

Instead of living "from hand to mouth," local authorities will be told exactly how much money they can spend over the five-year period.

Lancashire has already asked for something like one hundred new bridges, Yorkshire for about 150. Nearly one thousand in all are to be repaired or reconstructed.

The humped-back variety, as perilous almost as blind corners, will, it is hoped, be entirely removed. It has at last been realized that dangerous roads are an important contributory cause of the heavy death roll.

It is estimated that there are still at least 40,000 blind corners on Britain's 177,347 miles of roads. Every one is a source of danger. Many thousands will be improved.

The ministry are convinced that with the materials now available there is no need for any local authority to make slippery roads. Hundreds of miles of dangerous surface are to be made non-skidding.

Where roads are sufficiently wide dual ways, to separate up and down traffic, will be provided.

The first big moves have been taken by the west riding of Yorkshire, Lancashire and Middlesex.

Ideas to be submitted include carrying subsidiary roads by tunnels or flyovers under or over the main roads, so leaving the main road traffic free from interference from traffic using subsidiary roads.

Long distance cyclists' roads will be multiplied if some schemes are approved. A number of surveyors ask for a 7 ft. 6 in. track for cyclists on some arterial highways.

FLAMING BALES OF TOBACCO FAIL TO PROTECT SMUGGLERS

Customs Officers Fall Into Trap — But Tobacco Trucks Captured

WORTH $10,000 SUM

Paris.—Flinging bales of gasoline soaked tobacco under the wheels of the pursuing police car, armed smugglers who had been chased at midnight for ten miles from Wattrelos, on the Belgian frontier, to Lille, set fire to their own lorry and escaped.

This was the sensational climax to the latest of the smuggling "wars" on the Belgian frontier, which, since the devaluation of the belga, have grown to serious proportions.

Hold-up Ruse

The battle began at Wattrelos, where a dozen bandits attempted to hold up customs officials at the revolver-point.

They were met with a volley of bullets and retreated, but their ruse had succeeded.

While they were being chased by customs officials three lorries, which had been kept in the background, darted over the frontier.

Two were headed off and obliged to retreat, but the third, driven at reckless speed, was pursued by a police car.

Cornered

The chase led to Lille, where in the Rue de Strasbourg the smugglers were cornered.

One of them climbed on the roof of the lorry, poured petrol over the "cargo" of tobacco, and flung burning bales at the police car. Then the lorry slowed down, all the tobacco in it was set alight and the smugglers escaped down a side street.

The lorry blazed for 20 minutes before firemen put out the flames and removed what was left of the tobacco. The value of the cigarettes is put at $10,000.

The two other lorries were not traced, and a man who was caught in the revolver fight refused to give the authorities any information.

FAILED TO SUPPORT MOTHER

Mr. Barrington-Ward, K.C., described the case as a "perfect scandal" when at Lambeth police court he ordered James Dangerfield, said to be assessed at $5,000 a year for income tax, to pay $30 arrears under an order respecting his mother, who is in a public institution.

PURITAN PARSON PANS JUBILEE CARD TRICKS

Even Sight of Cards Harmful to Children

Tintwhistle, Cheshire.—The Rev. John Penrose, known as the "Puritan Parson" has roused the wrath of several church officials by his refusal to allow card tricks to be shown in the Sunday school at a children's entertainment during jubilee week.

His objection is not to tricks, but to playing cards, which on no pretext will he permit to be displayed before children.

The Sunday school superintendent, the registrar and the secretary of the sale of work committee have resigned.

Churchwardens have taken the side of the Sunday school committee, which decided by a majority to allow the card tricks to be given.

Mr. Penrose, who is about 30, stopped dancing and amateur theatricals in the Sunday school on coming to the parish a few months ago.

MOUSTACHE COMEDY EXPOSES EXAM FRAUD

Tutor Disguised as Student Loses Whisker When Fans Start

Calcutta.—In Calcutta's University Hall students were steadily plowing their tortuous ways through the final B.A. paper.

It was hot, and a number of candidates requested that the electric fans might be switched on.

An examining professor obliged, and pulled the switches over and the fans revolved at full speed.

Heated brows were cooled, and the students looked up gratefully.

The professor smiled back courteously—but the smile froze on his face.

A full, black moustache adorning the upper lip of one aspirant of academic honors was losing its grip.

Slowly, under the waftings of the fans, it passed gently into the air, and there was revealed, not the well-known countenance of the student, but that of the candidate's tutor!

He rushed wildly from the examination hall, hotly pursued by students.

RIFLE IN TIGER'S MOUTH

Hunter Saves Self When Killer-Beast Springs on Him

Rangoon.—An eight-foot man-eating tiger was being hunted near Maymyo Hill station after it had killed a Burmese bearer.

Suddenly it sprang out of the thick jungle on to its hunters.

It knocked down P. V. Lovett-Campbell of Leighton Buzzard, Beds, and was about to tear him with its teeth, when he pushed the muzzle of his gun into its mouth.

He thus held it off until another member of the party, Lieutenant J. G. Wilton of the Royal Artillery, shot it dead at point-blank range.

ELDERLY COUNTESS THREATENS KIDNAP

Impoverished Woman Falls Into Police Trap Set in Church

Paris.—A French countess who, having spent a considerable fortune, is now living in extreme poverty, has been arrested at Vannes, in South Brittany, on a charge of threatening to kidnap a six-year-old boy for money.

The woman is said to be the Comtesse de la Barre de Daune, and owing to her age—she is 68—she has been released, but told to hold herself at the disposal of the police.

A few days ago the mother of the boy, who belongs to a well-to-do family, received a letter which said, "Place $350 on the altar of the old church within 48 hours or your child will be kidnapped."

The mother informed the police, who decided to carry out the instructions.

They placed an envelope containing some newspaper clippings on the altar, and a detective kept watach.

A smart, elderly woman was seen to approach the altar, but the detective took little notice as he was expecting a sturdily-built "gangster," the kidnapping letter having been written in a style of underworld slang.

The woman further diverted suspicion in the church by remaining on her knees for a long time, as if in silent prayer.

Later the detective found that the envelope had been replaced by another.

He had seen sufficient to identify the comtesse, however, and she was arrested.

KISS OF KIDNAPPED CHILD MAKES EX-CONVICT REPENT

"Changed My Life," Says Accomplice, Restoring Her Without Ransom

PARENTS NOT RICH

Paris.—A kiss which caused the "repentance" of an ex-convict has aroused new hopes of finding little Nicole Marescot, the four-year-old daughter of Major Marescot, of the Chaumont Garrison, who has been missing for a fortnight.

In a letter to the girl's mother, a Belgian under the name of "Pierre" asks for her pardon for kidnapping Nicole.

He assures her that the child is quite well, adding:

"A little patience, madame, and your child will be restored to you without demanding money, simply because I repented and hope to be pardoned.

"Your little girl was the cause of my repentance. She kissed me sweetly and that has changed the whole course of my life."

"Pierre," explained that he consented to be an accomplice in the kidnapping in order to help his divorced wife. She was badly in need of money, and they hoped to get a good ransom.

The kidnapping was carried out by his ex-wife and two strangers. He did not see Nicole till three days later, when her hair had been dyed chestnut for disguise.

"I said, 'Come and kiss me,'" said "Pierre," "and was deeply moved. Then we learned that the Marescots were not rich and that madame was expecting another baby.

"I decided Nicole must be restored, but the others refused at first, and we had a fight, in which shots were fired at me.

"Then I went to Basle and got a priest to telephone to Major Marescot."

Three times a rendezvous was fixed, first at Chambery and then at the Belgian frontier, but each time the Belgian said that the vigilance of the detectives had scared his accomplices away.

A report from Brussels alleges that "Pierre" is a man named Warsot, and that he went to Belgium some time ago to demand money from his wife. On her refusal he replied, "You will soon be bothered by the law."

POLICEMAN'S DISGUISE BETRAYED BY BOOTS

"Look at His Feet" Was Warning Shout

London.—A police constable explained at Marylebone police court how an otherwise excellent disguise had been penetrated owing to the fact that he wore size 11 in boots.

The officer, P.C. Green, was giving evidence against George Hicks, 50, of Wyfold Rd., Fulham, S.W., who was accused of obstruction by warning a street bookmaker.

P.C. Green said he was disguised as a mechanic with a long white smock over his uniform, and he was about to arrest the bookmaker when Hicks pointed at his boots and shouted, "Look out, Jack! Here's a copper." The bookmaker ran away.

Hicks denied that he was the man and was discharged.

"ENGAGED," REPLIES ROBOT

London. — The first robot telephone girl has just been put into operation in the Folkestone automatic area, where subscribers ringing an engaged number will be greeted by a specially selected voice saying, "Engaged, engaged," in place of the usual high-pitched, intermittent buzz.

FRIEND OF HEIRESS NIPPED BY CUSTOMS

Woolworth Princess Wears Clothes Once—Beneficiary Pays $1,058 Penalty

Folkestone.—Dresses which were a gift from Princess Alexis Mdivani, formerly Miss Barbara Hutton, the Woolworth heiress, were the subject of a customs prosecution at Folkestone recently.

Mrs. Evelyn Violet Jean Kennerley of Royal Ave., Chelsea, S.W., was fined $1,058 for attempting to evade duties on 14 dresses, seven hats, two pairs of shoes and two handbags. The fine represented the single value and duty on the articles.

Mrs. Kennerley was taken to the chief preventive officer, to whom she said: "Princess Mdivani, who gave them to me, is very wealthy, and when I buy one frock she buys 30 or 40. She would wear them once or twice, and then give them to me. We are great friends," said the accused.

Sir S. Worthington Evans, for Mrs. Kennerley, said she went to Paris on Nov. 12 as a guest at a birthday party which the princess was giving.

The princess had verified the story of these gifts.

GUILTY BUT INSANE

London.—Harry Hans Edwards, aged 80, a clerk of Canterbury Grove, West Norwood, S.E., was found guilty but insane at the Old Bailey on a charge of murdering his wife, Elizabeth, aged 73, and was ordered to be detained during his majesty's pleasure.

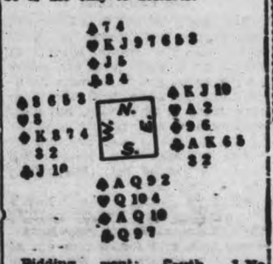
CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. Shepard

LET DECLARER GUESS

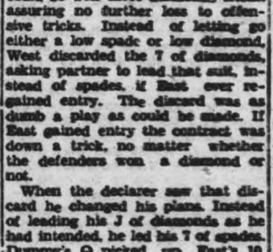
Only when it may help partner more than declarer should you disclose the position of an important card. Instead of gossiping, let declarer guess. West gave North game by giving information which could be of use only to declarer.



Bidding went: South, 1-No Trump, on the rubber game; North, 3-hearts, to make certain that the call would not go unanswered; East, 4-clubs; South, 4-hearts; East, doubled.

The opening lead was the K of clubs. West played the J, to make certain partner would throw that the third round could be ruffed. The ace followed, but East had to prevent the declarer obtaining a valuable discard on the Q, by forcing West to ruff. A low club was led, ruffed by partner and overruffed by the declarer. The fourth trick went to East's ace of hearts. He led that suit back. Declarer overtook dummy's 10 with his own J, to be in position to lead toward dummy's diamonds. If East held the missing K of diamonds there could be won three diamonds tricks, assuring no further loss to offensive tricks. Instead of letting go either a low spade or low diamond, West discarded the 7 of diamonds, asking partner to lead that suit, instead of spades, if East ever regained entry. The discard was as dumb a play as could be made. If East gained entry the contract was down a trick, no matter whether the defenders won a diamond or not.

When the declarer saw that discard he changed his plans. Instead of leading his J of diamonds as he had intended, he led his 7 of spades. Dummy's Q picked up East's 10. The ace of spades picked up the J. When declarer ruffed the 2 of spades the K fell, leaving dummy's 9 good. To fulfil his doubled contract declarer led a diamond, won the trick with dummy's ace, and discarded his last diamond on the 9 of spades. Of course the declarer was fortunate to have spades held just as he needed them, but West's warning obliged North to try the only hope left for game.



South played the above hand at 6-hearts. The opening lead was the 8 of spades. Before tomorrow see if contract can be made against the best subsequent defence.

In setting your table or choosing the settings for your dining room it is a requirement of good taste to take into consideration the decoration and furniture of your room.

• • • • • • •

A very modern room would need entirely different types of silverware, china and glassware than a room done in stately English style.

• • • • • • •

As this is the season of brides and silver is such an acceptable and popular gift it is well to consider the style of home or apartment the young couple are going to have and be sure your gift will fit in with the scheme of things.

• • • • • • •

Simple silver patterns are very popular this season.

• • • • • • •

Frothy summer bags are correct to carry with your dainty summer chiffon or organdie. The entire bag is made of very sheer white chiffon posed over a foundation of white, pink or pale blue taffeta. Delicate pearl beadwork ornaments the top of the bag, with fine embroidery in each corner of the fold-over top. Frail it is, but exquisite.

• • • • • • •

Summer slippers are being shown in pastel colored suede and kid to go with delicately colored prints for afternoon and evening. A friend of mine colored an old pair of white shoes with dye to exactly match the dress she wanted to wear at a dance.

• • • • • • •

The new shorts are knee length and are pleated all around. They are very chick as well as being a little more feminine.

• • • • • • •

Sheer black marquisette over rustling black taffeta is the rage for summer afternoon wear. Street length gowns in this material is very lovely indeed—lovely for church—wouldn't you feel dressed up.

• • • • • • •

Chints spreads are lovely for the summer cottage or to give a summery look to the apartment if you are spending the summer at home. Gay little flower patterns are so pretty.

• • • • • • •

TWO TASTY DISHES

VEAL BIRDS

Cut veal cutlet or meaty pieces of veal shoulder into pieces approximately three by four inches. Flatten with a potato masher and spread with a well seasoned stuffing. Roll up and tie with string. Brown in butter or oleo. Add one cup thin cream sauce, cover and bake slowly for 40 minutes. Or wrap each "bird" in a strip of bacon before browning.

• • • • • • •

CHEESE SAUCE

Two tablespoons butter, four tablespoons flour, two cups milk, one-half teaspoon salt, one and one-half cups grated American cheese. Melt butter, blend in flour, add milk slowly and stir until thickened and smooth. Season well. Stir in cheese, heat over a low fire or over hot water until the cheese is thoroughly melted. Serve piping hot over asparagus, placed on slices of crisp toast.

ROBERTA'S CHAT

A column conducted by a reader of The Examiner for her other reader friends. Address all mail to Roberta in care of The Examiner.

"Get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee."—Shakespeare.

Dear Friend:

Are you one of these business women, who have married and gone back to work?

Nothing but dire necessity should make you do that, for you are not playing the game, and will be the loser in the end.

I've talked to women, and read of others, who kept their job after marriage, and although some of them earned as much as $5,000 a year, they told me that, at the end of ten years, they were no further ahead.

Your husband is entitled to a home and children, and it is no real home, where both are absent from it, all day.

Then both get used to the double salary, and even although you have a maid, no one can be wife and mother but you, and you cheat if you don't do it. You are not fair either to the young girls who graduate from collegiate or business school. You had your chance, and should let them have theirs. There is not enough work in the business world for both men and women. You may not like housework, but you can learn to like it.

So, come on, be a wife in reality. Let others have a chance. You promised certain things at the altar. Keep your word.

Your friend,
ROBERTA.

Be Beautiful

By GLADYS GLAD

Back in the days when granny was a lass, coronet braids were considered the height of hair fashions, because of their regality. In those days, most women had hair long enough to be braided and properly twisted about the head. But as Claire Trevor, whose acting and personality have made her a cinema favorite, can tell you, women today seldom have hair long enough to twist about their heads. Claire, herself, agrees that coronet braids add queenliness to an individual's appearance, and are attractive. And she herself often utilizes them for evening wear. But the braids she uses are the detachable variety, and aren't really her own hair.

Some of the more exotic girls here of late have been wearing coronet braids that match or harmonize with their gowns. That, of course, is far too extreme for the average woman. But according to a late cable from Paris, hair stylists claim that coronet braids are being incorporated in many of the latest smart coiffures.

Variations Stylish

The simple three-strand braid used in the past has, for modern purposes, many variations. In the first place, the braid may be made of four strands, a style that is particularly suited to the woman to whom a heavy type of braids is becoming. The braid may be just a single braid of three or four strands, or, for more classic lines, three slimmer braids may be worn over the head about an inch and a half apart. The braid may be worn flat over the crown of the head. And again, it may be so attached to a shell foundation that it stands up from the head somewhat in a halo effect. This latter, of course, is most suitable for formal occasions, when hats are not worn.

If your own hair is not long enough for braiding, you can procure coronet braids to match your own locks, as Claire Trevor does, in the better beauty salons. And if you aren't the type to wear a coronet braid, there are other hair pieces that might add a great deal of charm to your appearance. Fluffy little side curls and sturdier curls for the nape of the neck also can be procured. They are easy to attach, and do wonders in covering up broken hair ends. And they may prove just the thing you've been needing to glorify your appearance.

Ducat Pays Over $400 On Miner

Unread Ticket Nearly Proves Costly to Toronto Racing Fan.

AYMOND READY TO GO

THEY GOT away yesterday (Tuesday) afternoon at Thorncliffe on the second lap of the Canadian racing season. Monday was an off day and besides giving the owners a chance to transfer their charges it gave the talent an opportunity of gathering together a new bank roll to do battle with the Iron Men.

An amusing incident occurred on Saturday at the Woodbine when a fan who is not a regular attendant at the tracks walked up to the seller's wicket before the second race and asked for a twenty dollar straight ticket on Meloy. He placed the ducat in his pocket and went up into the grandstand and watched his favorite get well trimmed by The Miner. He made a few more bets during the afternoon with no more success and returned home in not the best of humor. Before retiring on Saturday night he started comparing his tickets with his program and much to his surprise he found he had been given a straight ticket on The Miner. The ticket vender due to the similarity of the names Meloy and Miner thought that he asked for the latter.

MUCH EXCITED he rushed to the phone and called the Ontario Jockey club offices but of course at that hour of the night nobody was there. He tried again several times on Sunday with no more success but on Monday morning when they opened he was the first customer and received well over four hundred dollars. This incident again proves, that the slogan on each program which says, compare your mutuel ticket with your program before leaving the seller's wicket is put there as a safety valve for all customers.

There are some folks who do nothing else but go to all race tracks the year round from sunny Florida to Ontario and stay at the best hotels and live like kings, and never make a bet but just pick up tickets off the ground which have been discarded by some greenhorn. One of these fellows told us he averages over one hundred dollars per week the year around. Pretty soft dough.

THIS CANUK bred called Aymond is ready for a winning effort any day now. If you remember it was not so very many years ago that he won the King's Plate and is back again in the Ryland H. New barn after eating his oats in many different stables these past few years. Battle Plane is another Canadian bred that is just ready for the question and just craving action at the present time. His latest trials have been wonderful.

After this meeting at Thorncliffe the track will be put into shape for the trotters and pacers as the Grand Circuit are holding a meeting there in July and those that prefer their horse racing that-a-way will have their innings. And in the meantime don't forget that any horse the Seagram stable sends to the post is a fit animal, you know the answer! It is not often that we slap ourselves on the back but did you notice in yesterday's racing at Thorncliffe where we picked the daily double for you, paying off at $1,269.60, Bay Drop at $4.45 in the first and Rock Crest at $82.75 in the third.

BARNEY ROSS BEATS IRISH AT OWN GAME

But Decision Fails to Find Favor With Large Part of 31,000 Crowd.

DEMPSEY IS THIRD MAN.

(By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, May 29 C.P.). — Barney Ross, youthful dealer in speed and guile, took over the rulership of the welterweights to-day as the boxing world mourned the probable loss of gallant Jimmy McLarnin.

In the eyes of Referee Jack Dempsey, whose appointment found disfavor in McLarnin's corner, and the two judges, Barney outsped and outslugged the champion last night in 15 rounds that might have been staged on a pier instead of in the ring of the Polo Grounds.

From old Pop Foster, manager and counsellor to McLarnin for more than a decade, the verdict brought the shout "We've been jobbed," and a measure of confirmation that the great Vancouver Irishman is considering retirement.

Decision Unpopular.

A good part of the 31,000, who witnessed the third thrilling and close duel between the two ring terriers, was derisively booing the decision when McLarnin, back in his dressing-room, was announcing he would talk over retirement plans with Pop. Jimmy said he believed he had won nine rounds, with several of the others even.

As an afterthought, he added that he "would like another crack at the welter title."

Dempsey and Judges Abe Goldberg and George Lecron, by their aggregate vote, scored a total of 22 rounds for Ross, 13 for the striving McLarnin, and called 10 even. Dempsey did not call a left hook that landed away below McLarnin's belt in the steaming 12th round.

Incessant Clouting.

It was nearly incessant heavy clouting from the sixth round through to the final 15th when both punch artists were dog weary. But there were no knockdowns despite the heavy ammunition they fired at each other.

Twice Jimmy's knees buckled slightly from the terrific barrages the dark-haired Chicago Jew loosed to the head and body. As early as the second round, and again in the 14th, Barney shot forward machine gunning from either side. The Canuck faltered but momentarily.

On the elusive target dancing before him, McLarnin found few openings for his feared right hand. He scored with seeming ease, however, with a darting left and in the final fury of the 15th round looked to have his foe on the point of a knockout from a furious body attack. But the necessary steam would not come from muscles tired by the long, gruelling grind that had gone before.

The McLarnin left drummed home incessantly. It was probably that weapon that made the jubilant Ross say after the bout that "McLarnin gave me more trouble than in either of the other two bouts." But always, the mercury-limbed Barney was on the move. It did not appear the full force of Jimmy's powers landed flush at any time.

Stunning as it was to McLarnin rooters who had seen him devastate so many of the ring's greats, it was a fact that Ross appeared to beat Jimmy at the Cnadian celt's own game. In two clashes last year, when the decisions were divided, Ross tried to outbox and outspeed the dynamic fists of McLarnin. Last night, on most of the many occasions when both boys were travelling at the top of their power and speed, Ross blasted away with more effect than the old-time killer of the little men. McLarnin was usually the first to cover up.

In the fourth, Jimmy's looping left caught the lithe Jew on the nose and from then on it bled. In landing a whistling left uppercut in the seventh, Ross said he sprained that hand. He carried on with a stamina that was remarkable.

Ross, who at 141 was the heaviest in his career, was battered about the face as Announcer Joe Humphreys lifted his hand in victory. His cheek bled as well as his broad nose. McLarnin, who scaled 144¾, had only small cuts over his eyebrows, but he looked the more tired of the two.

Referee Dempsey, whose selection drew Foster's ire to such an extent that he protested before the fight to the chairman of the State Athletic Commissioner, Brigadier General John Phelan, gave McLarnin the best score sheet of the three officials. Jack's score showed five rounds for Ross, three for McLarnin, and seven even. On the judges' cards, Goldberg tallied eight for Ross, six for McLarnin, and one even, while Lecron scored nine for Ross, four for McLarnin, and two even.

Foster charged Dempsey had been "on the other side, referring to Jack's pre-fight predictions favoring Ross and visits at the Chicago boy's training camp.

Below Expectations

The crowd fell considerably below expectations, despite balmy weather. Gross gate receipts were $144,080 and the net $116,894.21, as compared with $138,000 for their first fight and $197,000 for the second match last year.

CINCINNATI FALLS ON BRAVES FOR SIXTH CONSECUTIVE WIN

Reds Gain Sixth Place, Having Won 16 Games and Lost as Many.

PIRATES ADVANCE.

Circuit Blows Count as Detroit Tigers Take 8-3 Decision From Yanks.

ATHLETICS WIN 6-5.

BY ANDY CLARKE

Associated Press Sports Writer

Cincinnati Reds, long accustomed to the dregs, have at last taken a long draught of victory.

Yesterday they ran their list of consecutive wins up to six, the longest march of conquest they have known in four years. They fell on the Braves, with Flint Rhem and Ben Cantwell on the hill, for 18 vengeful hits and defeated the Boston team by the wide margin of 13-4. Long blows were ringing off the Red bats; Kampouris whaled out a triple and two doubles, Riggs a triple nd Lombardi a brace of two-base blows. The Reds now are in sixth place, having won 16 games and lost as many.

In the only other National league game to be played yesterday, Brooklyn at Chicago and New York at St. Louis having been rained out, Pittsburgh Pirates moved a little nearer the first division by defeating the Phillies 3-1. Big Jim Weaver's slants were going right by the Philly batsmen all afternoon and he fanned seven and allowed but six hits.

In the American League, Detroit Tigers took an 8-3 decision from the Yankees by the expedient of knocking home runs. Bill Rogell and Hank Greenberg belted two round-trip blows each which accounted for all of the Tiger runs. They drove in four runs apiece.

Home runs also provided the margin of victory for the Athletics who defeated Chicago White Sox 6-5 at Philadelphia. Johnson chalked up his 11th homer and Pinky Higgins and Johnny Marcum also tagged the horsehide for round trips. Marcum, in his first appearance on the mound in two weeks, limited the Dykes boys to eight hits.

The last place St. Louis Browns took the rubber game of their series with the Red Sox, pounding the offerings of Lefty Grove and Wes Ferrell for 13 hits that totalled 25 bases. The once invincible Grove left the box in the eight inning after having allowed 11 hits. He went disconsolately to the showers after the Browns had scored three runs and pulled them into a 5-4 lead.

Cleveland got to the offerings of the loquacious Buck Newsom in the eighth inning to overcome an early Washington lead and shade them 5-4. The tribe put across three runs in this frame on a walk, two singles and a double.

Three thousand employes of rice dealers in all parts of Japan gathered recently in Tokyo to voice their protest against the Rice Control Bill, and when the police attempted to stop their appeal direct to Diet members a near riot occurred.

Yesterday's Stars

Alex Kamporis Reds.—Cracked out two doubles and a triple against Braves.

Julius Solters Browns — His ninth inning single drove in winning run in game with Red Sox. Also hit a double and another single.

Mel Harder Indians. — Held Senators in check, scattering their 12 hits.

Pinky Higgins, Athletics. — His homer drove in three runs and help beat White Sox.

Jim Weaver, Pirates. — Held Phillies to six hits and fanned seven.

BLANKET FIGHT FOR TOP PLACE IN MINOR BALL

Bears Advance Into Tie For Fourth Place With Montreal Royals.

ORIOLES STAY PUT.

(By The Associated Press)

The International League, famous for its closely-fought pennant races, already is entangled in another spirited battle with only two games separating the first five clubs.

The almost daily shift in the standings yesterday saw Newark Bears, meeting Baltimore in the only game played in the circuit advance into a tie for fourth place with Montreal Royals, while the Orioles just managed to cling to their runner-up position, 1½ games back of the pace-setting Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Orioles, dropping a 6-3 decision to the Bears, held half-game margin over Buffalo Bisons, who topped the Royals and Newark only because they have played less games. The standings to-day read: Toronto, 24-16—.600; Baltimore, 22-17—.564; Buffalo, 19-15—.559; Montreal, 21-17—.553; Newark, 21-17—.553.

Get Early Lead

The Bears got off to a three-run lead in the first inning of their game with the Orioles, when Dick Porter hit a homer with two mates on the sacks, and never were headed. Marvin Duke held the slugging Birds to seven hits, but after walking two and hitting a batter in the ninth he was replaced by Frank Makosky who forced Bill Sweet to ground out, thus ending the budding rally.

Although idle, the Royals strengthened their hurling staff by the addition of Walter Page Brown, whose sore arm forced him out of baseball two years ago. Brown won 19 and lost 12 with the Royals in 1931, and the following year won 12 while dropping 11. He then was sent to Boston Red Sox, with whom he developed the sore arm. He has been working out regularly the last few weeks and says he is ready for action.

Bailieboro Girls' Game Is Rained Out

The Ladies' Softball League opened on Monday but so far no games have been played as the second tilt on the program was rained out last night at Bailieboro, when the Keene lasses were forced under cover after one innings which was played in a downpour, that soon turned the clay surface of the diamond into a quagmire. Keene was leading 4 to 2.

The visitors had three new players on their line-up, Manley at short, Gall at third and Richardson in left. Irene Short who played first last year, did the receiving with her sister Isobel playing first. Helen Nelson has been shifted from short to second, and the two regulars from last year, Grace McCarthy and Roberta Gainor were in centre and right respectively. Marilyn McCarthy did the hurling.

Bailieboro looks like a heavy swatting crew and will without a doubt make a good showing on the season's play. They have a husky well-balanced team as well as a coach who knows his job. Their line-up is as follows:

R. Wood, ss; M. Wood, lb; A. Barnard, c; P. Carol, 2b; T. White, 3b; E. Breckenridge, p; B. Barnard, rf; H. Howson, cf; D. Dawson, lf.

This game will be played within two weeks according to the regulation regarding postponed games.

Hit By Johnson

Amazement followed Manager Walter Johnson's unconditional release of Glenn Myatt, Indians' catcher, and suspension of Willie Kamm, veteran third baseman, "for the good of the team." Johnson declared Myatt was not "100 per cent. for the club," though the team has won nine of the ten games caught by Myatt this year. The "Big Train" sent Kamm home from Philadelphia after telling him some of the younger players resented Kamm's suggestions and advice, because he was "cramping their style."

Winning Three Races at Lindsay Pleases Harness Men.

SWEEP MATINEE CARD

Horsemen resumed light workouts at the Exhibition Park this week, and those in charge of the trotters are highly satisfied with the three victories at Lindsay on the holiday when Peterborough entries swept the card. The workout men had the horses in good shape after a long Spring, and were ready for the question in the Lindsay Matinee Club program.

Dr. McIlroy's "Peter Bidwell" took the 2.30 class in three straight canters.

Senator Range, owned by Art Thompson, was extended to four heats in the 2.25 event. He won the first, but finished back of "Kate McLure" owned by H. Ingram of Lindsay, and "Josephine" the entry of James Little of Beaverton, in the second heat; then came back to take the next two.

In the 2.20 class two Peterborough horses finished first and second in the money. Jim Sutherland's "Todd Grattan" won in three straight; and Perce Dunsford's "Tillie the Great" marked up two seconds and a third. Art Johnston was represented in the 3.30 class by "Lady Dale" her best heat being the first when she was up for third place, but dropped back to fourth and sixth in the two other heats.

LINDSAY CLUB TAKES 9-4 VICTORY ON HOME GROUNDS

Homesters in Better Condition Finish Strong to Cop the Verdict.

SAND BOTHERS PLAYERS.

Lindsay Kiwanis opened the Tri-County Lacrosse League schedule in the Lindsay Arena last evening, with a 9-4 victory over Dinty's Inn of Peterborough. A small crowd was treated to a speedy, scrappy contest which saw the homesters in better condition and finishing stronger to copy the verdict. It was 1-0 the first quarter for Dinty's, 4-3 for Lindsay in the second, and 6-4 for Kiwanis going into the fourth.

A loose sand floor bothered both sides considerably and hampered running plays, but some nice passing was shown with accurate shooting at close range. Play roughened up at times to give the fans a thrill, 11 penalties being dished out, with the visitors drawing six. Bun Hatton had his right eye injured late in the third quarter when hit with a stick accidentally. He was forced out of the contest.

Both goalies made some smart save with Dundas having more to handle and looking good on a flock of them. Dinty's defence shaded the winners but offensively, Lindsay proved stronger the last two periods. Magee, Gardner, LeBarr, Loucks and Wakelin all shone for the victors with Olaveson, Jones and Staunt outstanding for the loser. The fans—kept down by the rain—enjoyed the melee throughout and made plenty of noise.

Scores First Goal

The game had no sooner started than Olaveson scored for the visitors on neat combination in close with Jones and Staunt. It was the only goal of the quarter, though Dinty's pressed hard and had an edge all through. Bowen was gated for slashing. Wakelin's snap shot almost from the face-off tied the count in the second. Olaveson was jugged for slashing and Staunt scored on Jones' pass. Bacon got it back on LeBarr's assist shortly, but Jones whistled an angle shot by Lefebvre on a nice effort. Gerow was chased for crowning a player and Nicholon took Ecobichon's pass to tally. Play was fast and even this frame. LeBarr counted near the close on a pass from Gardiner.

Loucks intercepted a pass and bulged the twine for Lindsay early in the third and Wakelin went off for chopping. He came back to counter on Loucks' assist, and then Vitarelli bounced one in at close range. Gardner and Vitarelli roughed it up and got the air, followed by Staunt for slashing.

Hatton was injured and left the game. Wakelin was penalised again for slashing, with Staunt joining the parade for boarding. The Kiwanis were strong in the fourth, and forced play. LeBarr took Magee's pass to tally first. Wakelin was rubbed out for tripping, followed shortly by Ringland for charging as play kept fast and a bit rough. Loucks grabbed a loose ball to get the eighth counter and with three minutes to go he scored the final one on Magee's neat pass.

The teams:

Dinty's Inn.—Goal, J. Dundas; defence, Gerow and Hope; centre, H. Jones; rover, Staunt; wings, Olaveson and Hatton; subs, Corbett, G. Creighton, Martineau, Vitarelli and Bowen.

Lindsay.—Goal, Lefebvre; defence, Ringland and McKee; centre, Nicholson; rover, Ecobichon; wings, Loucks and Wakelin; subs., Coates, Warren, Gardner, Magee, LeBarr and Bacon.

Referee, Harry Tudhope.

TURF STRIKE WILL PROCEED

Many Breeders Agree to Withhold Entries From Future Racing.

INTERESTS OF SPORT.

TORONTO, May 29.—With a large percentage of the breeders and horsemen agreeing to withhold entries for future racing, President George Hardy and his officers of the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association last night, after a meeting here, expressed the opinion that the "strike" to force racing associations to agree to the formation of a racing board was successful.

President Hardy stated that of the number with horses racing more than 60 per cent. had agreed not to race horses under present conditions. Those owners and breeders with entries for Wednesday include a number who are members of the association and were not aware that the "strike" had been called.

To Approach Government.

Satisfied they were within a short distance of their objective—the creation of a racing board containing equal representation of breeders and race-track owners—President Hardy and his associates considered the next step to be taken. This, it was understood, would be an immediate approach to the Provincial Government.

Breeders and horsemen attending last night's meeting reiterated their stand that they had no desire to interfere in the business affairs of racing associations and were interested entirely in racing as a sport.

In a statement issued following the meeting, directors of the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association said that they desired a chairman who had no interest in either race horses or the operation of a race-course. It was intimated they would agree to a member of the judiciary, and, should the Provincial Government make the appointment, they were willing to contribute to the honorarium that no burden might be placed on the taxpayers of the province.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

DAY BY DAY

(By C. J. P.)

Somehow we seem to be more or less at peace with the world the last few days. And that's too bad. Just when we're feeling like calling somebody names. And the reason for this may be traced to a recent paragraph by Walter Winchell, noted N'Yawk columnist, who says: "If I owned the newspaper I'd encourage enthusiasms in sports columnists, drama critics, book critics, etc., and give them permission to call their hecklers any names they liked right out in print. My firmest rule would be to take a reporter's word above a squawker because, right or wrong, your reporter is risking his job on every assignment he takes." So bring on your hecklers!

The intermediate Petes open their Lakeshore Baseball League home season here tomorrow (Thursday) eve at 5.30 against Cobourg in the Exhibition Grounds. After taking a walloping in Bowmanville last week, Doug Moore has shaken up his squad plenty and expects to start off with a win here. Probable lineup is listed elsewhere. Such classy players as Rollings, Brooks, Ibey, Mitchell, Gibson, Campbell, Utronki and Turpin are on the Cobourg roster, so it shapes up like a nifty struggle. Four local young fellows are backing the Petes this season and they're banking on the fans' support. The Lakeshore Loop is fast and some nifty struggles may be expected.

• • • • • • •

What will Fosters and C.G.E. do about intermediate ball this summer? That's the big question now. We have one team in the Lakeshore League, and Raybestos has entered the Trent Valley League—so perhaps the Foster and C.G.E. outfits would do well to apply at once for berths in the T.V.L. also. Looks like no East Peterborough League. Raybestos, Marmora, Coe Hill and possibly a Belleville team are expected to form the Trent Valley Loop when the schedule is drawn up June 3rd. Bo Hunt is managing the Brakeliners and should field a strong team. Hunt has had lots of experience playing and managing and we're certainly glad to see Raybestos back in the game after a five-year layoff.

Both Whatley and Murphy hope to get into today's senior game in Kingston, but it's doubtful if they will be used. Both bear the scars of recent injuries. Knotty Lee is having his worries these days over the Petes' infield and battery. Only his outfield is satisfactory so far. Spook Scriver is expected to hurl with Clancy his probable opponent. At that, Lefty Lepper might go better against the Ponies, whose real punch lies in their lefthand hitters. Compeau is expected back at short again for the Limestone crew and they'll be plenty tough when at full strength—especially at home. Any team that wins in Kingston deserves the victory. The Ponies will be here this Saturday while Belleville is in Oshawa.

There seems to be a lot of interest in the return of the pro ramblers to Peterborough next Tuesday. Nearly everyone we've been talking to lately seem as happy over the coming mat melee as if their chain-letter returns were coming in. It's quite a while since the maulers tossed each other out of the ring here and they always were popular. Something about the doggone dizzy sport that jerks the roars out of otherwise normal ladies and gents. And the Masked Marvel in the main bout should assure grapple bugs of a hearty-ho eve in the Armouries next week. Referee Jack Forbes is a three-star attraction in himself. Sounds like a good show.

A heavy rain, which washed up the proposed lacrosse parade in Lindsay last eve and cut down the crowd, failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the players and quite a tussle was run off in the Scugog Arena. Dinty's Inn opened the Tri-County League schedule against Lindsay Kiwanis and took a 9-4 licking. Better condition for Lindsay had a lot to do with the locals' loss, but you've got to give them credit for the way they are taking to the new game there. Several homebrew players, like Wakelin, Loucks, and Ringland, have learned fast under the tutoring of Magee, LeBarr, Gardner, Weir, and Lefebvre—local players with Lindsay this year—and this crew should make quite a splash in the Tri-County Loop puddle this season.

• • • • • • •

The sand floor on the arena last eve was looser than the Petes' infield Saturday and when action warmed up with the boys all digging for the ball on the run, the place looked like one of those western sand storms. They laid on the gad with rare good will, and the couple of hundred fans present got a large kick out of the whole thing—judging from the yells, cheers and laughs. They'll go for lacrosse in Lindsay. Dinty's Inn will be better with more practice. Some of 'em looked good last night, but the team as a whole faded before the final quarter. Bun Hatton had his right eye injured in the third and was forced out of the contest.

Peterborough's intermediate lacrossers play an exhibition game Thursday night at 8.30 in Lindsay with the Rama Indians—up near Orillia. The locals playing are: LeBarr, Miller, Lefebvre, R. Creighton, E. Creighton, H. Jones, King, Dundas, Magee, Gardner, Ell's, and Olaveson. This should be a smart tilt. There's a game here Friday in the Auburn field—near the Auburn Mill—with Norwood playing Auburns a return Tri-County League game. It's at 6.30 Friday e'en and ought to be a lulu. These teams played in Norwood last night with the game called with three minutes to go because of rain. Auburns were ahead 3-1, and claim the victory, though we hear Norwood will not allow it. Such a game for arguments, tch, tch!

AUBURNS GAIN 3-1 VICTORY

Open Tri-county Lacrosse Season With Win on Norwood Grounds.

DECISION PROTESTED.

Auburns opened their Tri-County Lacrosse League schedule in Norwood last night with a 3-1 verdict over the homesters. A heavy downpour caused the game to be called with three minutes of play left with an argument resulting. Auburns claiming the victory and Norwood objecting as the game was unfinished. The matter may be left to the league executive to decide. It was a fast, clean and even fixture.

Both sides turned it on hot most of the way and kept the goalies jumping. Both net-minders starred and had some good defence work in front of them. There was little to choose between the rival forwards, everyone playing hard and effectively. The Auburn newcomers looked promising. No outstanding stars marked the game. C. Puffer tallied the lone Norwood goal, while Dallin, Heard and Miller scored for the Woollens. Heard and G. Rathwell drew the only penalties. The teams:

Auburns: Goal, Meyette; defence, Miller and Reynolds; centre, Dallin; rover, Dundas; wings, Heard and Jackson; subs., Ellis, Hunt, Munden, King and Dinesen.

Norwood: Goal, W. Rogers; defence, G. Rathwell and J. Rathwell; centre, E. Godin; rover, H. Baker; wings, G. Puffer and K Puffer; subs., G. Baker, McConnell, H. Godin and C. Puffer.

Referee, Ray Ennis.

PLAY LAWN BOWLING, THE GAME
HEBB. MARTIN

Well, Up to the Present Time the annual President-Vice President competition remains at a draw. Anyway, under the circumstances, we think the rain will do more good. No doubt the Games Committee will order these games played later on in the season.

To-night, the Schedule games commence. The draw for Wednesday and Thursday appeared in last night's Examiner.

The Ladies' Section starts the season's play on Thursday and below is the draw:

Miss Allen	Mrs. Zeihr
Mrs. Arnold	Mrs. Martin
Mrs. Greenslade	Mrs. Crichton
Mrs. Hope	Mrs. Borland
Miss Sedgewick	Mrs. Campbell

FIVE CHAMPIONS FALL BY WAYSIDE

NEWCASTLE, County Down, May 29. (C.P.).—Five champions, including the last of the invaders, met defeat as the British women's golf championship progressed to the quarter-final yesterday. Previously Miss Ada MacKenzie, four-time Canadian champion, and Miss Diana Fishwick were eliminated.

The last overseas challenger, Mlle. Tollon, French champion, went out in the third round, beaten 4 to 2 by youthful Pamela Barton, runner-up a year ago.

Previously the defending titleholder, Mrs. Helen Holm of Troon, was eliminated by Miss Park of Gullane 3 and 1. Miss Wade of Parkstone, the English native champion, lost to Miss Ferguson of Royal County Down 2 up. Pam Barton knocked out Miss Sherlock, Irish champion, in a second-round match by 3 and 2 and in the same round Wanda Morgan defeated Miss Mary Brown, Argentine champion, 2 and 1.

Eighteen-year-old Clarry Tiernan, Irish girl, who eliminated Miss Fishwick, beat Mrs. McCulloch, former Scottish champion, 7 and 5 in the morning, but lost to Miss Mervyn Barton in the third round, 1 up.

The quarter-finalists are, in order of the draw, Miss Johnson of Hornsea and Miss Wanda Morgan of Rochester, former English champion; Miss Anderson of Craigie Hill, and Miss Newell, 23-year-old Derbyshire Magistrate Miss R. S. Morgan of Bournemouth and Miss Mervyn Barton of Mid-Surrey, and Miss Park of Gullane and Miss Pam Barton of the Royal Mid Surrey.

CHANGE COLOR OF STAMPS

OTTAWA.—Changes in the color of a new series of postage stamps being issued June 1 by the Post Office Department, was announced to-day. The 10 cent stamp on which will be the picture of a Royal Canadian Mounted Police constable on horseback, will be rose, not red as previously announced.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES!

By ALEX J. MORRISON

Number 618

Heavy clubs have come to establish many mistaken ideas. The most common of these is that the heavy clubhead helps to bring about better wrist action in the swing.

The wrists should bend most at the end of the backswing. At this stage of the swing most players are worrying about hitting the ball cleanly. They don't want to top it or cut across it to cause either a hook or a slice. In other words, this point in their swings find them most apprehensive of what will happen in the downswing.

The result is that they avoid any action that might put them off. The extra weight in the club increases this fear many times with the result that wrist action is omitted entirely. The wrists will function properly only when a light or medium weight club is being swung.

Number 620

A pupil of mine, M. C. Meigs, has a habit that is common to most players. He wiggles his fingers on the club while addressing the ball. He calls it "milking the club."

It spoils his hold on the club and causes his hands to change their position during the swing. It becomes impossible for him to bring the clubface down to the ball at the proper angle.

Such players always wonder why they have little or no control over the hitting angle of the club. This wiggling of the fingers may be just a nervous habit. In most cases it is an attempt to avoid gripping the club too tightly.

Once the hands have been placed on the club their position should not be changed by so much as a tremor in any of the fingers. The hands should become locked to the club to the point of being a part of the club. Then the club is not likely to get out of control during the swing.

American Sports Writers Divided Over McLarnin-Ross Fight Decision

NEW YORK, May 29 (C.P.).—Though Referee Jack Dempsey and the two judges officiating at last night's world's welterweight championship tussle here between Jimmy McLarnin of Vancouver and Barney Ross of Chicago were unanimous in their verdict favoring the Chicago Jew there was great disparity among the sports writers covering the joust.

A hurried poll at the ringside gathered 21 opinions from the 30-odd newsmen. The vote: Ross 12, McLarnin 9.

The majority voting Ross had won gave him either eight or seven rounds and McLarnin four or five. The McLarnin selectors were generally more liberal, and while crediting the Vancouver belter with eight or seven rounds gave Ross six or seven.

Damon Runyon, New York American, James Dawson, New York Times, Dan Parker, Daily Mirror, Paul Gallico, Daily News and Joe Williams, World-Telegram were among those who favored the decision. The entire staff of the New York Evening Sun, including Wilbur Wood and Frank Graham voted McLarnin had won a clean-cut decision, as did Bill Corum and Hype Igoe, Evening Journal, Jimmy Powers, Daily News, and Willard Mullin, World-Telegram.

CHURCH SOFTBALL GAMES RAINED OUT

League Behind Seven Games in Last Half of the Schedule.

All four of last night's Church Softball League games were rained out, all in the first innings. This puts the league behind seven games in the second half. The only game played has been protested by Trinity Seniors on the grounds that they were forced to take the diamond against their will during a heavy shower that evening.

Games to-night: Trinity Seniors vs. St. Paul's at King Edward Park. Trinity Juveniles vs. Knox at Queen Mary. St. Paul's Juveniles vs. Mark Street at the Oval. Park Street vs. St. James Bantams at King Edward.

The senior game Friday has been moved forward to Thursday so as not to conflict with Murray Street team's class banquet. Knox Seniors please note. This game will be played on the Southen League diamond if possible.

England claims to be setting the rest of the world a pace this year in the installation of telephones.

Cobourg Will Open Intermediate Year

First game of the Lakeshore Baseball League this year in Peterborough will be held tomorrow (Thursday) evening at 5.30 o'clock with Cobourg Ponies meeting the Intermediate Petes in the Exhibition Grounds. A good crowd of ball fans is expected for this fixture as the Cobourg team is generally considered the one to beat in this loop. They have added Utronki, last year with Belleville Nationals to their line-up, and have such former C.O.B.I. players as Ted Rollings and Hoot Gibson, the latter likely to do the pitching tomorrow.

Casey Masterson is expected to twirl for Doug Moore's crew, with Fetter catching. Corbett will be on first base; Hillier on second; Padgett at short, and Mein on third. The outfield will be selected from Len Hollingsworth, Mowry, Joe Bailey, Pryde and Dallin. This is Intermediate "A" ball, next thing to Senior, and it is sure to be a keen, exciting game, rating a good crowd for the opener. The Petes dropped their first game away to Bowmanville, but hope to start off at home with a win Thursday.

Walter Page Brown Secured By Royals

MONTREAL, May 29 (C.P.). — Walter Page Brown, whose sore arm put him out of baseball two years ago, has been signed on by the Montreal Royals, President H. H. Racine announced last night. At the same time, the Royals sent Clair Forster, young Ottawa right-hander, to the Hazelton club of the New York-Pennsylvania League, subject to 24 hours' recall.

The first night game at the Royals' Stadium will be played next Tuesday against the Buffalo Bisons, Racine also announced. The acquisition of Brown follows treatment of the player's arm at Hot Springs, Arkansas, this spring, where the thermal baths were said to have effected a cure.

GYPSY GIRL

THE STORY OF AN IMPASSIONED ROMANCE

CHAPTER 37

Yes, Stewart was in a mess. Consuelo and Louise had "gotten together" last night and had "found out" of his attentiveness to both.

"So that was it!" chimed Doug. "Right on the chin! Well, my boy, your sins will out. Lordie, I'm glad I'm not in your shoes! Louise and Consuelo—" He started to laugh.

"There's nothing funny about this!" Stewart broke in. "Louise was hysterical last night. She informed me that it was either she or the gypsy—"

"Well, that's not a hard choice."

"Can't you ever be serious?"

"What do you want me to do, cry? You didn't expect you could go on indefinitely with the two of them, did you, my Don Juan?"

"Cut it out! You know as well as I do that I refused to bring the gypsy to New York and you also know, if you have any brains at all, that Louise can't be gotten rid of without a fight."

"Do you want to get rid of her?" Blackmire munched a bite of toast before he answered.

"I'm not sure."

"Bluebeard! It must be grand to have the women so crazy about you that you can't pry 'em loose." It was not sarcasm.

The other paid little attention to him.

"I want to find out where I stand with Consuelo."

"Afraid of her?"

You haven't heard her talk as I have about what she'd do if she caught 'her man' with another woman. I hate fights and tantrums. The hysteria from Louise last night is all that I can bear for a while. And gypsies are dynamite!"

"You ought to know. But all fooling aside, Consuelo hated Lou from the first moment she laid eyes on her and the two of them are never going to get along together in the same show. Louise is a flop compared to the gypsy. Why don't you give Lou a tidy little sum, use your own judgment there or ask my advice—and suggest that she go abroad—" He felt like saying, "and you go with her," but did not—"and put Consuelo on as star of the show. That's what she wants."

"You don't ask much, do you? That's what every woman wants of me. She's just the same.

"Oh, nuts to you! You profess to be crazy about the kid and you don't do one thing for her. She isn't like the rest, not by a long shot. Good Lord, if I was in your position her name would be out front in electric lights tonight and Lou's would be in—"

Stewart lighted a cigaret, dragged several puffs and knocked the ashes against the coffee cup.

"Well, I might have known you'd lose your head about her. Am I able to trust you or shall I take you off the job?"

"You wouldn't be able to trust me one minute if she'd have me. Women have the dogsonest taste when they pick on your ugly mug. You're the closes resemblance to an ice box I ever saw and about the same temperature. Here you've go two of the beautifulest dames in New York fighting tooth and nail over you. Did it ever occur to you, my dear Don Juan, what a devil you are with women?"

"And did it ever occur to you, my dear Douglas, that sometimes I wonder if they are crazy about me or my bank roll or just plain crasy. Being lousy with gold, as you say, has its disadvantages, but what I say is, that you can't trust a woman as far as you can see her. There isn't a chorus girl in New York that wouldn't jump at the chance to let me make love to her, and I'm not boasting either, but holding the position I do in the theatrical world is like honey to a bee. Do you think the gypsy girl would have gotten on that train if she hadn't known who I was—thanks to you and Bill for telling her. Do you think down in Atlanta that time Loise would have sprained her ankle when you and I were the only men for miles about? Do you think that Dora would have gotten in the wrong drawing-room unless—or Marie—oh, bosh. Damn the women, they're all alike! Louise in tantrums last night and undoubtedly Consuelo in a white rage. I'm sick of it, blame sick of it! My money gets me into enough trouble, but it's little help getting me out of it!" He jammed the cigaret stub into the coffee dregs and got up.

"Run along, Doug, and see if the gypsy's in good humor. On yor way buy her some little thing, a wrist watch or something, and if you can get her in a smiling mood give me a ring and I'll come over. If she's full of growls and wild gypsy epithets, tell her to go to hell for me—politely, of course.

"Now that the three-hour lecture on money and women, the two combustibles when mixed, is over, Professor Blackmire, I'll hie me out and buy the lovely black-haired damsel a wrist watch set in diamonds and inscribed with your love—blah! I don't think you're capable of love, but it's all right with me, maybe I'll stand a chance with the gypsy girl—fat chance! See you in church, old bean, and don't hold your breath till I telephone." He retreated.

He stopped at Tiffany's and selected a tiny Swiss watch. On the back he had inscribed: "I love you. S.B." and he made a face at the inscription before he closed the box.

Forty minutes later he called Stewart from the hotel lobby.

"Okay, Don Juan, get on your trusty steed and spring over here quickly before I go upstairs and change her mind."

Backstage Consuelo began her fight and asked the aid of no one—as yet. Above all else the fact stood paramount that the night L'Ville did not come to the theatre the Gypsy Consuelo would go on in her place. Beyond that she did not plan, except she knew that once she had attained that goal the rest would be easy.

She began a series of petty annoyances against L'Ville. Little things they were, that would have made L'Ville foolish to complain of them. How could she say that the gypsy stood in her way every time she turned around. Purely accidental. Both in the same show. Close quarters backstage. Who could be blamed when the peacocks in the second number got sick and one fell in the fountain to the high amusement of the audience and the breaking up of Louise? You couldn't very well blame the gypsy for that, nor the misplacing of the costumes. What did it matter if her dancing partners were infatuated with the gypsy—all the men backstage were for that matter. It would be foolish to go around saying that the gypsy's eyes were "positively hypnotic" and gave one the "creeps" just to have them staring at you all the time. When Goldberg warned her that she was drinking too much during show time she couldn't tell him it was because she was afraid of the gypsy and only took a tiny weeny little shot to get herself together for the numbers.

In fact, there was no opening for her to report the gypsy, and backstage thought that a white flag of truce had been flung between them. They did not know that it was tinged with red and at any moment apt to change its color permanently. For how can a flag of truce be secure when a gypsy girl is ambitious and filled with bitter hatred, or when a a star is jealous and afraid of a one-act specialty dancer?

No one suspected how deeply the hatred was between them except perhaps Doug. Even Stewart was blind, for never in look or tone had Consuelo chided him about his double relationship, nor had she spoken about Louise, and Louise, after her first hysterical outbreak, was silent. If she had only been surer of herself she might have gotten the upper hand with him, but she was afraid.

The gypsy knew she could not make Stewart jealous with Doug, so now she began to accept invitations for after the show, and she had her choice of many. This gay new life she entered was intoxicating. Her lips became redder than they had been before, her eyes sparkled more brightly, her body was more alluring when she walked and her laugh was more throaty and infectious. She had turned into a dancing flame and the moths were coming.

When Stewart voiced objections to her parties after the show she would laugh at him and kiss his lips and say: "You have a date, you said, my darling. Now surely you can't expect me to sit and wait for you. This Mr. Sandy is giving a big dinner party and I am the guest of honor, and besides, Mr. Sandy owns 30 banks and most of that which you call Wall Street—" and she would go laughing.

Stewart shrugged his shoulders and spent the evenings with Louise or at his club, and tried to tell himself that the gypsy was not worth bothering over. But nevertheless, he was annoyed that she did not cater to his wishes and he was more annoyed that the names who entertained the gypsy were the best known in town. If she was going out to cheap parties with unknown persons, his vanity might have been saved. No other girl for whom he had done a great deal and upon whom he had lavished expensive gifts and carelessly snapped her fingers at him.

Hepburn Is Still Looking for Girl

TORONTO, May 22. (C.P.)—Welfare Department officials are still combing the children's shelters of Ontario for a suitable sister for Peter Hepburn, recently adopted foster son of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, it was learned to-day.

The task of officials is difficult as the demand for girls is much greater than that for boys.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, May 30

A very interesting and auspicious state of affairs is read from this day's planetary influences. Much success in connection with those in places of influence and authority, especially those concerned with combines, secret bodies or diplomatic circles, is indicated.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a successful and progressive year, with many interesting angles, particularly in connection with the co-operation of influential friends, corporations or secret societies. It is a time for approaching these with tact and diplomacy rather than by "direct action."

A child born on this day may be talented, versatile, ambitious and attain its advancement by the recognition of important persons.

In his will, just filed, Lord Swansea, of Swansea, Wales, left new drums to the 6th Glamorgan Battalion of the Welsh Regiment.

3 CONFERENCES ARE IN SESSION

Tenth Anniversary of Church Union Commemorated by Conferences.

WIDER UNION OF CHURCHES

(By the Canadian Press).

"We must bring to men—more emphatically because of modern enlightenment—that there is pardon for all." This was the message left to-day with members of the United Church of Canada by Rev. Dr. George C. Pidgeon, the Church's first Moderator, on the occasion of the 10th anniversary of Church Union.

Dr. Pidgeon spoke last night to nearly 600 delegates to the Hamilton Conference, assembled at Guelph. At Stratford, the London Conference met and the Bay of Quinte Conference opened in Peterborough.

Elected Moderator.

Rev. W. A. Walden, Empress Avenue United Church of London, was elected to succeed Rev. John M. Haith, Norwich, as president of the London Conference. Mr. Haith, in his presidential address, advocated pooling of clergy salaries to assure reasonable stipends to qualified ministers.

Also he favored a wider union of churches and a return to the old system of limiting the stay of ministers in each charge to a definite period.

Rev. Harry Pawson, of Napanee, warned the Quinte Conference the United Church must emphasize evangelism if it is to combat a steady loss of members to other newer Christian sects which have sprung up recently.

He urged ministers to concentrate on bringing their congregations into the fold of the Church rather than legislate on their habits in regard to tobacco, dancing and other amusements.

COMMUNITY HEALTH

A column Conducted by the Department of Public Health, Peterborough, in the interests of Peterborough citizens.

THE WELL BABIES CLINIC.

Perhaps no group in the community demands and gets more attention than the babies. Their very helplessness makes everyone want to do something for them. What should be more natural and appropriate than the wish to see every baby have an even chance to grow into healthy childhood and adult life? Yet many babies, due to economic distress or ignorance on the part of their parents, develop diseases and bad habits which are mostly preventable. The baby of poor parents has as much right to health as that of wealthy parents. That all babies have an even chance of health by a regular physical examination and correction of defects is the essence of preventative medicine. Public Health authorities working with certain public-spirited citizens have made it possible to provide this supervision and help for the mothers and babies of Peterborough.

Dr. Jessie Birnie organized the Well Babies' Clinic in 1919 and it has continued to function without intermission since then. A small group of women carry on this splendid work by raising the necessary funds to provide the services of a nurse and supply babies with cod liver oil and other necessities. Our local doctors co-operate with the Clinic by giving their time to examine babies, and give advice as to diet and general care.

The Clinic now meets in the rooms of the Department of Health in the City Buildings every Friday afternoon at 3.00 o'clock. The babies are weighed and examined and advice given regarding diet, rest, clothing, etc.; in fact anything that has to do with the physical and mental health of the growing child is discussed with the parents. Sick babies are referred to their own family doctor as the Clinic is for the supervision of well babies only, and not for the treatment of illness. Opportunity will be provided in the near future for parents to have their children protected against diphtheria, scarlet fever and smallpox. While the services of the Clinic are open to everyone, it is expected that those who can provide for regular supervision of their children by the family doctor will do so.

Miss M. Foote, the Clinic nurse, is assisted by volunteer workers. She attends each Clinic and in addition, visits the homes to see that the orders given by the Clinic doctor are properly carried out and to advise the mothers in child hygiene.

Any mother wishing to avail herself of this service may do so by attending the Clinic on Friday afternoon or by asking her family doctor to refer her baby to the Clinic.

Plane And Autogiro Here Over Week-End

Air-minded folk of Peterborough and district are to be afforded an annual opportunity of satisfying their ambition to fly, with the visit here over the week-end of Leaven's Brothers Air Services Limited of Belleville.

Leaven's Brothers, who have been in the city before, are coming here on Saturday with an airplane and an auto-giro in which they are offering passenger flights at new low fares, which they claim are the lowest in their experience of the business.

The planes are to be at Milburn's flying field on the Chemong Road.

Haliburton Fire Loss Is Set At $150,000

HALIBURTON, May 29 (C.P.). — Blackened timberland steamed in a downpour of rain yesterday as the fire threat in the Haliburton district receded after causing damage estimated at approximately $150,000.

Heavy rainfall which continued through the night brought relief to hundreds of tired firefighters who had battled the ever-spreading flames since Saturday.

Fire which Monday threatened the village of West Guilford was quenched by the rain, and to-day no further immediate danger was anticipated.

Miles of private timberland were destroyed by the flames of the last three days. W. R. Curry and Son and Clayton Hodgson, Haliburton lumber dealers, lost more than 4,000 cords of wood in the fire. Two houses at Eagle Lake were burned to the ground by the flames which jumped across the new Eagle Lake Highway.

Buffalo Will Have Amateur Hockey Club

FORT ERIE, Ont., May 29. (CP) With the eventual idea of moving hockey from the Peace Bridge arena to Buffalo by educating Bison city citizens in the type of amateur games found so popular in other cities, a committee, headed by Mickey Roach, coach of last year's Buffalo Bisons of the International League, and President Harry Taber of New York-Ontario amateur loop, announced to-day it had received a franchise for Buffalo in the National Amateur Hockey Association. The Buffalo entry will be grouped in a central section expected to definitely include Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Toronto with prospects Cleveland, Rochester and Hamilton will complete the balance of grouping.

Dominion's Motor Industry Not Confined to Assembly Plants.

400 SUPPLIERS

TORONTO, May 23.—Reason for the wide interest in the Tariff Commission's scheduled enquiry into details of motor car manufacture is not difficult to explain, according to H. J. Aughe, president of the Canadian Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

The fact of the matter is that instead of being confined to a few large plants at Oshawa and the Border Cities, the Canadian car-building industry is really a widespread affair reaching into every province in the Dominion. As one official phrased it, in order to witness all the manufacturing operations that enter into the production of a Canadian automobile, it would be necessary to visit literally hundreds of plants in scores of Canadian centres.

It is understood that on a list recently compiled by the Canadian Automobile Chamber of Commerce there are about 400 names of suppliers, who may be classed as part of the automobile industry in a contributing sense. These smaller factories make steel, upholstery, lumber, paint, rubber, glass and other commodities which go to make up the Canadian car. The picture of the Canadian motor industry, therefore, as a centralized factory scene, shipping thousands of finished cars to the domestic and the export market, is only a partial one; to be complete it must also include the tributary streams which bring parts and materials from forest, field and mine, and from the relatively small industrial centres scattered from coast to coast.

Since automobiles are being made in the Dominion with higher and higher Canadian content, the economic geography of the industry has altered substantially. This can be appreciated more readily by a glance at the following list, which contribute source material or parts to the Dominion's automotive production total:

LOCAL ASSOCIATION OF BAPTIST CHURCHES HOLDS 133RD ANNUAL MEETING AT PARK STREET CHURCH

Inspiring Address by Rev. George E. Downing of Norwood as Moderator.

60 DELEGATES PRESENT.

Rev. R. D. Wright, Clerk of Association, Presents Encouraging Financial Report.

"The Lowest Realm of Prayer" was the subject of a very inspirational address delivered last evening at Park Street Baptist Church by the Rev. George E. Downing, of Norwood, moderator of the Peterborough Association of Baptist Churches, which is holding its 133rd annual meeting at the Park Street Church on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

Between fifty and sixty delegates from the district were present at the sessions yesterday, with over two hundred people assembled for the meeting last night. A feature of the sessions of the opening day was the presence of the Rev. A. J. Vining, D.D., of Toronto, president of the Baptist convention of Ontario and Quebec.

Appointment of committees took place yesterday morning, as follows:

Arrangements — The Rev. G. K. Tyler, of Park Street Baptist Church; the Rev. R. D. Wright, M.A., of Gilmour Memorial Church, clerk of the Peterborough association, and the Rev. L. M. Smith, of Campbellford.

Nominating committee—The Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, of Murray Street Baptist Church; the Rev. E. K. Smith, of Port Hope, and the Rev. Mr. Wright.

Resolution committee—The Rev. A. G. Sinclair, of Belleville; the Rev. W. B. Walker, of Lakefield, and the Rev. H. Morphy, of Cobourg.

Auditors—The Rev. H. E. Morphy, of Cobourg, and Mr. F. H. Benedict, of Cobourg.

The opening devotional period was taken by the Rev. Mr. Morphy, with words of welcome voiced by the Rev. G. K. Tyler and reply by the moderator, the Rev. G. E. Downing, of Norwood.

A memorial service, conducted by the Rev. L. M. Smith, of Campbellford, alluded with especial regret to the passing of Mrs. W. D. Scott, of Peterborough, who was for twenty-five years president of the Women's Mission Circles of the association, also the death of the Rev. J. B. McCormack, of Picton.

Healthy Conditions.

The financial statement presented by the clerk of the association, the Rev. R. D. Wright, M.A., pastor of Gilmour Memorial Church, showed receipts of $109.65 and a balance of about $15 on hand after payment of all expenditure.

The Digest of Church Letters demonstrated fairly healthy spiritual condition, with many making advances in such membership and in physical property improvement.

The Rev. Dr. Vining, speaking on Canadian missions, stressed the fact that missions are related to the great commission announced by the Lord and often wrongly interpreted by human beings as applying specifically to foreign missions instead of also to the man next door.

Rev. Dr. Vining asked, "What do people who don't go to church think of us who do go?" Often we, who are apparently followers of Christ, don't show the concern over non-Christians which was manifested by the early disciples.

The speaker pointed out the necessity of church members getting genuinely convinced of the need for increased activity for God and the especial need in Canada for more work along this line. He expressed his own conviction that there was a great field for endeavor in the Canadian West, where opportunities are increasing daily and will continue to increase as the natural products of British Columbia and Alberta and other western provinces tend to leave the rest of the Dominion far behind.

The opening of the evening session was marked by a song service and devotions, led by the Rev. A. G. Sinclair, of Belleville, and followed by the introduction of new pastors, in which the Rev. H. Morphy, of Cobourg, was introduced by the Rev. E. K. Smith, of Port Hope.

An interesting feature of the evening session was the report of association circles and bands, presented by the directress, Mrs. R. C. Weston, of Campbellford, and showing a slight advance over the previous year in missionary givings.

Mrs. Weston reported a total of givings to home mission work of $812.29; to foreign missions, $1,007.74 to the Indian fund (to Indians living on reserves in Canada), $30.45, and to other objects, $45.06.

As next year is the jubilee year of the Women's Mission Circles of the Peterborough association, the directress asked for an advance of $300 in givings over the year's total.

Evening Addresses.

Two addresses featured the evening session. The Rev. A. Haddow, of Toronto, missionary home on furlough from Oruro, Bolivia, where he is principal of the Reekie Baptist College, took as his theme an answer to the query often raised among Baptist people as to why the church should engage in the South American mission work. The Rev. Mr. Haddow's address was along the lines of his former public utterances in this city, in which he alludes to the state of ignorance and superstition in which the natives of South America exist and the need for the Baptist Church to reveal the true light of Christianity.

The speaker also referred to the death of a native pastor, Mr. Daniel Ruiz, who, during his last hours, expressed his thanks for the opportunity afforded him of working for Christ.

The moderator of the association, the Rev. G. Downing, of Norwood, delivered a very thoughtful and spiritual address on prayer, under the title, "The Lowest Realm of Prayer."

Declaring that petition to God is considered by many as the lowest form of prayer, the reverend speaker pointed out that Jesus always emphasized the need of petition, "Ask and ye shall receive," and that on practically every occasion, when the disciples addressed him, "Lord, teach us to pray." He indicated the necessity of petitioning God for our needs in life.

"But all prayer must have a purpose." The centre of the prayer of Christ was, "Thy kingdom come." And because they put the kingdom of God in the first place, great blessing came of old to leaders, such as John Knox.

"Prayer must have a plan." David's prayer, in the 51st Psalm, consisted of confession and a plea for restoration. Thus the plan was that sinners be converted. The prayer of Christ in the 17th chapter of John reviewed the plan of prayer in three ways: His relation to God, His relation to His disciples, and His relation to all the other souls that should be brought into the kingdom.

"Do we, as individuals or as a denomination, pray with a plan in our praying? Do we really receive the Holy Spirit's leadership in thinking out the needs of evangelism and missionary enterprise and education in our work? King Hezekiah had a purpose and a plan, but he also taught us one thing more: to place them before God and, persistently and expectantly, pray that the purpose and the plan be fulfilled."

The speaker urged his hearers to so ask that, believing, they might receive.

The benediction last evening was pronounced by the Rev. W. B. Walker, of Lakefield.

Pastors and Laymen.

A conference of pastors and laymen featured the afternoon session, with the conference president, the Rev. G. K. Tyler, presiding, and W. P. Tickell, of Port Hope, as secretary-treasurer.

The devotional period was led by the Rev. Mr. Tyler, and the Rev. Dr. Vining led a very helpful conference on denominational problems confronting the association members as churches. Problems were outlined, such as individual responsibility; getting church members to attend church; getting the Sunday school teachers to consider their great opportunities and responsibilities; helping people to a more intensive Bible study, and to a real consciousness of the missionary and educational objectives of the church.

The election of officers for the pastors' and laymen's conference of the Peterborough association resulted in the appointment of the Rev. A. G. Sinclair, of Belleville, as president, and the re-appointment of W. P. Tickell, of Port Hope, as secretary-treasurer.

Trent River

The ideal holiday weather brought a colony of cottagers and tourists for the pickerel fishing, which proved successful to many. In the evening Whitehall Gardens Pavilion attracted a large crowd.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Fairbrother and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Dyer and family arrived from Toronto over the week-end and expect to remain for the season at the Fairbrother summer home.

Messrs. George Van Volkenburg, county president of the Cheese Patrons Association and Harold B. Wood, president of Trent Bridge Cheese Co. addressed a meeting of the patrons of Morganston cheese factory Tuesday evening last. The plan of the Cheese Patrons Association was unanimously endorsed.

Mrs. J. Mitchell and granddaughter Miss Marion Williamson of Toronto spent over the holiday and week-end at "Raeden."

Vernon Aulthouse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Aulthouse is making a good recovery from his recent illness.

Mrs. S. Luck, Mr. and Mrs. Campion and children of Toronto holidayed at "Luck's Haven."

The Misses Laura and Agnes Wight, Miss Margaret Wilson and Mr. Jack Kearsey of Toronto holidayed at the former's parental home at "Cedar Isle."

Mr. and Mrs. S. Cross of Toronto holidayed at "Cedar Nook."

Mrs. J. Knox and son Carl of Toronto are at "Bon Alexander."

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Drinkle of Oshawa were holiday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. John Garneau.

Mr. and Mrs. Claud Goodman of Toronto spent over the holiday and week-end at "Riverview."

Dead Of Three Wars Saluted By Veterans

NEW YORK.—The United States saluted its war dead to-day. Crippled veterans and carefree children took part in a pageant which spread from coast to coast. The men in blue had the seats of honor as they have had since Memorial Day was inaugurated in honor of their fallen Civil War comrades but the seats were few in number. Their places in parades, too, were given over almost entirely to veterans of the Spanish-American and Great Wars, the troops of to-day and patriotic organizations.

Condition Improving Highway Crash Victims

LONDON, Ont.—A favorable bulletin was issued at Victoria Hospital to-day on the condition of Rev. Dr. R. V. Bingham and Mrs. Bingham of Toronto, injured in a highway accident near Crumlin late yesterday. "Condition improving and both patients resting comfortably to-day," it read. Dr. and Mrs. Bingham were injured in a crash with a car driven by Wilbert J. Jyatt of this city.

Jealousy Of Brother Is Blamed For Boy's Death

NEW YORK. — Jealousy of an overgrown 16-year-old boy for his three-year-old brother was blamed by detectives to-day for the killing of little John Lancaric. They said the "big brother," Sylvester, who had assumed control of a poverty-ridden family of widowed mother and seven children, confessed he had kicked the little boy to death. Sylvester blurted out the confession and details of other mistreatment—investigators said, after a sister, Josephine, 12, broke down yesterday and disclosed it was his 'punishment'—not an accident of play—that caused death.

TWO ARMED MEN IN BLUE SEDAN SECURE $2,000

Employes Herded Into Corner and Two Customers Told to Keep Quiet.

LICENSE FAKED.

Only Witness to Escape Was a Four Year Old Boy.

TORONTO, May 30 (C.P.-.—Two armed men to-day held up the Bank of Commerce branch at Lansdowne and Wallace Avenues, in the West-end of the city, and escaped with approximately $2,000.

The men escaped in a blue sedan. They were described as six feet tall, fair complexion, and wearing blue suits, and grey hats.

Two women customers were in the bank when the bandits rushed in. The women and bank employees were ordered to hold up their hands.

One of the men jumped over the counter and grabbed up all cash in sight. His companion told the women to keep quiet and they would not be harmed. The employees were herded into a corner. .., ...

After grabbing the money the robbers dashed out the door and jumped into their waiting car.

The bandits drove up and parked in front of the bank, leaving the engine of their car running.

License numbers used on the getaway car were faked, police stated, as a check-up showed the numbers given officials tallied with the car of a Toronto resident at home in the East-end.

Only witness to the escape was a four-year-old boy who told police he saw two men "run out of the bank and jump into a car." One carried a bag, the child added.

ITALY CALLS UP HER 1912 CLASS

New Class Called to Colors Will Replace Units Sent to Africa.

KEEP UP HOME ARMY.

ROME, May 30 (C.P.-Havas). — Italy is calling another military class to the colors with further units of the black-shirted Fascist troops, it was learned authoritatively to-day in what is regarded as an effort to show an apprehensive Britain and an equally perturbed France the Italian government is ready to do its duty as a European Power, even if it is obliged to send many of its troops to Africa.

The class of 1912 is expected to be mobilized and when it is, Premier Benito Mussolini will have 900,000 men under arms.

It is apparent the fears expressed by "certain friendly nations" that Italy has been wakened at a time of "serious uncertainty" in Europe by its operations in East Africa have played their part in the new mobilization. Premier Mussolini last Saturday told the Chamber of Deputies: "We shall not let ourselves be

GUTHRIE DOUBTS REFORM BILLS' LEGAL STATUS

Liberals Attack Government For Sponsoring "Doubtful Legislation.

STORM IN HOUSE.

Spirited Plea is Made By Kennedy For Recognition of Spirit of Bill.

OTTAWA, May 30 (C.P.). — Issue will be joined in Parliament to-day on measures arising out of the price spreads report for the first time. The issue arose last night, but will not be settled until next week.

Hon. H. Guthrie

As in the case of other reform measures presented by the Government earlier in the session it turns on the constitutional validity of the proposed enactment, in this case the insertion in the Criminal Code of clauses hitting at underpayment or overworking of employes and unfair or discriminatory discounts in trade and commerce.

Defends Commission.

W. W. Kennedy, Conservative member for Winnipeg South-Centre, and chairman of the Price Spreads Commission, came stoutly to the defence of the results of the Commission's work. He did so after Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, told the House the proposed enactment was of doubtful validity and after lawyer members on the Liberal side demanded its withdrawal.

Mr. Kennedy said the clause making a punishable offence to pay less than the minimum wage or work employes more than the maximum hours was aimed at a deliberate cheating of the workers. It was a crime to steal an article from a shop, but it was not a crime ofr an employer by deceit, threats, or subjlery to steal time, money, and labor from his employees.

He appealed to the House to look at the plight of those the measure was designed to benefit and at the spirit rather than the letter of the constitution.

Validity Doubtful.

Hon Ian Mackenzie (Lib., Vancouver Centre) and Sam Jacobs

FOURTH DEATH IN AUTO RACES AT INDIANAPOLIS

Driver Killed and Mechanic's Back Broken as Car Leaps Wall.

THREE DEAD IN TRIALS.

Los Angeles Driver Setting a Near Record as Half-way Mark Reached.

FLASH

Petillo wins 500-mile race.

SPEEDWAY, Indianapolis, May 30 (AP)—Clay Weatherly, Cincinnati, was killed to-day when his car crashed over the northwest wall while competing in the 500-mile automobile race at the Indianapolis motor speedway.

Weatherly's mechanic, Edwin Bradborn, Los Angeles, suffered a broken back. His condition was serious. The death of Weatherly was the fourth to occur for to-day's race, three other drivers lost their lives in the trials.

Petillo Leading

With the half-way mark reached, Kelly Petillo, Los Angeles driver, was setting a near record pace.

At the end of 250 miles, Petillo had snatched the lead from Rex Mays, also of Los Angeles, having covered the distance in 2:17:46.00 for an average of 108.860 miles per hour.

After leading practically all the way, misfortune finally overtook Rex Mays, 24-year-old Los Angeles driver, forced to quit after 205 miles due to a broken spring shackle bolt.

Hit Upper Wall

Weatherly's car ,travelling at terrific speed, hit the upper wall on the turn leading into the stretch, bounded down the track, and crashed into the inner retaining wall, throwing Weatherly into the infield.

At 75 miles, Rex Mays of Los Angeles led the field, having covered the distance in 42:27.16, averaging 106.000 miles an hour. Tony Gulotta, Kansas City, was second, with Babe Stapp, Los Angeles, third.

Al Gordon, Los Angeles, and his mechanic, Frank Howard, escaped death a few seconds after Weatherly was killed when his car crashed on the same turn. Gordon's car shot to the top of the track and hung there.

Canadian Estate Awaits Town of Colne

MONTREAL, May 30 (C.P.).—The mystery of the visit to Canada of Mayor James W. Greenwood of Colne, England, and two of the town's paid officials in connection with a reputed $1,000,000 fortune left the town of Colne by an Ontario man, was partly cleared up to-day with an explanation from a former resident of Colne, now living in Monteral. The Mayor of Colne and the two officials arrived in Montreal Tuesday night.

The former resident of Colne explained a man named Peter Birdwhistle, described as jeweller of London, Ont., died about 10 years ago and chose to leave the money to the town.

The money has been accumulating interest for 10 years, and it will be another 10 years before the officials of the town can receive the money. However, anxious to make sure of the inheritance, the Colne authorities have been in touch with Toronto legal authorities, according to the former resident.

$250 To John Dallin Injured On Sidewalk

An action brought by John G. Dallin against the City of Peterborough and set down for trial before His Honor Judge Smoke, at a special sitting of the County Court, for the 29th instant, has been settled by the parties.

On January 7th, Mr. Dallin slipped on the sidewalk at the corner of George and Antrim streets, breaking his right forearm and as a result this action was brought.

By the terms of the settlement, the city paid $250.00 and the plaintiff's costs.

A. L. Elliott acted for the plaintiff and J. R. Corkery for the city.

Service stations for wood-gas vehicles will be opened in Germany.

Prince of Wales Sets Golf Styles

The Prince of Wales may not be a world beater as a golfer, but he sets the style, if not the pace. He is seen here in an informal pose as he played H. Burrows in Parliamentary handicap at Walton Heath. He was wearing checked knickers, with matching scarf and herringbone stockings.

Continued Decrease In Church's Income

Decline Not Solely Due to Depression, Bay of Quinte Conference is Told.

LESS ENTHUSIAM.

Delegates to the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church looked to-day with alarm on continued decreases in income to the Conference reported by H. W. Ackerman of Belleville of the Missionary and Maintenance Committee. The total of contributions of the conference last year was $126,361.51—down $10,562.36 over the previous year, he said.

"We note with humility and regret the serious decline that has been made from $279,961 in 1925 to $125,962 in 1934" he stated. "Much of this is due, we know, to adverse financial conditions throughout Canada and the whole world but this is not the sole cause. It is the opinion of your committee the decline in revenue is symptomatic of a decline in missionary enthusiasm and in the acceptance of the principals of Christian stewardship.

"our committee is frankly concerned over the fact that many charges are not paying sufficient to the Missionary and Maintenance Fund to meet even the equivalent of the superannuation assessment."

Contributions by Presbyteries

Mr. Ackerman praised, however, 118 charges which managed to increase their contributions during the year. The contributions of the various presbyteries in the Conference, 1933 and 1934 respectiveiyx, were reported as: Belleville, $23,581.01, $22,690.16; Cobourg, $13,207.75, $12,619.42; Kingston, $36,857.48, $33,163.21; Lindsay, $13,156.64; $12,368.26; Oshawa, $21,718.10, $21,060.75; Peterborough, $17,468.74; $15,347.09; Renfrew, $20,034.14, $8,092.62.

Returns from the Young Peoples' Societies in 1933 were $4,227.92 and Dropped 7,000 Feet

SACRAMENTO, Calif., May 30 — (CP) — Those who have broken their glasses by dropping them will envy the luck of Robert N. Hicks, coast artillery unit instructor.

Hicks, flying in an army bomber, dropped his glasses 7,000 feet. Two days later, he said, a worker found them, unbroken on a plot of cultivated ground.

LONE GUNMAN THOUGHT TO BE ARCHIE HYATT

Caught Stealing Gas in Essex County But Points Gun at Operator.

GETS 18 GALLONS.

CHATHAM, Ont., May 30 (C.P.). — Theft of 18 gallons of gas from the service station of Thomas Hooker of Woodslee early to-day by a lone gunman caused police authorities to divert their attention from the Stratford district to Essex and Kent in the belief the robber is Archie Hyatt, fugitive from Frontenac County Jail. Since his escape Hyatt is alleged to have staged a campaign of robberies in Western Ontario.

Two hours before, at Tupperville, a few miles from Chatham, an attempted break in of a garage was reported. James Brown, proprietor, notified police here of the attempt.

Blind Girl a "U" Grad

Lost Her Sight And Then Set Out To Obtain Her Arts Degree At McGill University.

MONTREAL, May 30. (CP).—The sightless eyes of Miss Lucy Senkevitz looked into the future to-day and saw her lifework lay in creating a new attitude towards the blind after a post-graduate course in Psychology at McGill University where she graduates to-day with a B.A. Miss Senkevitz plans writing after the post-graduate course with aid to the blind as the object.

Miss Senkevitz came from her birthplace in Minsk province, Russia, in 1910. She spent one year at Rutgers College and four years at McGill in scientific work before an accident robbed her of her sight. After the accident almost four years ago she set out to obtain her arts degree.

Miss Senkevitz, inspired by the life of Helen Keller, intends to bring the glories of nature to the sightless through her writings and hopes her scientific training has

Work Has Started $60,000 Addition To Local Factory

T. A. Brown Construction Company Has Been Awarded Contract For New Addition To Plant.

HOLIDAY PAY IS RESTORED BY COMPANY TO EMPLOYEES OF 5 YEARS' SERVICE.

Present Plant Is Overcrowded—New Building Will Be Of Two Storeys, 100 Feet By 80 Feet.

Construction of a 2-storey addition to the Western Clock Company's plant at an estimated cost of $50,000.00 to $60,000.00 was announced to-day by company officials.

The contract, calling for completion by December 1, has been awarded to the T. A. Brown Construction Company, and excavation work has already started. Local labor is to be employed where possible.

Necessitated by present conditions of overcrowding, due to increased production, the addition is being erected immediately west of the buffing and plating department, and will extend west towards Armour road.

Specifications.

Specifications are for a 2-storey brick building, conforming to the pleasing architectural design of the present building, with dimensions 100 feet long by 80 feet wide.

The basement is to be of poured concrete, with the ground floor constructed of brick with heavy steel trusses, and a 80-foot span to support the roof.

The building will be of such design that it will permit machines to be laid across the entire 80-foot width without having supporting pillars to interfere with the layout, it was stated.

Holidays With Pay.

John H. Vernor, general manager, accompanied the encouraging announcement with the further news that, due to improved trade conditions in the clock and watchmaking industry, the company is to restore, as a temporary measure for this year only, holidays with pay to employees with upwards of five years' service. Any extension of such an arrangement, he stressed, would depend in future years entirely upon future conditions.

Stating reasons for the company's decision to build, Mr. Vernor said the present accommodation is taxed

JOHNSON MOVES TO THE RESCUE OF BLUE EAGLE

Wave of Price Slashing and Dog-Eat-Dog Industrial Competition Sweeps U.S.

TO REWRITE ACT.

Unable to Maintain Codes on Account of the Selfish Ten Per Cent.

BY SAM ROBERTSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer).

NEW YORK, May 30.—(CP). — General Hugh S. Johnson—a name synonymous of the NRA and its symbolic blue eagle—worked in shirt sleeves to-day in an effort to keep a measure of life in the emasculated old bird.

The brusque army fighter and original director of NRA's two-year drive to stabilize prices and increase employment, hurried to Washington at President Roosevelt's summons as a wave of price slashing and dog-eat-dog industrial competition swept the United States.

Went By Plane.

After two hurried calls upon the President, Gen. Johnson went on the air to lash at "the ghouls of industry" and ask the country to appeal to Congress "everything left by the Supreme Court's decision (that the prinicple points of NRA are unconstitutional) be saved."

It was understood Johnson's dramatic arrival in the capital yesterday followed communication of the President's wish that he attempt to rewrite the National Industrial Recovery Act within legal confines. The General, blasted out of the official governmental family a half year ago by criticism of his "cracking down" methods, peeled off his coat and went immediately to work.

DR. EMBURY NAMED IN EAST RIDING

BANCROFT MAN IS VICTORIOUS ON THIRD BALLOT

Dr. A. T. Embury, M.P., Defeats G. Bruce Airhart for Conservative Nomination.

HON. ROBERT WEIR SPEAKS

172 Out of the 173 Accredited Delegates Attend Convention in Marmora.

(By A Staff Reporter)

MARMORA, May 30.—Conservatives of the federal riding of Hastings-Peterborough renewed their faith in Dr. A. T. Embury, M.P., Bancroft, by once again nominating him here yesterday their candidate in this year's general elections.

On the third ballot Dr. Embury emerged with a majority of eighteen over G. Bruce Airhart of this town after Ernest J. Leeson of Havelock and Judson A. Gunter of Bancroft had been eliminated respectively on the first and second ballots.

The final division of the delegates was 95 to 77, a total of 172 out of the authorized and credentialled total of 173.

The success of yesterday's convention and annual meeting in its numerical aspect was indicated in the fact that only one delegate was absent, the second vice-president, John S. Morton of Stirling, who was prevented from being present by bereavement in his family. The town hall was crowded to capacity by other men and women of the party from all sections of both the Peterborough and Hastings areas of the rambling and far spread constituency which Dr. Embury has represented since the redistribution of 1924.

Fred Curry of Madoc was elected president of the riding Association, succeeding John A. Sexsmith of Belmont township. The concluding feature of the meeting was an address by Hon. Robert Weir, federal Minister of Agriculture, who was principal of the local Public School thirty years ago.

Five Were Proposed

Chief interest of the long afternoon was focussed on the nomination of the party's candidate to contest the riding against the Liberal standard bearer, Rork Ferguson of Asphodel township. From two o'clock until 5.30, the meeting was occupied with the routine of electing officers, and the precise details of collecting and counting the ballots as the delegates gradually progressed to their final choice in Dr. Embury. After that, Hon. Mr. Weir spoke for more than an hour, delivering a vigorous address

Mining Men Have Narrow Escape

Three well-known British Columbia mining men had a narrow escape from death in an unusual aeroplane crash on Vancouver harbor. A party, comprising Col. Victor Spencer, president of Pioneer Gold Mines, Ltd.; David Sloan, managing director, and Purves Ritchie, director of Bralorne Gold Mines, was returning from a charter flight to Victoria. The aeroplane, piloted by Maurice McGregor, was taxying in to its slip when suddenly out of the water in front of it snapped a huge wire hawser just pulled tight by a tug starting to move a barge from the dock. The towline struck the aeroplane's engine, tipping the aircraft over on one wing, and the barge moved down on top of it. All three passengers managed to escape from the cabin and were rescued by the R.C.M.P. patrol boat Imperator. They suffered no serious injury.

CHEESE QUOTES PRODUCE AND LIVESTOCK

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

TORONTO, May 30 (C.P.) — Wholesale prices on fruit and vegetables as supplied by White and Co., were reported unchanged today.

TORONTO PRODUCE

TORONTO, May 30 (C.P.) — Wholesale prices on produce delivered at Toronto, as supplied by the United Farmers' Co-operative Co., here to-day were:

Eggs—Grade A large, 16c dozen; grade A medium, 15c; grade C, 13c.

Ontario Cobbler potatoes, bag, 30c.

TORONTO POULTRY

TORONTO, May 30 (C.P.) — Wholesale prices on poultry as supplied by the United Farmers' Co-operative Co., were reported unchanged to-day.

TORONTO CHEESE

TORONTO, May 30 (C.P.) — Toronto Wholesale Cheese Market was steady to-day with dealers buying large colored, paraffined and government grades at 10c.

Wholesalers offered cheese to retailers at the following prices:

	Large.	Twins.	Triplets.
New	11c	11½c	11½c
Old	16c	16½c	16½c
Medium	14c	14½c	14¾c

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, May 30.—Jolted by five cents a bushel collapse of wheat prices at Minneapolis, grain markets here suffered sharp late downturns yesterday.

Milling interests were reported to have withdrawn abruptly for at least the time being as buyers of wheat, and there were reports that demand for flour had fallen off except to fill immediate wants. With wheat crop advices generally bearish. Minneapolis wheat values dropped to the maximum limit allowed during any twenty-four hour period, and Chicago May and July wheat, and December corn, as well as all deliveries of oats and rye here, registered new low price records for the season.

Wheat in Chicago closed weak at the day's bottom level, 2½c to 2¾c under Tuesday's finish, July 84¾c to 84⅞c, corn ¾c to 1c down, July 78c to 78⅛c, oats ⅝c to 1⅛c off, and provisions unchanged to 25c lower.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, May 30 (C.P.) — The Toronto Livestock Market continued its draggy session this afternoon with cattle, calves, sheep and lambs, slow but steady. Off-truck hogs sold 10 cents lower at $9.15 for bacons.

Receipts, as reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch, were: Cattle, 80; calves, 30; hogs, 60; sheep and lambs, 100.

In the cattle division a few steers sold at $5.50 to $7.50 cwt. Butcher cattle brought $5.50 to $6.50 and a few cows $2 to $4.75.

Calves dragged on light receipts at $4.50 to $6.50 cwt, and one at $7.

The 160 hogs in the receipts were all truck hogs.

Common to medium sheep changed hands at $1 to $3.50 cwt. The slow lamb market moved a few choice at $1 cwt, with common at $7 to $8.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, May 30. — The Winnipeg wheat market slumped another 2 cents yesterday. May closed at 81½c and July 82⅞c.

Opening lower in the face of a firm Liverpool cable, the market slumped to close with a 2c break. May was down to within 1½c of "Peg," which is the nearest it has been since February 5. July was down to 82⅞c, with "Peg" price of 81¼c, which is in sharp contrast to a high of 91½c registered on the bull movement of April.

No export business was uncovered until the market had broken quite sharply, and then purchases were not impressive. Weakness at Chicago and reversal of the trend at Liverpool in the closing stages were weakening influences here. Liverpool finished unchanged to ⅛d lower after being up ½d. Trade sentiment appeared to be extremely bearish.

Argentina wheat exports for this week were estimated at just over 3,000,000 bushels, which is about 600,000 bushels less than last week. Both Argentina and Australia are offering less freely and at firm prices.

The cash wheat market was featured by fair sales of Nos. 5 and 6 wheat. The spread on No. 1 durum eased 1 cent. Wheat taken in at country points on Tuesday totalled 168,000 bushels.

Futures:

Wheat—	Open	High	Low	Close	Prev. Close

RANSOM MONEY IN SECRET PLACE FOR KIDNAPPERS

Family of Missing Boy Have Placed Money in Secret Hiding Place.

MAY BE FREED TO-DAY?

TACOMA, May 30. —(AP)— A source close to the Weyerhaeuser family disclosed today the $200,000 ransom—a 50-pound stack of federal reserve notes in the specified denominations—lay in a secret hiding place awaiting the kidnappers of nine-year old George Weyerhaeuser.

The source said the ransom money was arranged for only yesterday, although the parents, young and wealthy Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser, Jr., have advertised repeatedly since Monday they were ready to redeem their son.

Preparations of the ransom for delivery was believed to indicate George was being held nearby and he might be freed today.

Ransom In Full

The report the full amount of the ransom had been made ready for delivery to the extortionists lent strength to a rumor there had been a contact with the kidnappers yesterday and the parents were assured their son was alive and safe. The ransom note had threatened harm to the curly-haired boy if the press or authorities were informed of his capture.

Weyerhaeuser's brother-in-law, F. Rodman Titcomb, named by a family friend as one of the two men who probably will be intermediaries with the kidnappers came out of the Weyerhaeusers house with a man and a woman who could not

STRIKE ORDERS BEING ISSUED

Soft Coal Miners Will Strike After June 16 Unless New Agreement Signed.

IS UP TO CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, May 30 (AP) — Strike orders for 450,000 United States soft coal miners were being prepared to-day but officials of the United Mine Workers held Congress might avert the walkout by speedily authorizing "a little NRA" for the industry.

John L. Lewis, president of the union, said instructions to strike unless a new wage agreement has been signed by June 16 would be sent to 6,000 of the miners' local organizations within a few days.

But if Congress quickly enacts the Guffey Coal Stabilization Bill, Lewis contended, the producers would be assured of sufficient income—through price control—to pay the wages the union asks for the next two years.

CONVICT SLAYS HIS 4TH VICTIM

Killed Two Youths When 17 Years Old "Just to See Them Kick."

SLEW ANOTHER CONVICT.

ANGLETON, Tex., May 30 (A.P.). —Clyde Thompson, who at 17 said he killed two youths "just to see them kick," slew his fourth victim last night.

He stabbed Everett Melvin, Potter County robber, to death in a brawl at the retrieve prison farm here. Then he remarked to Capt. Ike Kelley, farm manager:

"Well, Cap, it looks like I'm in trouble again."

Melvin was slashed to death as he and other convicts formed in line for the lock-step march to their evening meal.

He was dead when a physician reached the scene. Captain Kelley said he found the dirk with which Melvin was slain—a crude knife made from a file.

Thompson was first convicted for slaying Lucian and Leon Shook in 1928. At his trial he said he killed them "just to see them kick." He was sentenced to death, but the sentence was commuted to life.

Three years ago he stabbed to death Tommy (The Squealer) Reis, Galveston robber. He was then given another life sentence.

Pickerel Fry Left Trent River Waters

CAMPBELLFORD, May 30 (Examiner Correspondence).—The government truck loaded with pickerel fry arrived in town on Wednesday morning. Applications made by Messrs. F. J. Smith, Deck Cole, P. J. Sarginson, Fred Keller, Frank Menzies and J. M. Perris for 200,000 each were attended to and deposits were made at Healy Falls, Crow Bay and Bradley Bay. Further shipment of fingerlings for the trout creeks are promised for an early date.

Suspect Arrested By Cobourg Police

COBOURG, May 30 (CP)—After a short chase during which Constable Gavin Reid fired his revolver, a man who gave his name as Fred Day of Belleville was arrested today near the rear of a jewelery store. Constable Reid discovered him behind the store and quickly cornered him. He was taken to jail and charged with vagrancy.

ALBERT COLLEGE SHOWS SURPLUS PRINCIPAL SAYS

New Conception of Christ is Needed To-day Bay of Quinte Conference Told.

PRESIDENT INSTALLED.

Second Year Arts Course at Albert College Has Proven Most Successful.

A new conception of Jesus Christ is needed, Rev. John Line, professor of Christian Ethics at Emanuel College, Toronto University, told the clerical delegates to the Bay of Quinte Conference as the sessions continued in St. Andrew's Church yesterday afternoon.

He pointed a finger of disapproval at the modern developments toward liberalism in theology. The result of the development has been that Jesus is conceived as the "perfect Rotarian," he declared. That conception must be changed and a new conception of both God and Jesus evolved. "The Christ of liberal theology goes through life patting little children on the head with kind words for everybody. He is the kind of gentleman you would expect to entertain in your own home. It is for man to discover the things which set Christ apart from men."

Rev. Line said the present conception has been reached through too painstaking dissection of the Holy Writ. Microscopic criticism will not give the fullest conception, he said.

The speaker declared that neither modernism or fundamentalism will provide the ultimate theological development which must come. Modernism does not even try, he contended, and the fundamentalist refused to believe that anybody has done any thinking since the Book of Job was written. Yet modernism has never equalled fundamentalism as a religious force, he said.

Albert College

Albert College at Belleville is in excellent shape, financialy and scholastically, Principal the Rev. Bert Howard reported to the conference. The College will finish its present year with a surplus, he predicted. He reported that it has a debt total of $38,000 compared with liquid assets of $51,000 and $600,000 assets in the College plant itself.

He outlined enthusiastically the progress which is being made in the institution. Despite the misgivings of Queen's University authorities, a second-year university arts course

Dairy Notes

(Examiner Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, May 30. — Cheese graded at Campbellford grading centre during the past week were as follows: Prince of Wales 24, Rylstone 20, Crow Bay 16. Colored cheese sold on Belleville Board on Saturday last at 9⅝c.

Alfred Merrill, chairman of the Eastern Dairyman's Association, attended Belleville Board last week and heard the report o fthe delegates who waited on the Hon. Robt. Weir, Federal Minister of Articultur with argument against the Ontario Cheese Patrons plans.

Crow Bay Factory, made settlement in full for the first week of May, and reports to patrons sending milk during that time, show the following average price per lb. cheese 11¼c; paid patrons per pound butter fat, 29c.

This year during the week ending May 25 there were 9,948 boxes of cheese offered for grading in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, as compared with 9,961 during the correasponding period in 1934, and thus far this year in the Dominion of Canada 44,007 boxes graded have shown 97.17 per cent first grade, as compared with 41,904 boxes last year went 97.84 per cent first grade.

It is interesting to note that the Milk Board of Great Britain will this year spend £60,000 in a gigantic milk advertising campaign.

Home and School Association News

KING EDWARD SCHOOL.

The regular meeting of the King Edward Home and School Association was held on Monday evening, May 28 at the school. The session opened with Mrs. A. Gillespie presiding.

Business matters were dealt with first and included arrangements for a picnic to be held on the King Edward Park on June 12.

The remainder of the evening consisted of entertainment which included a piano solo by Mrs. Glover and a vocal solo by Mrs. Todd. The group then played games under the supervision of Mr. J. McClenaghan.

Following the service of dainty refreshments the singing of God Save the King brought the meeting to a close.

NORMANDIE HEADS TOWARDS NEW YORK

Giant French Liner Sailed Southampton at Midnight.

ABOARD S. S. NORMANDIE, AT SEA, May 30.—(AP).—The Normandie pointed her prow toward New York to-day and the possibility of a new trans-Atlantic speed record. The 79,000 ton liner averaged 28.5 knots on the first stage of her maiden voyage. She left Le Havre, her home port, at 6.30 p.m. and arrived in Southampton shortly before midnight.

Officials came out in a tender to extend the greetings of Southampton, Portsmouth and Southsea to the Normandie's commander, Capt. Rene Pugnet. When the delegation departed, the tender saluted the mammoth liner with three small little toots on her whistle. The Normandie's response was three terrific roars from her siren which reverberated deafeningly over Cowes Roads.

Then the liner's anchor cable clanked through the hawser pipes, her giant mud hooks crept up the sides of her gleaming prow and the Normandie slid swiftly out to sea.

Man Is Found Dead In His Hotel Room

OTTAWA May 30 (C.P.).—Inquest into the death of Thomas Job, Brockville, found dead in his hotel room yesterday has been adjourned until next Tuesday.

Seven hours previous to being found dead, Job figured in an automobile accident, when Edward Hill, Toronto, with whom Job was driving, crashed into a safety island.

After the accident both men appeared unhurt and were allowed to go to their hotel. Hill appeared in traffic court later in the day on a charge of reckless driving, and was remanded until Wednesday next.

LINDSAY MUST FIND NEW WATER SUPPLY

Present System is Condemned by Ontario Director of Health.

LINDSAY, May 30. — Lindsay Water Board must obtain a new and more satisfactory water supply, it was declared definitely yesterday. The situation was discussed by Dr. A. E. Berry, Toronto, Director of Sanitary Engineering of the Ontario Department of Health, with local officials.

The Board contracted with Jordan Roberts Company, Brantford, to dig artesian wells, two years ago at a cost of $23,000. The wells have since failed to produce the required amount of water, it was said. The town, it was said, must obtain a satisfactory supply from other sources.

Jordon Roberts Company has been sued for the amount paid on the grounds that it did not complete the contract.

During the discussion yesterday it was estimated settling basins could be built at a cost of $30,000. Water from the Scugog River, which runs through the town, could be pumped into them and treated Dr. Berry said.

"Where is the money going to come from for this work," asked one of the board members.

"Your water is condemned and you have got to get pure water," replied Dr. Berry.

HOLSTEIN BREEDERS WILL HOLD OUTING

Belleville District Clubs Plan Picnic for June the 18th.

BURNBRAE, May 30 (Examiner Correspondence)—A Holstein breeders' picnic with a program of interest to all, is the plan of the Belleville district clubs for this year, and the event will probably be held in the Belleville Agricultural Park on June 18th. Officers of the various clubs from Lennox and Addington, Prince Edward, Hastings and Northumberland Counties met in Belleville on Thursday evening last to discuss plans and appoint committees to arrange the details of the monster picnic.

Fred Hubbs of Bloomfield, 4th vice-president of the Canadian Holstein Association, is to act as master of ceremonies for the day, with Fred Webster, Prince Edward's efficient agricultural representative, as secretary of the picnic committee.

Outstanding animals from the four counties will be selected for a class of mature cows, a class of yearling bulls, and a progeny of dam exhibit. Judging by Junior Farmers and an exhibition of throwing and hoof-trimming by Dr. Goodwin of Picton will be features of the forenoon program.

Speakers to be invited include Hon. Duncan Marshall, Provincial Minister of Agriculture; Prof. Raithby of the O.A.C.; R. M. Holtby, Port Perry; George M. Clemons, Secretary of the Association, and Principal Bell of Kemptville School.

In addition to the judging for young and old, and the speech program, there will be sports for everyone, with prizes for the boys and girls.

This is a new venture for Holstein fanciers in this section, but it is hoped that the same interest will prevail as has in many other sections where such events prove real educational holidays for many busy people.

Summonses Follow Police Warnings

For failure to heed recent police warnings relative to parking regulations, six local persons were fined $2.00 each without costs upon entering pleas of "guilty" before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. Each of the offenders against whom summonses were issued had parked their cars anglewise in contravention of the city parking by-law. They were: A. A. Letellier, M. F. Cathcart, A. Rutter, Jr., W. H. Miller, Richard Dawson and A. Botnick. For having insufficient lights on a motor vehicle, W. H. Hatherly was assessed $3.00 without costs.

Charged on informations laid by Highway Traffic Officer A. E. Hornick, J. Scudamore, this city, and L. Harris, Penelon Falls, were fined $5.00 and $4.25 costs, and $10.00 and $4.25 costs respectively for speeding.

Janetville

Rev. Victor Walker of the local Presbyterian Church was in charge of the services at Courtice United Church on Sunday while Rev. W. C. Smith of Courtice was the guest speaker for the Ballyduff anniversary services near here.

The Women's Institute held a committee meeting in the park on Saturday evening, when, among other items, it was decided to accept the invitation of the Rink Club to serve supper at their coming softball tournament on Monday, June 3rd, the Institute to have the proceeds from the supper.

The Young People's Society of the United Church have announced their play "The Adventures of Grandpa" to be held on Friday night, June 7 in the Forester's Hall, Janetville.

The schools of North Manvers, namely Yelverton, Bethel, Fleetwood, North and South Janetville are busily preparing for their spring musical festival which is being held in the Forester's Hall, Janetville on Tuesday night June 4th. This festival will mark the closing of music lessons in the schools for this year. The musical instructor, Mr. Francis Sutton, Mus. Bach., F.C.C.O., of Bowmanville has arranged for a most interesting program and demonstration and will be assisted by the teachers. Everyone interested is urged to attend and a small silver collection will be taken to defray the expenses of the hall.

Rev. H. C. and Mrs. Wolfraim and children Helen and Harry, Misses Jean Stinson and Marjorie Armstrong and Carson Howe spent the holiday at Bowmanville and called on Rev. W. C. and Mrs. Smith and other friends at Courtice while en route home. The outing was in honor of both Mrs. Wolfraim's and Miss Jean Stinson's birthday which falls on May 24th.

WHERE THE PUBLIC CAN HELP.

The annual tag day on behalf of St. Vincent's Orphanage is to be held on Saturday, and this most deserving cause is commended to the generosity of the citizens generally as entirely worthy of support.

The tag day plan of raising funds has been followed by the orphanage, as it has been by the Children's Aid Society, for many years—in fact, these two fine organizations were the pioneers in this plan in Peterborough, and the public has invariably made a generous response to the annual appeal.

There is every reason for confidence that Saturday's tag day will be just as cheerfully supported as ever, for the citizens of Peterborough are familiar with the splendid work carried on by the orphanage in caring for neglected and dependent children, and they also recognize the fact that, like every other organization dependent upon public support, St. Vincent's Orphanage has found these last few years of depreciated income more trying than usual.

There is a very real need for an institution like the orphanage, and in the reclamation work it is doing in the making of good Canadian citizens out of children robbed by circumstances of an ordinary chance to succeed, it has earned the whole-hearted support of the community.

That support should be unreservedly forthcoming on Saturday in response to the annual tag day appeal.

IS THIS THE WAY?

It begins to look as if it would be good business for the C.C.F., before the federal election campaign gets really under way, to clarify the official platform of the party and to put a stop to some of the wild statements that are being made by members of the organization.

For instance, one of the prominent British Columbia C.C.F. leaders, Dr. Lyle Telford, who has been speaking for the movement over the radio, has been telling his air audiences that if the C.C.F. were to come into power industry in general would be confiscated and operated under a socialistic system by which the workers would be paid, not in cash, but in scrip, which would be honored at C.C.F. stores for goods, the scrip in turn to be redeemed by a C.C.F. bank.

Dr. Telford has gone into more detail than other Co-operative Commonwealth Federation speakers, and it would be helpful to know whether or not his statements are setting forth the official program of his party.

Incidentally, it would be still more helpful if there was some explanation of whether or not this plan of confiscation and socialized industry is to include Canada's basic industry, agriculture, or are we to have rugged individualism so far as the farmers are concerned, with socialism confined within town boundaries?

Most of the C.C.F. orators have been very vague as to the working out of the party's policies; has Dr. Telford let the cat out of the bag, or is he merely stating his own views?

Meanwhile we can only pursue a policy of watchful waiting.

CANADA'S TAXATION PROBLEM.

The Citizens' Research Institute comes to bat with a nation-wide plan of taxation for Canada, surely a timely and most interesting contribution toward the solution of a problem that should be giving the whole country concern.

In its initial survey of the taxation scene in the Dominion, the institute outlines three outstanding impressions, none of which is likely to be seriously disputed.

It finds, in the first place, that Canada has too much government; secondly, that it pays too much for its government, and finally, that the present tax situation has been reached, not by planning, but by emergency patching.

As we have said, it would be difficult for anyone to successfully challenge the truth of these three conclusions.

Canada has a national government which levies taxes, nine provincial governments which levy taxes, some 3,963 local authorities which levy taxes, some 23,800 local school boards which levy taxes or whom taxes are levied, and in the neighborhood of some 4,000,000 people who pay to these three types of public authority a miscellaneous assortment of taxes amounting to $650,000,000 a year.

The provinces vary among themselves in their tax structures, and in some cases municipalities within provinces also differ in their methods.

The only general separation of sources is the provision of the British North America Act that provinces and, of course, their subdivisions are limited to direct taxes within the provinces.

In the main, real estate taxes are reserved for municipalities, but through the so-called municipal levies and wild land taxes in the western provinces and the levying of local taxation in unorganized areas, some of the provinces receive considerable revenue from the taxation of real estate.

SOMETHING DEFINITE WANTED.

Quoting The Examiner's reference to the demand from a candidate for the Liberal nomiantion in Essex West that the Liberal federal party should declare for a constructive policy on the questions of the day, instead of relying upon the weakness of it for success in the election, the St. Thomas Times-Journal remarks that those who remember the brand of sane and solid Liberalism worked by the late Dr. Duncan McLarty, of St. Thomas, will not marvel at the candid thoughts expressed by his son, Norman A. McLarty, K.C., the candidate in question.

Incidentally the St. Thomas paper agrees with The Examiner that the people want something tangible to vote for, not merely deciding a 'between the "ins" and "outs."

The Liberal party leaders, it suggests, may have the best intentions in the world, may have plans and policies in the backs of their heads which, in case they are elected to power, they hope to put into effect for the good of the country.

"But asking the people to follow them blindly is not the good old Liberal way," submits the Times-Journal. "Men like Norman McLarty's father, who exercised much influence along the lines of political thought in Elgin, demanded clear-cut, definite policies of national importance from their leaders, and fought election campaigns on the merits of such policies."

Political conventions are being held all over the country at the present time, hundreds of speeches are being made, the Government at Ottawa is being raked fore and aft from scores of platforms, but from the Opposition orators there is coming no definite statements of national policies, nor even half-developed plans for the solution of the country's problems.

It is a peculiar situation, and the independent voter is left pretty much in a fog as he listens in vain for something beyond generalities in regard to trade expansion, unemployment, the railway problem and other burning questions.

UNIVERSITY MEN AND POLITICS.

Speaking to the 1935 class of McMaster, Canon Cody, president of the University of Toronto, urged university graduates to enter politics. Holding there never was greater need for thought and knowledge than at the present time, he said:

> "Surely from the university the people ought to have the right to expect intellectual, moral and spiritual leadership."

We should like to believe such an expectation on the part of the people does exist, but, having observed the working of politics for a long time, we don't believe it. The reality is that the people, selecting their candidates for Parliament, aren't much concerned with the universities. What usually happens is that a local party association, consisting of about 10 per cent. or less of the total voters in a riding, selects a candidate who, in the thought of its members, has a good chance to get votes, then asks the public to vote for him. They are not strong for university graduates. Nor are they much concerned with "intellectual, moral and spiritual leadership."

The blame for this, assuming that the practice is bad—which we think it is—is not with the party associations. It is with the mass of the people who, largely because of indifference, or because of reasons worse than indifference, refuse to join party associations. Many of us think ourselves too important, or too superior, to join a party association. We are willing, despite occasional pre-election grumbling, to leave such organizations to people to whom we refer disdainfully as "party workers," our vanity or self-importance assuring us that for our great talents and standing such work is all too petty.

And with what result? With the result, mainly, that the average party organization represents but a fraction of a party's adherents, and often its least influential fraction. Yet it is this fraction, this small minority of a party, which selects our parliamentary candidates.

The selections are not always bad. More often than not they are good. But while the rank and file of our public men have been and are much better than the public's conception of them, the fact remains that the system or practice is a bad one, and that, in these days, it may become particularly bad.

It is true, as Canon Cody holds, that the qualifications demanded of a member of Parliament these days are higher than in the past. We are in a new era, an era which sees the "dismal science" of economics the vital factor in public life, and which calls for wider knowledge and study and a different sort of ability from our public men.

Merely to understand some of the present-day legislation or the proposals made requires a background of experience and knowledge that comparatively few possess. There must be moments in the lives of many legislators when they are appalled at their lack of equipment for arriving at an intelligent decision as between one course and another. Fortunate is it for them, but of doubtful benefit for the rest of us, that they are expected to follow strict party lines—be simply votes on a division list.

The remedy will not be found in every graduate of a university offering himself for Parliament. That, if prohibited by nothing else, is ruled out by the fact that politics costs money, and that for the young man without means it is liable to be a precarious calling.

What is called for, however, and what would help Canada if it could come, is that graduates of our universities should take more active interest in politics. They need not all enter Parliament, nor try to enter it. But if more of them could try to give purpose and direction to politics in their parties and in their communities, if more of them would resolve to get down into the dusty arena and do some of the hard, practical chores of parties, this instead of being aloof altogether, or instead of sitting on the sidelines to jeer, it would be vastly better all round.

If we didn't achieve that complete efficiency which the perfectionists long for, we should at least approach a pattern of public thought which would be tremendously helpful, and which is as much as a democracy may hope for. For the great test of democracy, and its hope, in the future, will be its ability to educate itself, to adjust itself to changed conditions, to meet the challenge of new creeds and isms with an informed mind.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

"The Irish Free State Having Trouble Collecting Taxes," reads a newspaper heading. Well, come to think of it, so are all other taxing authorities.

Some 60 reckless drivers are in jail in Toronto at the present time, which strikes us as an effective way of isolating accident hazards.

The Dionne quintuplets were on the air on Tuesday, but on account of the amount of "squawking" that was heard, listeners-in could be pardoned for imagining that they were tuned in on the parents instead.

Social credit is denounced by a college professor as a fantasy, but it would be difficult just now to convince a lot of Alberta people that the description is justified.

Those who do not make sure their names are on the election lists are taking a chance of losing their vote when the time for balloting arrives.

Now that the City Council has built a new fence around part of the ball grounds, it should complete the job by rebuilding the balance of the fence which is not only far from attractive in appearance but has about served its usefulness.

The United States is being fast changed under the New Deal from a land of promise to a land of promises.—Detroit Free Press.

FASCISM

Editor of The Examiner,

Dear Sir,—Black shirts or any other colored shirts—storm troopers, or even those who openly call themselves Fascists are non-essentials to Fascism. They are merely its dramatic frills, and will not be used as the major force in putting Fascism over in Canada, for the simple reason that most of the people in Canada see nothing but "Horrors" in those countries where Fascism has become a reality. The capitalists of Canada realize this only too well and know that if Fascism is to become a fact in Canada, it must come in disguise. It is an established fact that Fascism from now on will ride through in the name of Democracy. The origin of Fascism is the origin of Capitalism itself for Fascism is Capitalism forced onto the majority after they no longer want it. The reason it has not come to the forefront of political and social life until to-day is, because its appearance has been conditioned by the "pulse" of Capitalism. For as long as the Capitalist system of production could find an outlet for surplus production things were "honky dorrie" for all (especially the Capitalists). Once Capitalist economy becomes world economy we are faced with a horse of a different color. The "cost of world production" (which is the totality of world purchasing power) will not buy back the "value of world production"—with the result huge unemployed armies—workers living far below subsistance levels—farmers near bankrupt — and the middle class facing ruination as a class (the big Capitalists eating the little ones up). These victims of Capitalist exploration look around and see that they are starving and facing ruination amidst an abundance, they note further that the greater this abundance (wealth) the greater their misery and faster their ruination takes place (through centralization of capital). Through disappointment after disappointment they come to a realization that their salvation lies beyond the confines of Capitalism—this break with tradition means that they can no longer see Capitalism as something "Eternal and Divine"—It has become shorn of its mysticism — This break shakes the very foundations of the "Status Quo" the Capitalists alone realize the seriousness of this—for as a class they are a minority class, therefore must have the unquestioned support of others or another class, to hold power. Under the conditions which the rising merchants (Capitalists) came to power they were forced if not in fact in theory to recognize the right of everyone to choose—to say and to think what they considered was in their interests. Therefore the Capitalists class was left in a different position than any other ruling class before them, they had no open subject class, with the result that their continued rule depended on tradition; note how well they have made use of it. To-day most of the people can not distinguish between religion and tradition with the result that everything has become consecrated, including our ideas of private property, profits and interest the most sacred of all things to the Capitalist class.

But they see that these things alone will no longer save them, for are they not being challenged daily to justify their existence, by who other than the poverty stricken masses, a product of their own creation—For is it not a fact with the power in their hands and the means at their disposal to elevate humanity to new heights of civilization, they have in reality produced poverty, misery, and degradation on a scale never dreamed of before. Fascism is Capitalism forcing (openly and violently if they find it necessary—look at Germany and Italy) the masses to accept these conditions as their just lot. Therefore it's plain to be seen that a fight against Fascism is a fight for higher relief scales, better wages, better conditions for the farmers and middle class against all back to the land schemes — relief camps—or in short all forced labor schemes. This will put the Capitalist class on the spot, they must now cure the depression with human welfare as the primary consideration. If they can't cure it under these conditions, let them get out, and we'll put somebody there that can.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

The two to five-year-old child is growing rapidly, and frequently changes and additions to his diet are advisable. He is gaining about five pounds a year in weight, and about one and one-half inches in height. He requires from his food enough material to supply him with tissue for this growth, and also from his food enough to keep him warm and to allow him to engage in the energy requiring activity which is natural to him at that time.

"Food for the young child is a serious business upon which his whole progress in life largely depends," writes Mary S. Rose, the well-known nutrition expert.

A balanced diet for a child at this age is one providing a sufficient quantity of protein, carbohydrate, fat, minerals, vitamins, water and laxative foods. Protein is a necessary part of the tissues of the body, especially the muscles. Carbohydrates and fat furnish the energy and heat. Of the minerals, calcium, phosphorus and iron are the most important. Laxative foods are necessary to stimulate regular elimination, and water must be supplied to replace the daily loss from the body, and also to help in the digestion of the food.

Diet From Two to Five

The diet at this age should include:

1. One quart of milk daily. This will provide protein, and calcium, phosphorus, and some of the vitamins.

2. An egg daily. It provides protein, used by the body to promote growth, and is especially rich in iron and vitamins.

3. A small amount of meat, approximately three tablespoons, twice a week. Liver, kidney, sweetbreads, brains, beef, lamb and chicken can be used.

4. Vegetables and fruits daily. These provided vitamins, minerals and the laxative factor. The child should have two cooked vegetables, one of which should be a green vegetable; one raw vegetable, and one raw fruit and one cooked fruit during the day. The vegetables which are suitable for a child this age are cauliflower, carrots, beets, cabbage, spinach, turnips, onions, squash, peas, beans, tomatoes, asparagus and potatoes. Sandwiches made of chopped raw vegetables are usually relished.

5. Cereals once or possible twice daily to supply minerals and vitamins. A child will eat 4 to 8 tablespoons served with milk.

6. Whole wheat bread at each meal, with butter.

Cod Liver for Vitamin D

7. Cod liver oil; half a teaspoon daily is enough to supply Vitamin D. It can be given after a meal or in the middle of the morning in orange or tomato juice.

8. Two cups of water daily, to be taken between meals.

Food for children of this age should be prepared simply—either boiled, baked or broiled. Cream-vegetables and cream soups may be used to utilize part of the daily milk requirement. Such simple deserts as cream tapioca, chocolate pudding, junket and custard are appreciated and wholesome. Salt and pepper should be used sparingly.

Food are usually better when cooked without sugar. The eating of sugar is largely a habit, and can be encouraged or discouraged by the method of preparation.

ALL OF US

(By Marshall Maslin.)

WHO WANTS A SURE THING?

Do you complain because life is so uncertain?

You want blueprints of the future? You want to be sure? You want to be safe?

Let me write something. Something I've decided. Something that is true for me....It may not be true for you, but it satisfies me. It fills up my life sufficiently.

The only Sure Thing you can find on this earth is an IDEA, a belief, a faith. There is no other certainty and you waste your time looking for it....Put that in your heart and keep it there. Remember it, cling to it, don't forget it. Waste no part of your life looking for safety in this world.

I used to wish for safety. I didn't want to be hurt....But somehow I became a part of a war and lived for a while at the elbow of death. I became accustomed to his presence. He was never a commonplace, but I lost much of my fear of him. And so did the other men I knew. ....To be sure, I was younger then and I had no responsibilities, had no job, no family, no grooves in my life....Nevertheless, at a great cost, I took out of a war the conviction that safety is a delusion. It is not possible, it is not even desirable.

I cannot remain on that level. I slip from it occasionally as almost all men will....But I know that to live without fear, without props is the best way to be. When a man is not thinking of safety, of sure things, he is happier than at any time....If he thinks, instead, of what he is doing, how he is necessary, what he is accomplishing and perfecting and increasing in this common life of ours, THEN he is happy. But only then.

If you wish for safety, be a clod, be a dying twig. Take no chances. Make no friends. Have no family. Shoulder no responsibilities. Think as little as possible. Shrivel Tighten. Crawl inside yourself and close all the doors. Get as close to nothing as you can. Play safe—and learn how worthless is that dream of security—and be the most pathetic creature on earth....Is THAT any way to live.

A Thought

Where would we stand were we to be judged by our ability to feel another's joy and sorrow?

Some people are helped by hurts and others are hurt by helps.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

FIRST SURVEYS OF UPPER CANADA

On this date (May 30) in 1783 Samuel Holland, the surveyor general, was in Montreal on his way from Quebec to "the Upper country" to make the first official surveys of the land then unknown save to the Indians, a few French traders and some pioneer Loyalists. His instructions were to survey "from the last concessions to Cataraqui and thence to Niagara, on the north shore of Lake Ontario." It took the party the best part of a month to reach Cataraqui (now Kingston) and work was begun. Holland soon reported the country "fit for all purposes of agriculture." Holland returned to Quebec in midsummer, but deputed John Collins, after whom Collins Bay is named, "to mark out the settlements intended for the refugee Loyalists."

Before 1783 had ended Collins had outlined townships thus: 1, Kingston; 2, Ernestown; 3, Fredericksburg; and 4, Adolphustown. These were subdivided the following year. The result was that on August 21, 1784, Holland was able to write that over 3,500 square miles have been settled "in a climate preferable to any part of New England" but a country also in "which insects are in great multitudes"... Practically all the surveys in Upper Canada between 1784 and 1792 were along the St. Lawrence and Niagara Rivers and the Shore of Lake Ontario, only the front concessions being laid out.

Although Holland himself did not live in Upper Canada his name is remembered by the Holland river and Holland Landing, neither of which he ever saw. It is worth while noting that in the records concerning the early surveys No spelling varied; sometimes it was Kente, other times Quinte; sometimes Cataraqui, other times Kataraqui. It would be interesting to note how this double spelling runs through all the early history of Canada, as, for instance, Quebec and Kebec, and in some places also in New York.

GLOBE TROTTING ADDRESS HEARD

Rev. Dr. Thornton of Winnipeg Gives Splendid Talk at Millbrook.

ON CLASS ONNIVERSARY

MILLBROOK, May 30 (Examiner Correspondence). — "This is not a lecture, but a personally conducted tour round the world," said Rev. Dr. Thornton of Winnipeg, beginning his story of a three-years space of globe-trotting, on Monday evening, the event culminating the twenty-eighth anniversary of the Senior Men's Bble Class of St. Andrew's Church.

"Leaving Calcutta in the spring, we can go on to Australia where it will be the last of the winter, and then to New Zealand and find it is fall, thus missing the summer altogether," the doctor stated recounting his personal experience. Prefacing the showing of moving pictures and colored slides that made quite real the world tour, the speaker promised, "We shall sail the seven seas, and I'll guarantee that none of you will be seasick," and went on to mention what to buy, such as fly-chase in Egypt, for the flies will settle on your mouth, eyes and other parts of the face; you cannot blink or shake them off, so a fly-chase is indispensable. Turn your fingers down when hailing a taxi in Calcutta, or they will pay no attention to you. Find out the word for "thank you" in the lands you visit, and you'll make a better impression and obtain better service.

"Then you must learn to take your shoes off, perhaps twenty times a day, for you cnnot enter an Oriental home otherwise; also be prepared to be stared at constantly Do not mind being asked, How old are you? for to be old is to be honored in the Orient. We sit on the floor, of course, and they will watch carefully to see how you eat; a meal in India will mean a mound of rice in the centre of the low table, surrounded by a variety of curry, each kind hotter than the next. You eat with your fingers, but do not let the food go beyond the first joint; pick it up, touch it quickly to each kind of curry, and then flip it into your mouth, not allowing the fingers to touch the lips.

"You will have to get used to the smells and yells, for they are beyond anything you have ever dreamed of, and will take strength, and sleep, and energy out of you. You can't tell by the yells whether they are gla's or sad, whether they are pra'sing or cursing you; and you don't know the A B C of smells until you visit the Orient."

New Zealand.

Arrived at New Zealand via the movie camera, "where there is no land between it and the South Pole, you will speak of the blistering, cold south wind, and long for a balmy northerner. Houses will be found facing the north, as New Zealand has one foot on a sheep and another on a cow, these two industries being its main source of revenue, these movies of a great cattle trek, over hill, valley, and ford, will be of interest." Pictures of the four large cities of this southern continent, with the fine examples of architecture, and busy streets, were somewhat of a revelation; and the views of the "infernal regions," where boiling mud and spouting geysers make the section almost a horror, intrigued the onlookers.

The reel showed the Devil's Frog Pond in action—boiling mud and steam spouting continuously, each outburst in the form of a giant bull-frog; similarly another pond as the hot mud burst through the top crust, formed a succession of flower-like petals that made one think of roses. "No need to put on a fire to cook your food," said the speaker as the film brought to view pots and kettles using nature's streams and ponds for culinary purposes.

"Australia is literally riding on the back of a sheep, for one-half of the wool of the world is produced in this continent which is as large as Canada or the United States. What do you consider a large farm here in Cavan? Five hundred acres? Well, in Australia a small holding is 20,000 acres, and they run from that up to 125,000 acres. Every field will contain five hundred acres, and some sheep walk five miles to get a drink; it takes ten acres to support a sheep for the land is very poor. They have to breed them with long legs, and take two or three pounds of wool off the back, to make them fit for the long ranges." The moving film of great flocks of sheep, with the boundary-riders and the sagacious dog, looking after them, was of special interest, as was also that of the lumbering industry. British Columbia's forest monarchs being apparently equalled by the big fellows grown in the Australian bush.

Interesting Films.

Among the many other interesting films shown was one taken in India showing a fight between a hooded cobra and a mongoose, the little furred animal finally getting his grip and never letting go until the big snake lay dead; hanging on, the mongoose dragged his victim away into the jungle. The Sea of Galilee in a storm like it was the night our Saviour walked on the waves and said, "Peace be still"; the same blue waters on a calm day, with the fisherman lunching on the shore as on the morning after the resurrection when the risen Christ had prepared breakfast for his hungry disciples, held reverent interest; likewise the Garden of Gethsemane from which Dr. Thornton spoke of seeing th place marked where the Crucifixion took place, and other points of sacred importance.

Dr. and Mrs. Scott, now of Peterborough, were shown at their former mission station in Indore, India; and the hospital at Ham Heung in Korea, where Miss Viola Cardwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Cardwell, of Wallace Point, Otonabee River, labored as a missionary-nurse until serious eye trouble compelled her return to Canada.

Cherry blossom time in Japan, in natural colors, was just fairyland, and views in China including mission stations and streets and lovely parks and palaces in the capital, Peiping, seemed to take the audience to the spot with the narrator of the fascinating story, who spent three years on his world tour.

The way home through Europe, with a visit to Vesuvius, the excavated city of Pompeii, Athens "lovely even in its ruins," and so to London, concluding with the grave of the Unknown Warrior in Westminster Abbey, and the urge "not to talk glibly of the next war," but to bend our utmost endeavor to bring to pass that for which he died—a world at peace, and with brotherhood and good understanding prevailing."

The Community Orchestra played while the audience was gathering and led in the National Anthem at the tour's close.

What's in the Name of Canadian Cities and Towns?

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

WHITBY, ONTARIO

The township in which the town of Whitby is located was laid out in 1792, although it was many years later before a village settlement sprang up.

The town takes its name from the seaport town of Whitby, in Yorkshire, England. The name is Danish and is a contraction of Whitteby. Whitte means "white" and bye means "a village." Thus, the world means "white village."

The allusion may be to the lighthouse of the port.

EASY SESSION MINING MARKET

Most Buoyancy Appears in the Silvers and Base Metal Issues.

GOLDS STEADY.

TORONTO, May 30 (CP).—The Toronto mining market took things easy to-day, volume showing up rather small compared with the activity of the last few days. Prices, however, were steady to firm, the most buoyancy appearing in the silvers and base metals which had been depressed through several sessions. Golds were mainly steady with scattered gains offsetting moderate recessions in others.

Noranda closed 75 cents higher around 38.75. Falconbridge, Mining Corporation, Sherritt, Sudbury Basin and Coast Copper all had higher prices. In the silvers Eldorado added about 12, Castle 5 and Bear a couple of cents.

Bralorne dropped to a new low and partly recovered. Gains of 4 to 8 cents were boarded for Sylvanite, Macassa, Little Long Lac, Central Patricia, and McWatters and Siscoe.

MARKET EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, May 30 (CP).—The general undertone of Montreal Stock Exchange was improved at the close to-day and early losses gave way to gains.

International Nickel advanced ¼ point to 27 5-8 while Canadian Pacific Railway rose Æ at 10¾. Canada Cement Preferred made a gain of ¾ to 53¾.

Brazilian Traction at 9¾. Montreal Power at 27 7-8, National Breweries at 34¼, Imperial Tobacco at 13 1-8 and several others held unchanged at yesterday's closing prices.

equipped her for this work. She has already written short stories one of which was published in the Arts Undergraduates Magazine.

The accident in which Miss Senkeivitz lost her sight occurred while she was on a picnic with Elizabeth Walker and Stella Gordon and two boys.

Exploring a cabin in a forest clearing the party found a box. The boys tried to open it and an explosion resulted which killed the boys and blinded all three girls. Miss Senkeivitz also lost her right hand.

Miss Walker and Miss Gordon have made themselves self-supporting. Miss Walker in a position at a local hospital and Miss Gordon in charge of a refreshment booth in an office building.

Miss Senkeivitz studied in Braille where possible for her arts degree and was aided by other students reading to her the subjects not available in Braille.

Prisoner Is Given To Montreal Police

O'Neill Niderer arrested by Provincial Constable David Silvester at Burke's Camp in Cavan Township, was to-day turned over to a plain-clothes officer of Montreal City Police Department to face a charge of car stealing. The accused, a young man, was stated to have been involved in an accident with the car and to have afterwards attempted to dispose of it to a local firm of car wreckers.

H.M. The King Replies To Message from Local Man

A local resident who recently sent a message of congratulation to His Majesty King George V., has just received the following reply, dated from Buckingham Palace:

"The Private Secretary is commanded to convey to Mr. Rupert Brady, the King's thanks for his kind message of congratulation and good wishes on the Silver Jubilee of His Majesty's accession."

The letter addressed to Mr. Rupert Brady, 177 Douro Street, was dated May 20, 1935.

TORONTO HOGS.

TORONTO, May 30 (CP).—Bacon hog prices remained unchanged to-day at eight reporting market points. Hull showed the highest price at $9.50, and Chatham the lowest at $8.50. To-day's prices: Barrie, $9; Brantford $9.15; Chatham, $8.50; Hull $9.50; Kitchener, $9; London $9; Peterborough, $8.85; Stratford, $9.

GENERAL TONE IN INDUSTRIALS HOLDS STEADY

Wall Street Holiday Reflected in Smaller Volume Over Toronto.

OILS REACTIONARY.

TORONTO, May 30 (CP).—Disregarding a reactionary tendency in the oil leaders the general tone of the Toronto industrial market was strong to-day and gains predominated at the close. The Wall Street market holiday was reflected in smaller volume over the board. Imperial Oil and International Petroleum dropped a half point to a point net over the amount of the dividend which was off to-day but British American held firm.

International Nickel, also selling ex-dividend 15 cents closed at 27 5-8 to show a net gain of better than Æ. Consolidated Smelters was bid up late in the day to show a net advance. Brazilian, Ford "A" and C. P. R. also closed on the up side.

Utilities worked narrowly higher with good volume in Bell Telephone at unchanged prices. Canada Steamships Preferred advanced a fraction and Consumers Gas added 1¼. The steels had more losses than gains, while beverages gave a closing display of firmness. Distillers Seagrams worked ¼ point higher and Canada Malting was slightly stronger.

ELDORADO GOLD

Annual reports of both Eldorado and Gunner Gold Mines for the year ended Dec. 31st, 1934, are expected to be released to shareholders about mid-June or possibly sooner. Since the reports have been delayed for some time it is understood that a four months' statement will be forwarded along with the printed statement. Very little information has been received lately from the Great Bear Lake property of Eldorado owing to the closed season, although at last report everything was stated to be satisfactory at the mine. While a mill for the Gunner Gold Mines has been mentioned a number of times before, it is expected that the size and type of mill to be installed on the property will be announced in the annual report. Minewise, development work is progressing satisfactorily.

BRITISH CANADIAN

A special meeting of bondholders of British Canadian Mines held yesterday at the company's head office was adjourned for a period of six weeks when the proposal for reorganization will be brought up again. The meeting was postponed at the request of English and Scottish bondholders, who hold 82 per cent of the bonds. The scheme of reorganization as submitted to bondholders calls for the formation of a new company, having an authorized capital of 3,500,000 shares $1.00 par value, and the shares will be issued to bondholders, creditors and present shareholders. If ratified bondholders will receive 250 shares for accrued interest and $100 bond.

GLENORA GOLD

Glenora Gold Mines, following extended negotiations, have entered into new financial arrangements which will provide the necessary funds to resume development at the property, which adjoins Toburn on the east in the Kirkland Lake area. Glen M. Walton, secretary, in a statement to shareholders, reports that a substantial firm commitment has been made. Surface exploration during the past two seasons disclosed four principal veins and the main south break of the camp has been definitely proven to extend across the property. Lawrence B. Wright, a director of the company and who for many years was chief geologist of the Homestake Gold Mine, recently examined the work accomplished and he recommended that, prior to shaft-sinking and underground work, several deep diamond drill holes be put down to test the structure at depth. This work is now being planned and it is anticipated that the data obtained will provide necessary information for locating a suitable site for the shaft. It is planned to send out progress reports as development work proceeds.

Cricket Results

Yorkshire won from Worcestershire by an innings and 164 runs at Sheffield. Sutcliffe starred for the northern county, which declared its innings when the great first wicket batsman had scored 200 not out, and the total score stood at 445 for five wickets. Worcestershire could do little against the fast bowling of Bowes, and was dismissed for 92 and 189.

In the two innings Bowes captured 13 wickets for 98 runs. Wood, another Yorkshire batsman, scored 123 not out, while Warne and Pullen obtained 74 and 64 respectively for Worcestershire.

Close of play scres in other first-class games:

Surrey, 344 and 63 for one wicket; Gloucestershire, 265 (Lyon 58). At the Oval.

Lancashire, 122 and 195 for seven wickets (Hopwood 63); Sussex, 216 (H. Parks 107, Cox 70, Booth six wickets for 60 runs). At Hove.

Nottinghamshire, 499 for nine wickets, declared (Hardstaff 163, Knowles 73); Hampshire, 221 (Mead 117 not out) and eight for one wicket. At Nottingham.

Northamptonshire, 216 and 129 (Mayer four for 36, Paine four for 35). Warwickshire 199 and 21 for one wicket. At Birmingham.

in 1934, $3,184.59. Returns from Sunday schools in 1933 were $9,005.95 and, in 1934, $8,319.58. Returns to the Missionary and Maintenance Fund for the year to May 31, 1934, in the Conference were $19,381.36 and, to May 28, 1935, $17,277.84.

"We have come to the end of these years in a difficult financial situation. We have come to the point when something must be done. We can't go through another ten year." This was the challenge of Rev. G. W. Rivers, as he spoke to Ackerman's Missionary and Maintenance Committee report.

"I think this drop in revenues of the church is semblematic of something wrong in the church. Not all this drop can be attributed to the depression. Despite our great special effort for a five per cent. increase last year our revenues decreased $128,000."

Offers Recommendations

Rev. Rivers offered several recommendations toward a solution. He said the churches must dig deeper for their funds. They have been gathering money on the surface, appealing to church loyalty rather than definite obligations, he said. He declared people must be brought mentally up to date so that opposition to missions may be broken down. The whole system of collection ought to be put on a higher plan, he said, speaking of the old tithe obligations. The churches are the trustees of all God has given man, he contended. Further, he claimed that church monies must be raised more efficiently.

Treasurer Present.

Rev. Dr Robert Laird of Toronto, treasurer of the United Church of Canada, voiced alarm at the financial outlook. "We need the money and we need the money desperately," he declared. He spoke of tremendous carrying charges on sums in six figures which the Church has been borrowing. He pleaded that the churches begin to operate their finances on a business basis.

The high official told of plans being made for a nation-wide celebration of the United Church's tenth anniversary on June 9 and June 16. He asked the celebrations be not forgotten immediately, that the Church carry the spirit of thanksgiving throughout the year.

As he concluded the presentation of a preliminary finance committee report, Rev. R. T. Richards of Napanee, conference treasurer, was returned to his office for the coming year. Suggestion of his re-appointment was made President the Rev. Dr. Semple and the delegates concurred unanimously.

In his report, Rev. Richards stated that the finances of the conference itself are in a "fairly wholesome" condition. He reported that the mileage rate for delegates attending the conference has been set at 6 cents. The rate was 7 cents a mile last year.

Dr. Sockman Speaks.

Rev. Dr. Ralph Sockman of New York City addressed the Conference on the "breadth" of the modern minister, following the opening devotional exercises in the morning. He said the heat of controversy between liberals of Christianity and the conservatives has died down in the modern day except for occasional recrudescenses here and there.

"If we can keep the temper of our discussion Christ-like, I think we can find the Christ-like truth," he declared, speaking of the controversy.

He said the Church in the United States is under fire from two groups. Labor groups claim the Church is the organized propoganda agency of the privileged and the privileged are claiming the Church is the propaganda agency of the labor groups.

"The tragedy of it is this, that we so often lend ourselves to the color of the group to which we are preaching. If we are followers of Christ we should be interpreters of one group to the other." He asserted the Church must be wary of being used as a tool to put over the propaganda of any particular group. No single party, group or sect has all the truth, he declared.

Continuing, Dr. Sockman said Jesus always put personality above propaganda. If He had not, He could not have been the Saviour of Men.

He declared that he, no more than any other minister, is content to train boys in Christianity only to see them go out to be deformed by an oppressive industrial system or mutilated through the war system, but warned that too many ministers are directing their messages solely against these systems. Many of those ministers have no message for the individual, he said.

Turning to another matter, Dr. Sockman declared the longer established Protestant churches are failing to supply an element of comfort to their peoples. New groups such as the Christian Science sect, are supplying this lack and winning members away from the other churches, he announced.

LONE GUNMAN

He said neighbors were aroused by the noise, and the robber left hurriedly.

Hooker, Woodslee Service Station proprietor, related he was aroused shortly after three o'clock this morning by some person pumping gasoline. The thief was working at the right side of the car.

Hooker approached at the left side and attempted to shut off the running motor. It was then, he stated, the robber levelled a rifle at him and told him to stand back. He finished filling the gas tank of the car and also a number of gallon cans carried in the rumble seat.

He estimated the thief took 13 gallons of gasoline before he drove towards Cottam.

Spurred on by reports of an attempted hold-up on the Stratford-Mitchell highway east of the latter place posses of Provincial police pressed the search.

For three days and three nights Provincial police, assisted by district officers have kept up the dogged man hunt.

Newmarket Car.

It is believed Hyatt is travelling in a maroon colored car of late model bearing License No. EN-165, stolen from Newmarket Tuesday.

Hyatt is said to be armed with a sawed-off shotgun besides two revolvers.

Howard Wright, farmer living near Hensall, accompanied by his young son, was driving toward Mitchell from Stratford. As he rounded the last bend east of Mitchell he noticed a maroon colored car parked by the side of the road. About 25 feet in front of the car stood a man who flagged the approaching car. Wright slowed down and as he drew up alongside the parked car another man stepped into the rays of the headlight of the parked car.

Wielded Revolver.

Wright's foot went to the accelerator and he sped to Mitchell, where he notified Traffic Officer Jack Callendar and Night Constable Murray of Mitchell. He was positive it was a revolver the bandit wielded.

Word was immediately sent to Stratford and shortly later Provincial police arrived in Mitchell where the main street buzzed with activity. The posses started out on the side roads. They came across parked cars and some cars travelling along the Mitchell-Stratford highway were stopped by the officers.

The police are concentrating in the Mitchel area and are hopeful they will soon catch up with Hyatt.

Escaped May 19.

Hyatt, former convict of the Kingston Penitentiary, escaped from the Frontenac Jail May 19 along with Leo Dionne and Bernard Leavey.

The trio made their break when they smashed through a cell wall, pried open the door of the cell and waylaid the turnkey when he came on his rounds. They got the keys of the jail and went over the wall to freedom.

Dionne was captured a couple of hours later while trying to get to a boat in the harbor here, while Leavey was apprehended in Listowel yesterday.

Hyatt, at time of escape here, was awaiting extradition proceedings. It was alleged by United States Government he had escaped from a chain gang in Virginia, where he was serving a term for housebreaking. He was due to appear before Judge Lavell last Saturday.

Officials of Kingston Penitentiary said they regarded Hyatt as more or less of a dangerous character. Built like an athlete, Hyatt, it is said, would probably put up a fight before being apprehended again.

Campbellford Army Observe Anniversary

CAMPBELLFORD, May 29 (Examiner Correspondence).—Half a century ago the Salvation Army became established under the direction of Captain Charlotte Ogilvie in Campbellford. The first meetings were held in a building on Rear street, where the Parish Hall now stands and later held in the apartments over John A. Irwin's store, and as the attendance grew, a temple was built on Bridge street. Mrs. W. Bakes and Mrs. M. Frederick were among the first converts.

Unlike many other places the "Army" enjoyed comparative freedom here, and were never molested. In the celebration of the Golden Jubilee a splendid program has been provided, starting with a musical festival which will be held at St. John's United Church on Saturday, June 1st, at 8.15 p.m. at which Adjutant N. Warrander of Peterborough will preside and address the gathering. The Peterborough Temple Band will also take part in the ceremony.

On Sunday morning, June 2, at 11 o'clock, a Holiness meeting will be held in the Salvation Army Temple. At 3 p.m. of the same day, a musical program will be given in the public school grounds; 7 p.m., Salvation meeting at the Temple, and at 8.15 o'clock (after church) a musical service will be held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, at which the Rev. Simpson Black will preside. The general public are cordially invited to attend all the meetings.

JOHNSON MOVES TO THE RESCUE

Manufacturers and retailers were kicking over the traces of minimum wages, maximum work and unfair price competition codes.

From the trench of the industrialists, President Alfred J. Sloan, Jr., of General Motors Corporation, said the Supreme Court wrecking of NRA was "a vital step forward in promoting a sane industrial recovery."

A statement he issued emphasized General Motors did not contemplate a downward revision of wages, and added:

"Sooner or later, we are bound to recognize that regimentation and bureaucracy have no part in our national recovery. They can produce only one result—lowered efficiency, increased cost and a reduced standard of living."

Characteristic of the code-unshackling of many lesser producers throughout the country was the action of two mills in North Carolina. The Boger and Crawford Spinning Mill announced plans to run two 50-hour shifts beginning next week. The Piedmont Shirt Company announced a 25 per cent wage reduction and the increase of work hours from 36 to 40 and 44 per week. Many employees of the shirt company did not answer the call of the factory whistle.

Industrial associations in a number of lines appealed for voluntary efforts to maintain wages and employment. The Chamber of Commerce and the Manufacutrers' Association asked that all industry voluntarily live up to code standards.

Selfish 10 Per Cent.

In the eyes of Gen. Johnson, however, such a course was "utterly impossible" because of what he termed the selfish 10 per cent in the "chiselling fringe."

"The selfish 10 per cent under our competitive system," he warned, "can always kill the wages of the higher-minded 90 per cent down to their own levels unless somewhere there is a power to protect decency."

In his address he indicated the "power to protect decency" he had in his agile mind in these words:

A Possible Way Out

"It will be possible for NRA to work out,, for the consideration of Congress, a set of precise definitions of fair practices (in industry and retailing), and then to let some such administrative body, under the President's direction, say what practices in any industry would fall within or without the rule or standard set up by Congress itself."

At first glance that appeared a logical way of complying with a major point in the Supreme Court's edict. The court found a part of the law was unconstitutional because it left to one man—Mr. Roosevelt—the task of prescribing rules to govern business, instead of Congress retaining that task for itself.

In free-flowing words, Gen. Johnson presented a lucid picture of the unbridled competition he feared might return, along with child labor and sweat shops. Its outline was:

"Some shrewd (Northern) Yankee operator, observing the low cost of labor in Birmingham, Alabama, proceeds to set up there a gray iron foundry to produce at starvation wages a simple product such as cast-iron stoves. His cost is so low his product can invade the old and well established stove industry of Michigan many hundreds of miles away and leave it no alternative except to go out of business, or to reduce its own wage rates to a figure at which labor can not exist under the higher costs of living in the north."

RANSOM MONEY IN SECRET PLACE

be definitely identified in the darkness.

Titcomb entered his own car and drove home. The couple, in the large Weyerhaeuser sedan, eluded newspapermen and disappeared in the direction of American Lake, exclusive summer home colony site.

Two New Contact Men

Sources close to the Weyerhaeusers said two new contact men were named after failure to complete negotiations on time. The informant said the boy's father would not be present at the meeting with the kidnappers. The new contact men were believed to be Titcomb and Charles Ingram, assistant general manager of the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company.

Dr. A. C. Stewart, Tacoma psychiatrist, expressed the opinion the ransom letter was written by "at least three professional kidnappers" of low grade mentality who would not hesitate to carry out their threats.

"The text reads as if one person sat at a typewriter and several others took turns dictating the contents and making suggestions," said Dr. Stewart.

Other investigators have made similar hints after careful study of the nate.

CAMPBELLFORD

NEWS ITEMS FOR THE TRENT TOWN DISTRICT

Mrs. Charles E. Bonnycastle announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Doris S. Bonnycastle, to Mr. Carman G. Knox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Knox, of Norwood, the marriage to take place in June.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Moore, of Long Branch, Mrs. S. Wands and Miss Alice Wands of Hamilton and Mrs. Reeves of Toronto were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kelleher.

Miss Gertrude Templeton, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., was the recent guest of Mr. W. J. Armstrong and family.

Rev. and Mrs. Harry L. Turner, who have been spending the past two months in California, have returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Skitch, of Calgary, are spending a few days with Mr Edward Skitch. They are en route home after a visit to New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Kelly were visitors in town on Tuesday, the guests of Major and Mrs. J. M. Bygott of Sebastopol Street. Mr. Kelly, a former superintendent of the C. N. R., is now retired and residing in Ottawa, and was a resident of this town during the early days of his long railroad career.

ALBERT COLLEGE SHOWS SURPLUS

was instituted successfull during the past year. Eighty per cent of the students in the course passed, he reported.

"If Albert College closes its doors to-day it will have repaid its debt to the people of the United Church and the Kingdom of God," he asserted. "I trust that the college will continue to send out outstanding men."

He reported that the Christian objectives of the institution's program are being met. All but four of the students at present enrolled have "committed themselves to Christ," he declared.

As he concluded his report, Rev. A. S. Kerr of Bowmanville and Rev. M. I. Robinson of Athens sponsored a resolution of appreciation of the report and the work of Rev. Howard. Rev. Howard was appointed to his position last Fall and thus, as a newcomer to this conference, was welcomed.

Rev. R. T. Richards of Napanee, conference treasurer, appealed to the delegates for voluntary contributions toward the aid of underpaid ministers, particularly those in northern charges which do not benefit from the home mission funds. Sixteen men in the field are receiving less than $1,000 a year and yet are obliged to operate automobiles to carry out their duties, he informed the conference.

President Installed

The vote total for Rev. Dr. Semple of Belleville, who was elected the new president of the conference was announced, as 176 out of 292 cast. As retiring president Rev. George C. McQuade of Oshawa vacated the chair, Dr. Temple was garbed in his robes of office and installed in the chair by Rev. E. W. Rowland chairman of the Belleville Presbytery, and Rev. Robert Hall, also of Belleville.

The new leader expressed his appreciation of the honor shown him. "I trust that I shall accept the presidency first in a spirit of appreciation and secondly in a spirit of humility," he said. He spoke of the generosity of the Conference toward him as a stranger to the conference. He began his career as an Irish Methodist and was ordained in Western Canada eighteen years ago. A charge at Smith's Falls preceded his present charge at Belleville.

He paid a tribute to the United Church as a great steadying influence to the nation in the present times of distress. "I trust the leadership of the church will meet the needs of these times."

On the motion of Rev. McQuade, seconded by Rev. H. W. Foley of Springbrook, Rev. James E. Beckel of Napanee was returned to office for another year as secretary of the conference.

Other Conferences.

United Churchmen meeting at Stratford yesterday arbitrated and settled a little "war" of their own in debating a resolution on peace and war, as two other conferences of the same church continued. Hamilton Conference met at Guelph.

Committee report at the London Conference in Stratford presented a resolution which declared it "hypocrisy to boast of a Christian civilization in the face of a nationalism which demands the subjugation of conscience and the denial of human brotherhood."

Concern at the prospect of another war should be taken, it was urged. Rev. T. L. Green, London, suggested an amendment urging not hesitate to carry out their threats.

"The text reads as if one person sat at a typewriter and several others took turns dictating the contents and making suggestions," said Dr. Stewart.

Other investigators have made similar hints after careful study of the nate.

(Lib., Cartier-Montreal) objected to the House considering legislation which the Minister of Justice considered of doubtful validity. Mr. Guthrie, on the other hand, maintained it was his duty to lay the measure before the House because the opinion of eminent counsel consulted was merely that its validity was doubtful and not that it was invalid. The House might decide the Bill should go through and stand until challenged in the courts.

Convictions Difficult

Mr. Guthrie said the officers of the Department of Justice and two eminent counsel called in to advise them, W. N. Tilley, K.C., of Toronto and Aime Geoffrion, K.C., of Montreal, had come to the conclusion the sections were of doubtful validity as far as the constitutional powers of the Dominion parliament were concerned. He also gave it as his opinion it would be difficult if not impossible to secure convictions under them.

Mr. Jacobs said the minister should not introduce a bill and give it a black eye at the same time. He had never heard of such a thing in parliamentary proceedings before. The minister should withdraw the sections as they had been discussed.

If the opinion had been definite that the sections were ultra vires he would not have presented them, said Mr. Guthrie. But as it was merely that their validity was doubtful he felt it his duty to present the recommendations of the commission to the house. He refused to withdraw them. It might be the house would consider the sections should stand until they were challenged in the courts.

Deceiving People

"I never saw such a miserable exhibition as we have had this afternoon," said Mr. MacKenzie. He added if the government had called in legal opinion on some of its other reform bills the result would have been the same. It was an insult to the intelligence of parliament to ask it to pass legislation which the minister of justice with all his experience could not say was sound. The government was trying to deceive the public because of pressure in its own party.

Parliament made it a crime to steal from a store and it should be able to make it a crime for an employer to steal from an employee, said Mr. Kennedy. The offences set out in the clause dealing with employers and employees all dealt with one matter, a deliberate cheating of the employee.

Where there was a minimum wage for girls of $10 a week, Mr. Kennedy said, and an employer by cajolery or deceit induced them to work for $7, he was stealing $3 a week from each girl. Where an employer forced or induced his employees to work longer than the maximum hours he was stealing the additional time from them. The same principle prevailed where an employer falsified an employment record and where he punched a time clock with a deceitful intent.

Mr. Kennedy said the Commission had heard incontrovertible evidence of a superintendent of a factory with the knowledge of the owner punching the time clock for the employees at quitting time and forcing them to work several hours longer.

It was a criminal offence for a working girl to go into a store and steal a loaf of bread or a pair of stockings. Parliament had jurisdiction to punish it but the Opposition claimed it had no jurisdiction to punish a man in authority who deliberately stole money and labor from defenseless workers.

"Miserable Exhibition"

If there was any "miserable exhibition," the Winnipeg member went on, it was that presented by Mr. MacKenzie when he sought to raise every device of the law and the constitution to prevent the enactment of reform legislation. He pleaded with the House to remember the plight of those the measure was intended to benefit, to remember that the (letter of the constitution) killeth but the spirit giveth life" and to allow the amendment to pass.

The first two measures based on the price spreads report went through the House without a serious hitch. They were bills amending the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act and the Weights and Measures Act. The latter increases the penalties for short weights and the former enlarges the powers on the minister of labor to intervene in industrial disputes.

Mr. Kennedy joined with Labor members in expressing the opinion the Labor Disputes Measure should go further but Mr. Guthrie said a full implementation of the Price Spreads report would not be within the powers of parliament. The bill contains a proviso limiting its operations to industries under the jurisdiction of the Parliament of Canada. This, Mr. Guthrie said, would include railways, telephones, telegraph and shipping industries and companies operating under dominion charters.

House Adjourned

Parliament stands adjourned today observing the Feast of the Ascension. On Friday the budget resolutions and estimates will be considered and on Monday, the King's birthday, the House will sit.

An early closing of parliament will be facilitated by the Government, Prime Minister R. B. Bennett told the House.

He said he knew of no new legislation to be brought in apart from some further bills based on the report of the Price Spreads Commission and the proposed Grain Board bill. He hoped all these measures would be before the House on Friday.

[illegible] Leader MacKenzie King asked Mr. Bennett about the Government's intentions, and said he believed the people were more interested in an early election than in having the members enact legislation at such a late stage in the life of Parliament.

The prime minister said the Government was just as anxious as Mr. King to bring the session to an end. As to the election if those who had come of age during the year were to be allowed to vote the election could not be held until after the voters' lists had been revised.

Obituary

MRS. JANET MASSEY

WARKWORTH, May 30 (Examiner Correspondence).—Janet Halladay, wife of the late George Massey, died at her home in Percy township Monday afternoon. Deceased, who was in her eighty-first year, was born in Wales but came to Canada in infancy with her parents. The early part of her life was spent in the vicinity of Roseneath. After her marriage in 1875 she came to Percy township, where she has lived ever since.

She is survived by two daughters and one son, Mrs. Edward Moy, Belleville, and Mrs. Charles Brickman, Rednersville, and David, Warkworth; also two brothers, James Halladay, Mountain View and John Halladay of Minnesota.

MRS. JAMES BAKER.

NORWOOD, May 31 (Examiner Correspondence).—The funeral of the late Mrs. James Baker was held from the home of her son, Douglas Baker, Hastings Road, on Tuesday afternoon. She was in her 88th year. The respect and esteem in which the deceased was held was evidenced by the large assembly of friends and acquaintances who gathered to pay their last tribute. Born in Belmont Township, of sturdy Scotch ancestry, she knew well the hardships and difficulties of pioneer life, having seen a great deal of the virgin forest changed into cleared farms, and had taken an active part in all the duties necessary in pioneer life.

Her husband predeceased her three years ago. Two sons survive, Roy of Dummer and Douglas of Asphodel, also six grandsons; a third son died early in life.

The funeral service at the house and grave was conducted by the Rev. A. C. Reeves of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, of which the deceased was a member.

Interment was made in Norwood Cemetery.

JOSEPH GARDNER.

NORWOOD, May 30 (Examiner Correspondence).—The funeral of the late Joseph Gardner was held from his late home on Spring Street Tuesday afternoon. Friends and relatives were present from Peterborough, Belleville, Lakefield, Warsaw and Havelock, as well as the surrounding district. Deceased was in his 76th year, and although in poor health for some time, was confined to his bed only a few days before his death.

He was one of a family of five sons and three daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gardner, pioneers of Dummer Township, all of whom are deceased except one sister, Mrs. Eliza Humphries of Dummer.

He lived all his life in this community, where he carried on farming until his retirement to Norwood eleven years ago. A man of pleasing personality, genial disposition, a model neighbor, sympathetic and kind to the needy, won for him a host of friends, which was exemplified by the large gathering who were present to pay their last tribute to a good man.

The service was conducted by the Rev. A. S. Cleland of the United Church, of which the deceased was a member.

Surviving are his wife, two sons, Even of Deseronto and Dr. Geared Gardner of Havelock, and two daughters, Mrs. John McConnell and Miss Edith of Norwood; also three grandchildren. Another son, Rees, predeceased him six years ago.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. George and Alexander Ross, George Parker, Wellington Burgess, Fred Stewart and Eb. Jenkins.

Interment was made in Norwood Cemetery.

DAWSON TIGHE

WARSAW, May 30.—The sudden death of Dawson Tighe, 73, occurred in Warsaw yesterday. He was 73 years of age and is believed to have succumbed to an unexpected heart ailment.

Mr. Tighe was born near White Lake and farmed for many years on the 4th line of Dummer. He married Maggie Allen. Six years ago he sold his farm and has been living in retirement, since then. Two daughters and one son—Mrs. Edward Bell, Warsaw, and Mrs. Edward Earl, Wilberforce, and Percy of Wilberforce—are among the survivors.

The funeral is to be held tomorrow (Friday).

GEORGE PATTERSON.

HASTINGS, May 30.—(Examiner Correspondence.)— The death occurred in Hamilton on Monday night of George Patterson after an illness of five months.

The deceased was a former teller in the local branch of the Bank of Toronto. Last December his health failed and he left for his home in Hamilton, where he died.

While a resident of Hastings, the late Mr. Patterson, who was known by all as George, made a host of friends both young and old who were deeply shocked at the news of his death. He was a popular member in local young people's activities and was a member of the Clerks' softball team.

GRILL GIRLS COP 28 TO 19 VICTORY

Winners Stage Great Comeback to Get the Nod—Campbellford League.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 30.—(Examiner Correspondence.) — With ideal weather conditions and before the best crowd of the season, Mrs. Ed. Grill's girls defeated the Lilliam Bush team by a score of 28-19. Up to the first half of the fith innings it looked as though the game was over, the score board showing 19-12 in favor of the Bush girls. Theone McArthur then replaced Sadie Trotter in the pitcher's box with very definite results.

Mary (("Hon") Montgomery was the outstanding player for the losers, while the honors were fairly evenly divided for the winners.

The line-ups:

Grills—Pat Poulton, c.; Sadie Trotter, p.; Helen Montgomery, 1b; Goldes McArthur, 2b; Margaret Grills, 3b; Theone McArthur, ss; Margie Ellis, lf; Maisie Scott, rf; Betty Mowat, cf.

Bush—Lillian Bush, c; Mrs. Ernie Sutton, p; Hon. Montgomery, 1b; Lottie Poulton, 2b; May Peake, 3b; Isabel McGregor, ss; Doris Smith, rf; Grace Wicker, cf; Ilene Richardson, lf.

Umpires— Don Owens at plate; Charlie Couch and Bill Sarginson on bases.

Owen Hendy is organizing a third team and requests that any girls who are interested in the game report at the school grounds on Monday evening next, June 3rd, at 6.30 for practice, or in the meantime hand their names in to Keith Bailey, president of the league.

TWO MEN ARE KILLED.

Lawrence Meets Sherif Abdulla Son of Hussein

REBELLION LED BY SHERIF PROVED UNSATISFACTORY; IMMEDIATE HELP SOUGHT

Colonel Lawrence Describes Meeting With Son of Hussein.

SENT TO FEISAL'S CAMP

By T. E. LAWRENCE

When at last we anchored in Jiddah's outer harbor, off the white town hung between the blazing sky and its reflection in the mirage which swept and rolled over the wide lagoon, then the heat of Arabia came out like a drawn sword and struck us speechless. It was a midday of October of 1916; and the noon sun had, like moonlight, put to sleep the colours. There were only lights and shadows, the white houses and black gaps of streets; in front, the pallid lustre of the base shimmering upon the inner harbour; behind, the dazzle of league after league of featureless sand, running up to an edge of low hills faintly suggested in the far away mist of heat.

Just north of Jiddah was a second group of black-white buildings moving up and down like pistons in the mirage, as the ship rolled at anchor and the intermittent wind shifted the heat waves in the air.

Colonel Wilson, British representative with the new Arab state, had sent his launch to meet us; and we had to go ashore to learn the reality of the men levitating in that mirage. We walked past the white masonry of the still-building water gate, and through the oppressive alley of the food market on our way to the Consulate. In the air, from the men to the dates and back to the meat, squadrons of flies like particles of dust danced up and down the sunshafts which stabbed into the darkest corners of the booths through torn places in the wood and sackcloth awnings overhead. The atmosphere was like a bath.

Waited For Abdulla

We reached the Consulate; and there in a shaded room with an open lattice behind him sat Wilson, prepared to welcome the sea breeze, which had lagged these last few days. He told us that Sheriff Abdulla, second son of Hussein, Grand Sherif of Mecca, was just then entering the town. Ronald Storrs and myself had come down the Red Sea from Cairo to meet Abdulla. It was suspicious that we had arrived together, for Mecca, the Sherifian capital, was inaccessible to Christians, and such business as Storrs could not well be transacted by telephone. My presence must be put down to joy-riding: but Storrs, Oriental Secretary in Cairo, was the confidential assistant of Sir Henry McMahon in all the delicate negotiations with the Sheriff of Mecca. The happy union of his local knowledge, with the experience and acumen of Sir Henry, and the sympathy of Clayton, so impressed the Sherif, that that very difficult person accepted their guarded undertakings as sufficient assurance for beginning his Revolt against Turkey, and kept faith with the British authorities throughout a war-history which teemed with doubtful and hazardous situations. Sir Henry was England's right-hand man in the Middle East till the Arab Revolt was an established event. Sir Mark Skyes was the left hand: and if the foreign Office had kept itself and its hands mutually informed our reputation for honesty would not have suffered as it did.

Abdulla Flushed With Success

Abdulla, on a white mare, came to us softly, with a bevy of richly-armed slaves on foot about him, through the silent respectful salutes of the town. He was flushed with his success as Taif, and happy. I was seeing him for the first time, while Storrs was an old friend, and on the best of terms; yet, before long, as they spoke together, I began to suspect him of a constant cheerfulness. His eyes had a confirmed twinkle; and though only thirty-five he was putting on flesh. It might be due to too much laughter. He jested with all comers in most easy fashion: yet, when we fell into serious talk, the veil of humor seemed to fade away, as he chose his words, and argued shrewdly. Of course, he was in discussion with Storrs, who demanded a high standard from his opponent.

I was playing for effect, watching, criticizing him. The Sherif's rebellion had been unsatisfactory for the last few months (standing still, which, with an irregular war, was the prelude to disaster); and my suspicion was that its lack was leadership: not intellect, that would set the desert on fire. My visit was mainly to find the yet unknown master-spirit of the affair, and measure his capacity to carry the revolt to the goal I had conceived for it. As our conversation continued, I became more and more sure that Abdulla was too balanced, too cool, too humorous to be a prophet: especially the armed prophet who, if history be true, succeeded in revolutions. His value would come perhaps in the peace after success.

Storrs brought me into the discussion by asking his views on the state of the campaign. Abdulla at once grew serious, and said that he wanted to urge upon the British their immediate and very personal concern in the matter, which he tabulated so:

It would only remain for his father to put himself at the head of his own people of Mecca, and to die fighting before the Holy City.

But our neglect to cut the Hejaz Railway, the Turks had been able to collect transport and supplies for the reinforcement of Medina.

Feisal had been driven back from the town; and the enemy was preparing a mobile column of all arms for an advance in Rabegh.

The Arabs in the hills across their road were by our neglect too weak in supplies, machine-guns and artillery to defend them long.

Hussein Mabeirig, chief of the Rabegh Hard, had joined the Turks. If the Medina column advanced, the Harb would join it.

Would Defend Mecca

At this moment the telephone rang: the Grand Sherif wanted to speak to Abdulla. He was told of the point our conversation had reached, and at once confirmed that he would so act in the extremity. The Turks would enter Mecca over his dead body. The telephone rang off; and Abdulla, smiling a little, asked to prevent such a disaster, that a British brigade, if possible of Moslem troops, be kept at Suez with transport to rush it to Rabegh as soon as the Turks debouched from Medina in their attack. What did we think of the proposal?

I said that I would represent his views to Egypt, but that the British were reluctant to spare troops from the vital defence of Egypt (though he was not to imagine that the Canal was in any danger from the Turks) and, still more, to send Christians to defend the people of the Holy City against their enemies; as some Moslems in India, who considered the Turkish Government had an imprescriptable right to the Haramein, would misrepresent our motives and action. I thought that I might perhaps urge his opinions more powerfully if I was able to report on the Rabegh question in the light of my own knowledge of the position and local feeling. I would also like to see Feisal, and talk over with him his needs and the prospects of a prolonged defence of his hills by the tribesmen if we strengthened them materially. I would like to ride from Rabegh up the Sultani road towards Medina as far as Feisal's camp.

Storrs then came in and supported me with all his might, urging the vital importance of full and early information from a trained observer for the British Commander-in-Chief in Egypt. Abdulla went to the telephone and tried to get his father's consent to my going up country. The Sherif viewed the proposal with grave distrust. Abdulla argued the point, made some advantage, and transferred the mouthpiece to Storrs, who turned all his diplomacy on the old man. Storrs in full blast was a delight to listen to in the mere matter of Arabic speech, and also a lesson to every Englishman alive of how to deal with suspicious or unwilling Orientals. It was nearly impossible to resist him for more than a few minutes, and in this case also he had his way.

The Sherif asked again for Abdulla, and authorised him to write to Ali, and suggest that if he thought fit, and if conditions were normal, I might be allowed to visit Feisal; and Abdulla, under Storrs' influence, transformed this guarded message into direct written instructions to Ali to mount me as well and as quickly as possible, and convey me, by sure hand, to Feisal's camp. This being all I wanted and half what Storrs wanted, we adjourned for lunch.

Saw the Sight

Jeddah had pleased us, on our way to the Consulate; so after lunch when it was a little cooler, or at least when the sun was not so high, we wandered out to see sights under guidance of Young, Wilson's assistant, a man who found good in many old things, but little good in things now being made.

It was indeed a remarkable town. The streets were alleys, wood roofed in the main bazaar, but elsewhere open to the sky in the little gap between the tops of the lofty white-walled houses. These were built four or five stories high, of coral rag tied with square beams and decorated by wide bow-windows running from ground to roof in grey wooden panels. There was no glass in Jidda, but a profusion of good lattices, and some very delicate shallow chiselling on the panels of window casings. The doors were heavy two-leaved slabs of teakwood, deeply carved, often with wickets in them; and they had rich hinges and ring-knockers of hammered iron. There was much moulded or cut plastering, and on the older houses fine stone heads and jambs to the windows looking on the inner courts.

The style of architecture was like crazy Elizabethan half-timber work, in the elaborate Cheshire fashion, but gone gim-crack to an incredible degree. House-fronts were fretted, pierced and pargetted till they looked as though cut out of cardboard for a romantic stage-setting. Every story jutted, every window leaned one way or other; often the very walls sloped. It was like a dead city, so clean underfoot, and so quiet. Its winding, even streets were floored with damp sand solidified by time as silent to the tread as any carpet. The lattice and wall-returns deadened all reverberation of voice. There were no loud dogs, no crying children; indeed, except in the bazaar, still half asleep, there were few wayfarers of any kind; and the rare people we did meet, all thin and as it were wasted by disease, with scarred, hairless faces and screwed-up eyes, slipped past us quickly and cautiously, not looking at us. Their skimp, white robes, shaven polls with little skull-caps, red cotton shoulder-shawls, and bare feet were so same as to be almost a uniform.

The atmosphere was oppressive, deadly. There seemed no life in it. It was not burning hot, but held a moisture and sense of great age and exhaustion such as seemed to belong to no other place: not a passion of smells like Smyrna, Naples or Marseilles, but a feeling of long use, of the exhaltations of many people, of continued bath-heat and sweat. One would say that for years Jidda had not been swept through by a firm breeze: that its streets kept their air from year's end to year's end, from the day they were built for so long as the houses should endure. There was nothing in the bazaars to buy.

RELATIVE STANDING OF TRAVEL CLUB CANDIDATES

RACE FOR PRIZES CLOSE
Smallest Of Margin Separates Many Members.

The following standing of the Travel Club members represents their standing according to the amount of subscription money turned in by each participant up to the close of the second period which closed last Saturday night. It is most remarkable to witness the keen competition between the different members. Not only is the contest for the free trips an exciting one among the candidates it is truly a contest of "popular choice" for the supporters of the many participants are right in there doing everything possible to bring the high laurels to their communities for their candidates and their own district's gratification. The Examiner never realized at the outset of the Travel Club that so much keen competition would be aroused over the free New York-Bermuda Tours. The Travel Club staff is kept busy almost every hour of the day tabulating the millions of votes that pour in weekly for the Travel Club members. Both members and their friends may rest assured that The Examiner will leave not a stone unturned to make happy every day that the lucky ladies will spend holidaying in New York and Bermuda as guests of The Examiner.

STANDING

	Votes
Miss Marjorie Frankish, R.R. No. 2, Lakefield	3,286,750

Mrs. Theo. Douglas, Warsaw	2,200,500
Miss Helen Thomas, Campbellford	2,200,500

Less than a two year's subscription would change the standing for Miss Lobb and Miss Wood, while a very slight marginal difference would place Miss Thomas in a higher order.

OTHER CONTESTANTS

The following contestants are by no means out of the running for the free tours. The race is a decidedly close one and, startling as it may apund, the element of competition is so keen and the race so close between even more than one of the following candidates for higher honors, that the best estimate of the ultimate outcome of the Travel Club competition would be but a mere guess. Only the end of the campaign will reveal the names of the winning ladies. Up to now, at the half way mark, it is still anybody's race.

HEINZ "57" Popularity Contest

$5,000.00 in CASH PRIZES

for those who can select the 15 most popular varieties

THE famous Heinz 57 Varieties of foods are on sale throughout Canada. Naturally, some of these sell in larger quantities than others. Which do you think are the most popular? See the list below and select the fifteen which you think enjoy the largest sales. Then place a number in the square opposite each which will be your estimate as to the sales standing of that variety.

For instance if you think Heinz Tomato Juice is the largest seller put a "1" in the square opposite that variety. If you think Heinz Chili Sauce is the second largest seller, put the figure "2" in the square opposite that product. If you consider Heinz Bottled Cider Vinegar the third largest seller put the figure "3" in the square opposite its name, and so on until your 15 selections are numbered.

Remember, you don't have to place a number in the squares opposite the entire 57 varieties. Select fifteen only and number them in the order of their popularity according to your estimation.

Enter this contest—see the simple conditions below. You may earn a handsome cash prize.

57 GRAND CASH PRIZES AND 275 OTHER CASH PRIZES TOTALLING $5000

First Prize—goes to the person whose list is nearest correct	$1,000

ADDRESS: "57" POPULARITY CONTEST, H. J. HEINZ COMPANY, 115 GEORGE ST. TORONTO, ONT. (6798)

BETHANY.

A very pleasant party attended Miss Ruth Hamilton, Reg.N. to the Union Station, Toronto, to wish her bon voyage, and spend a short time together before she started on the first lap of her journey into the Far North, where she will spend the next four years in missionary work under Bishop Fleming of the Anglican Church. The party was largely from Bethany.

Mrs. Edwin Veale and daughter Mona, Reg.N., of St. Catharines, are spending a short time with Mrs. Veale's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Porteous.

Mr. and Mrs. Wareham and Mrs. Taylor of London, Ontario, spent the 24th of May with Mrs. W. McCartney.

Iolene Holden of St. Hilda's College, Toronto, is holidaying at her home here.

Miss Pauline Thorndyke of Toronto is spending a few days with her parents.

Results of the entertainment staged unde the auspices of the Athletic Association on May 24th netted the society $175.00 after all expenditures.

Government Is Urged to Abolish Beverage Rooms

REV. W. WALKER NEW MODERATOR OF BAPTIST BODY

Baptist Association Goes on Record as Strongly Opposed to Beverage Rooms.

CONFERENE CLOSES.

Rev. C. R. Duncan of McMaster University Surprise Visitor at Two-day Gathering.

Going on record as strongly opposed to beverage rooms in the province of Ontario and also affirming its belief in the necessity for reciprocal disarmament as a means towards international security and peace, the Peterborough Association of Baptist Church closed its 133rd annual meeting Wednesday night after a two-day session held in the Park Street Baptist Church and attended by a goodly number of delegates from the eighteen Baptist churches included in the Peterborough Association.

The Rev. W. B. Walker of Lakefield was elected as Moderator, succeeding the Rev. G. E. Downing of Norwood.

Other officers for the ensuing year include the Vice Moderator, Gordon Bray of Belleville, and the Clerk of the Association, the Rev. R. D. Wright, M.A., pastor of Gilmour Memorial Church.

Representatives to the boards and conventions of the denomination: the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, Home Missions; the Rev. G. E. Downing of Norwood, Foreign Missions; the Rev. G. K. Tyler of Park Street Baptist Church the Grand Ligne Mission in Quebec; the Rev. H. E. Morphy of Cobourg Western Missions; the Rev. W. B. Walker of Lakefield, Superannuation; the Rev. A. G. Sinclair of Belleville, McMastery University; the Rev. L. M. Smith of Campbellford, Religious Education; Pastor W. J. Harrison of Grafton Social Service; the Rev. A. Hale of Colborne, Church Edifice; the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe of Murray Street Baptist Church, member of the Convention Nominating Committee; the Rev. R. D. Wright, Representative to the Historical Committee of the Convention; the Rev. A. H. Jones of Picton, and W. P. Tickell of Port Hope, members of the Convention Ordination Council. On the Associational Home Mission Board, the chairman will be the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, with J. R. Mann of Gilmour Memorial Church, and Walter Garbutt of Murray Street Church. On the Association Religious Education Board ,the chairman will be the Rev. L. M. Smith of Campbellford, with H. O. Trusdale of Belleville, and the representative appointed by the B.Y.P.U. last evening, the Rev. H. E. Morphy of Cobourg.

The report of the Nominating Committee was presented by the chairman the Rev. R. D. Wright, M.A.

Surprise Visitor

A visitor whose unlooked-for advent surprised and delighted the conference Wednesday was the Rev. C. R. Duncan, M.A., B.D., Educational Secretary of McMaster University, Hamilton, who gave a brief and pithy address on the theme of the Fundamental Purpose of God. This he outlined as the making of good people out of bad, better people out of the good, and these better people more useful people in every way. His address was most helpful to the Conference.

Wednesday morning's session was featured by the report of the Associational Sunday School Representative, the Rev. L. M. Smith of Campbellford. The report indicated slight increases in enrolment and also in missionary givings, with a slightly smaller average attendance which is a matter of concern. The total number enrolled in Sunday Schools of the association is 1,949 and the total of money given for all purposes is $2,366.00.

The new secretary of the reorganized Board of Religious Education, the Rev. H. E. Bridge of Toronto, led a Conference on Sunday School work which made a strong impression on his hearers, convincing them of his aliveness to his duties and of a wise choice by the whole convention in placing Rev. Mr. Bridge in his new post.

The morning session, which opened with a Devotional service led by the Rev. W. B. Walker of Lakefield, also heard the report of the Resolutions Committee, presented by the Rev. A. G. Sinclair of Belleville, and expressing thanks for hospitality and addresses.

In the afternoon, devotions were taken by the Rev. Mr. Wright and an open session for prayer and consideration of the spiritual needs of the association was led by the Rev. G. K. Tyler, who dwelt on methods of obtaining closer fellowship and co-operation among the churches, the promotion of evangelism among the churches, and preparation for such evangelical work.

Evening Session

At the evening session last night, after a Song Service led by the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, and the introduction of the new Moderator by the retiring Moderator, the Rev. Mr. Downing of Norwood, an interesting Rally of Baptist Young People's Unions was held, with the president in the chair, Miss Dorothy Ough of Port Hope, and Miss Marion Armstrong of Peterborough as secretary.

The awarding of B.Y.P.U. pennants was a special feature of the gathering, Gilmour Memorial Union receiving the pennant for best average attendance, and Belleville Union for largest attendance at the Rally.

A very inspiring address on "The Lure of Friendship" was given last night by the Rev. Harold E. Bridge of Toronto, who used Jonathan and David as a background for his talk which was dealth with under four heads, as the basis of friendship: first, the desire to share one's own experiences with others; second, the marvel of friendship and its culmination in the idea of Jesus: "Greater love man cannot have than this, that he lay down his life for another"; third the resulting friendly sympathy and friendly sorrow; fourth, the price of friendship, as the price of fellowship with God is the Cross.

At the evening session, the two following resolutions were presented and unanimously adopted, after being read by the convenor of the Resolutions committee, the Rev. A. G. Sinclair of Belleville. The first is as follows:

"Sincerely believing that the establishment of beverage rooms in standard hotels and in other places open to the public in the province of Ontario has resulted in increased drunkenness and attendant evils, and accepting the dictum of Governmental authority to the effect the Government is desirous of doing everything in its power to bring about decreased consumption of liquor, and of its willingness to assist in the promotion of projects that tend to elevate the moral life of the people of this province;

"Be it resolved that we, the delegates to the Peterborough Association of Baptist Churches, assembled at Park Street Baptist Church, Peterborough, Ontario, in annual session, urge the Government of the province of Ontario to consider very seriously the question of the complete abolition of the beverage rooms throughout the territory over which it has jurisdiction. Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn, Premier of Ontario, and to Mr. Odette, chairman of the Liquor Control Board."

The Great War

The second resolution follows:

"Whereas the nations are still suffering from the devastating influence of the Great War and whereas the futility and unreasonableness and waste of war, and its ineffectiveness in settling international disputes and difference, has been clearly demonstrated, and whereas an alarming armament race among the nations is in progress at the present time, therefore be it resolved that we, the delegates to the Peterborough Association of Baptist Churches, assembled in conference, do express our strongest condemnation of the existing rivalry in armaments in various countries and that we affirm our belief in the necessity for reciprocal disarmament as a means toward international security and peace and that we regard with gatitude to God the efforts of the League of Nations towards the promotion of peace and good will in the world."

Miss Ough, president of the Association Rally, reviewed very interestingly the deliberations of the 44th annual B.Y.P.U. convention for Ontario and Quebec, held in London last week.

The music of the evening was very well received and splendidly rendered, as was the case at the opening session, when a quartette of young ladies sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," with accompaniment played by the church organist, Stanley Northrop. A.T.C.M. Members of the feminine quartette are the Misses Agnes Sands, Nancy Lane, Martha Sands and Iva Pilling.

Last night, a male quartet, unaccompanied, sang "The Old Wayside Cross," with members in George Batley, Clarence Corbett, George Tranter and Stan Young.

The benediction for the closing was pronounced by the Moderator, the Rev. W. B. Walker of Lakefield.

A great deal of assistance during the two days was supplied by the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Park Street Church, who supplied excellent meals for the visitors, with Mrs. E. White as convenor, assisted by Mrs. J. Masters and Mrs. S. Sands as committee members and a bevy of active associates.

Women Meet.

An interesting session in the two-day convention was the 49th meeting of Women's Mission Circles and Bands, held on the opening day, with the president, Mrs. G. K. Tyler, in the chair, and Mrs. R. C. Weston of Campbellford as Directress.

The election of officers for the coming year for this feminine section of the convention resulted in the re-election of the president, Mrs. Tyler, of Peterborough, and the Directress, Mrs. Weston of Campbellford. Other officers will be as follows: Miss C. M. Hinman of Cobourg, first vice-president; Mrs. W. P. Tickell of Port Hope, second vice-president; Mrs. H. H. Graham of Peterborough, Assistant Directress; Mrs. J. Young of Gilmour Memorial Church, Mission Band superintendent; Mrs. L. M. Smith of Campbellford, White Cross superintendent (department in charge of Mission boxes for India).

The report was presented by the convenor of the Nominating Committee, Mrs. B. Jackson of Murray Street Church. Other members of the committee were Mrs. R. D. Wright of Gilmour Memorial Church, and Mrs. E. K. Smith of Port Hope.

The Women's meeting was featured by much interesting business. Mrs. H. H. Graham led a conference on how to interest church members who are not members of the Women's Mission Circle; the devotional services were taken by Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. W. P. Tickell of Port Hope; and the address of welcome was voiced by Mrs. George Glass of the host church, Park street Baptist with a response by Mrs. Wright of Gilmour Memorial Church. The secretary of the meeting was Miss C. M. Hinman of Cobourg, whose sister, Miss Susia Hinman, home from mission work in India, was introduced and spoke briefly, in response to her welcome.

After a roll call of Circles and Bands, an address on Band work was given by the Band superintendent for the whole convention, Miss Hilda Calvin of Toronto, who spoke on the guidance to be exerted and usefulness of Band work in building up for the Circle.

Home Missions was the topic by Mrs. R. J. Marshall of Toronto, president of the Women's Home Mission Board of Ontario and Quebec.

Mrs. Marshall's talk was based on thoughts aroused by the broadcast by King George Fifth on May 6th, and the example set by His Majesty and the Queen, who, on their coronation day, doffed their crowns before taking the Coronation oath, to signify their allegiance to the King of Kings. Such allegiance, said Mrs Marshall, is necessary for us also in the spread of the Kingdom.

A very brief talk was given by Mrs. B. Jackson of Murray street Church, on the work carried on by the publication, "The Link and Visitor."

Mrs. J. Young of Gilmour Memorial Church gave the report of Mission Bands, showing a total of all givings for the year from the Bands and Y.W.A. organizations, of $1,895.53, an increase of $93 over last year's total.

In the Peterborough Association, there are 15 Circles, 4 Young Women's Auxiliaries and 8 Bands with a membership of 750.

Old Memories Recalled

Of especial interest to the members of the Baptist denomination of the city and district should be some of the interesting facts gleaned by The Examiner representative who sought information as to the origin of the Peterborough Association, in the light of the fact that this meeting was dubbed as the 133rd annual gathering since its foundation, which would place its origin away back somewhere about the year 1802.

According to the Rev. R. D. Wright, pastor of Gilmour Memorial Church, who delved promptly into an apparently well-stocked memory chest for his facts, the Peterborough Association has a perfect right to consider itself such an ancient organization, for, in the library of McMaster University are records of the minutes of the old Thurlow and Haldimand Associations which refer, in the year 1837, to the meetings as being the thirty-fifth in line. And the Peterborough Association, through right of succession, is the descendant of the original Thurlow Association, named for the township of the same name in Hastings County, where one of the first churches was built, and succeeded later by the Haldimand Association, then by the Eastern Ontario branch and, later by the present Peterborough Association, which, one might say, is a great grandchild of the original group.

It seems that the old Haldimand Association at one time extended as far as Toronto and included the only Baptist church in Toronto of that time, also the Baptist church in the village then known as Niagara, now Niagara-on-the-Lake. But when the Haldimand Association was split up later, in 1875, the oldest church in the association, and also one of the oldest in Canada, the Haldimand church, in Northumberland county which was built in 1798, and on the site of which a church building remains to this day, continued with the Peterborough Association, which therefore took to itself the right to consider its origin as quite old, containing, as it did, the parent church of the entire old organization.

It was not until long after the foundation of Baptist meeting places in this district by Reuben Crandall, that the formation of Associations took place. There are many ancient Baptist churches around Brockville; in the Niagara Peninsula; and in the eastern townships of Quebec. In Quebec, one was erected in the year 1779.

Cabinet To Discuss Canada Highway

OTTAWA, May 30 (C.P.)—Work on the trans-Canada highway in Northern Ontario will be discussed to-day at a meeting of Cabinet Council following conferences between Hon. Peter Heenan, Ontario Minister of Northern Development, and Hon. Wesley Gordon, Dominion Minister of Labor.

It was said the two Ministers had reached an understanding and the matter had been placed before the Cabinet for its final approval and for passage of necessary Orders-in-Council to sanction the work. Mr. Heenan remained in Ottawa to await the final decision.

LIMITATION OF AIR ARMAMENTS

Germany Submits to Other Locarno Powers Draft of New Air Pact.

MUTUAL TO ALL.

(By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, May 30 (CP)—Germany is entering the door which the British Government has said would be left open to her, to join in collective security.

The German Government to-day submitted to the other Locarno powers, the draft of the air Locarno by which it is hoped to ptu teeth in the Locarno Pact—extending it to include mutual guarantees against aerial aggression.

The Foreign Office has received a copy of the German draft and others have gone to the governments of France, Italy and Belgium. Extreme secrecy is maintained in Whitehall in regard to the provisions of the plan, but it is understood to follow the general lines of the air Locarno contemplated in the Anglo-French declaration Feb. 3.

Limitation Sought

The plan had in view not only mutual guarantee of the Locarno powers against air attack, but limitation of air armaments. It went further than the existing Locarno treaties guaranteeing the frontier between Germany and France, and Germany and Belgium. In these Great Britain and Italy appear merely as guarantors. They are not themselves guaranteed assistance if attacked. But in the proposed air Locarno the guarantee is mutual for all signatories.

Adolf Hitler, in his foreign policy speech, affirmed Germany's willingness to enter into limitation of aerial armaments and this is a feature of the drafts. The threatened race in the air seems to be giving way to a race in pacts.

LINDSAY BEER VOTE IS AT STANDSTILL

Chief Returning Officer of Province Orders Stay of Proceedings.

LINDSAY, May 30.— It would seem that the question of a vote on the beverage rooms in Lindsay is at a standstill for the time being. W. R. Allely, Returning Officer, has received a communication from I. A. Humphries, K.C., Chief Returning Officer for Ontario, advising him not to do anything further in connection with the holding of the vote. At the present time it appears that the matter is in the hands of the courts of law to decide.

Colonel R. I. Moore, on behalf of a number of ratepayers, issued an injunction against the Returning Officer, and the Temperance Federation stated their intention of defending the action. Now the complainants have thirty days in which to lodge a statement of claim, after which the latter will go before a High Court Judge to decide.

If all this happens, which seems quite probable, June 28, which was the date originally set, will have passed.

No It Didn't Turn Over, It's Just Another Invention

It's just an "Elytraplan", a new and unique type of aeroplane developed by M. De Rougie of Paris, who conceived its plan from the flight of an insect known as the elytrope. The ttoal weight of the aeroplane is 404 pounds, with an engine developing 25 horsepower. The wing-spread of the aeroplane is about 34 feet and is so constructed that it can maintain an absolutely horisontal position in all kinds of weather.

WORK STARTED ON NEW PLANT

to the limit, due to largely increased domestic and export business.

Large Payroll.

With the addition that was erected in 1927, he said, the plant had accommodation for production of 2,500 pieces daily, but notwithstanding the present production is running as high as 2,850 pieces daily, giving employment to 300 hands, with the payroll averaging $350,000.00 to $400,000.00 per annum.

Remarking that overcrowded conditions do not make for pleasant or efficient working facilities, Mr. Vernor stated: "We have decided to give ourselves enough room to work in and to leave extra capacity for future expansion. The addition will not provide for any great expansion in the future, and if we should become unduly crowded again, it would depend upon a good many factors as to whether or not the business could be more effectively carried on from the local plant or from our main plant in the United States."

Use of Building.

The addition, designed by E. A. Cross of Toronto, will conform to the design of the main building, it was stated, and will house the shipping department, the automatic screw machines, die-casting department, foot presses, and a multitude of miscellaneous things.

Arrangements in the main building will be greatly changed when the addition is complete, and will include removal of the assembling room from the third floor to the fourth floor; increased space for the regulating room, which is at present badly overcrowded; as well as additional office space, and added lunch room facilities for employees.

Of Big Proportions.

While such an addition might not seem large to manufacturers of locomotives or other heavy machinery, plant officials commented, it is of big proportions when it is considered that the Westclox is engaged in the making of watches and clocks, and allows of considerably increased working space.

Asked whether it was considered that the proposed addition would ultimately result in the employment of extra hands, Mr. Vernor replied in the negative. There would be no demand for increased staffs unless the output was raised above the present level, he explained.

"We are now back to our normal working hours. The plant is on a 47-hour week, and on that basis our present production is the highest in our 15 years' history here," it was stated.

Favorable Tariffs.

Asked to what he attributed the present activity, Mr. Vernor stated: "The Government arranged the tariff in such a way that we got a large increase in our domestic business, due to a reduction of imported clocks and watches, mainly from Germany. The tariffs gave us certain protection on the condition that our prices would not be advanced as a result, and we have lived up to those conditions. Instead of advancing our prices, we have actually reduced them twice."

Increase in export trade he attributed solely to the Ottawa trade agreements, which, he said, had given his company the Australian and English markets, in both of which the Western Clock Company first obtained foothold twenty-five years ago.

Over 50 Per Cent. Increase.

"About 45 per cent. of our business is export. For the past two years the plant has been working not only full time but overtime, the overtime having been necessitated during the period required to train new help. Two years ago we employed 232 hands, so that in that period we have actually increased our number of employees by over 50 per cent," it was stated.

He added that prior to the depression the company gave employees with ten years' service and over two weeks' annual vacation with pay, and employees with five years' service one week annual holiday with pay. The arrangement was discontinued following the advent of the depression, but due to the happy position in which the company finds itself at the present, holidays with pay are to be restored as a temporary measure for this year only. Notices to this effect were posted on bulletin boards at the plant to-day. Extension of the plan in future years will, it is said, depend entirely upon whether or not business can be maintained at its present levels.

Made Fine Progress.

The sales department, under direction of O. A. DeGraw, sales manager, has made remarkable progress during the past two years, it was stated, the domestic business having increased in greater proportion than the export trade, while the manufacturing operations have been ably fostered under the superintendency of H. T. Cranford

Starting operations late in 1919 with an assembly room, employing 5 hands, in the Barrie Building, the Western Clock Company has enjoyed phenomenal growth and expansion:

Interesting Development.

Mr. Vernor, general manager, came here in January, 1920, just about the time that the Western Clock Company bought the old Chicle factory on south George street, and he had under him at that time from 15-20 employees. Two years later the business had grown to such proportions that it had completely outgrown the old Chicle factory, and the company, realizing there was no room for future development at that location, decided to build at the present location on Armour Hill. The building was started in the summer of 1922, and the business was transferred there in January, 1923. The plant was designed for a daily production of 2,000 pieces, but by 1926 the need of further expansion again arose, and the addition of the present buffing and plating department was made, increasing the daily capacity to 2,500 pieces and adding 25,000 feet of floor space.

Associated Companies.

The parent company is located at LaSalle, Illinois, the Western Clock Company being a subsidiary of the General Time Instruments Corporation of New York, which company owns the Western Clock Company of LaSalle, the Seth Thomas Clock Company of Thomastown, Conn., the Sangamo Clock and the Sterling Electric Clock Company, which last named concern is operated from the LaSalle plant and is engaged in the automobile clock business.

80,000 Footsteps couldn't wear it out!

Scarfe's Porch and Floor Enamel is put to the most gruelling tests in actual service. Steps of schools, entrances to stores, are painted and a careful record of wear is kept by Scarfe observers. It has to prove its ability to stand up under many times the wear and scuffing it will get in your home.

Tested too in actual service in scores of homes. Scarfe experts visit these homes regularly to note its resistance to rain, snow, sun, frost.

Painted panels exposed to constant wear and all weather conditions are checked regularly under the microscope.

The rubbing test shows up inferior paint ingredients. Only the very best are accepted for Scarfe's quality Enamel.

SCARFE'S tested PORCH & FLOOR ENAMEL

This durable Enamel must pass every test that science can devise before it comes to you. It gives amazing wear, and stands up under sun, rain, frost and countless footsteps. A standard price everywhere, $1.30 a quart.

BANCROFT MAN IS VICTORIOUS

dealing principally with phases of legislation sponsored by his own Department.

The five men who were proposed for the convention honors were:

Dr. A. T. Embury, Bancroft, by Colonel R. E. Birdsall of Birdsall, Asphodel township, and Charles A. Keene of Bancroft.

G. Bruce Airhart, Marmora, by G. E. Thompson of Rawdon township and C. H. Buskard of Deloro.

Judson A. Gunter, Bancroft, by James D. Pennock and E. S. Bruce of Bancroft.

E. J. Leeson, Havelock, by H. P. Kempt, Norwood, and H. K. Ketchen, Havelock.

Dr. S. Eagleson, Madoc, by T. E. Burnside and Walter Whytock of Madoc.

Dr. Eagleson declined to let his name go on the ballot.

Embury Led From Start

Dr. Embury headed the poll on the first ballot with twenty votes more than Mr. Airheart receiv- Mr. Leeson failed to graduate to the second ballot, and the majority of his supporters apparently fell in behind Mr. Airhart on the second ballot which eliminated Mr. Gunter. At that stage Dr. Embury's plurality was eleven.

As was expected by supporters of Dr. Embury, the majority of the Gunter votes switched to the other northern representative on the third and deciding poll.

Mr. Gunter immediately moved that the nomination of Dr. Embury be made unanimous, and Mr. Airhart seconded it.

Speakers generally declared their approval of the primary election and the spirit which animated it. The Airhart boom demonstrated that the strong position he holds in the party, and that fact in itself was regarded as strengthening Dr. Embury's candidature, for the nomination was no empty formality or routine, but a thorough test of the party's sentiment. There was no criticism at any time of Dr. Embury's record, but some Conservatives, keenly interested in the party's continued dominance in Hastings-Peterborough, had been inclined to the opinion that a new candidate might be an advisable manoeuvre. That feeling, however, was obviously not general, and Dr. Embury faces the riding for the fourth election in ten years.

The New Officers

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Fred Curry, Madoc.

1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Richard Sanderson, Havelock.

2nd Vice-Presi—John S. Morton, Stirling.

3rd Vice-Pres.—Richard A. Dean, Norwood.

Secretary—R. A. Elliott, Deloro.

Treasurer — James A. Moore, Queensboro.

The arrangements for the ballot-ing were efficiently supervised by Mr. Elliott. The past presidents of the Association are George Bailey of Harold, George West of Madoc and John A. Sexsmith, ex-M.P., of Belmont, who opened yesterday's meeting and later relinquished the chair to Mr. Curry.

Dr. Embury's Record

In two brief speeches before and after his nomination, Dr. Embury said that the large attendance and the number of aspirants for the party's candidature was an indication of strength in the Conservative ranks and augury of another victory.

"I prefer a convention with lots of candidates, than one that shows little interest on the part of the electors," Dr. Embury said. "The history of this riding is my own political history. I was selected as your candidate in 1926 after the redistribution of 1924, and was elected with a majority of 2,764. Eleven months later we were into another general election, and I was returned with a majority of 4,117. In 1930 we again won the riding by 3,994.

As your representative during those years I have sacrificed my private interests on the altar of politics. I had an old, established practice in Bancroft and the north country, but I had to let it go. If you think that I am not the strongest candidate, then it is your duty to nominate some one else. But, after the results of the three elections I can't understand why I should become a political Huckleberry Finn. It is true that in the last election my majority was down a little from that of 1926, from 4,117 to 3,994."

Dr. Embury said he had endeavored to maintain the ideals of the party, and their leader, Hon. R. B. Bennett, and had refused to make any kind of political sharp turn during the ten years he has been at Ottawa.

When his re-nomination was announced to the meeting, Dr. Embury expressed his appreciation of the new evidence of trust which the result demonstrated.

"I shall try to serve this constituency as in the past," Dr. Embury said, "and with your loyal support I have no doubt of the result of the election."

Wellington Caldwell, a Chandos delegate, momentarily held the spotlight in the centre aisle of the hall as he stood up and started to sing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow", but the convention confined its acclaim of Dr. Embury to applause and cheers.

Other speakers during the afternoon were: W. E. Tummon, M.P., who introduced Hon. Mr. Weir; T. P. Lancaster, M.L.A. for Peterborough; James F. Hill, M.L.A. for East Hastings; Mr. Airhart, Mr. Leeson, Mr. Gunter and Dr. Eagleson.

The Peterborough municipalities in the hyphenated riding are: Asphodel, Dummer, Belmont and Methuen, Burleigh and Anstruther, Chandos, Norwood and Havelock.

Hon. Mr. Weir

After receiving an address of welcome from a group of still young men whom he taught as boys in the local Public School, Hon. Mr. Weir spoke of the happy reflections and memories which came back to him as he revisited the community in which he began his career as a teacher thirty years ago.

Mr. Tummon recalled that Mr. Weir was a native of Huron county, a graduate of the University of Toronto, and a veteran of the War in which he rose to the rank of Major. Returning to Canada he went into farming on a large scale in northern Saskatchewan, and in 1930 was prevailed upon by the electors in his district to accept a nomination for Parliament. His success at the polls was followed by his election for the portfolio of Agriculture by the Hon. Mr. Bennett.

Mr. Weir said that the first problem which confronted him when he became Minister of Agriculture was the finding of markets for the primary products of this country.

"I think this is a safe statement to make, that the chief criticism of the Opposition has been that we have restricted markets by higher tariffs, and the other has been of a personal nature against the Prime Minister. When Mr. Bennett was ill a few weeks ago a newspaper published a statement that he was not ill at all, but was trying to make some political scheme to win the next elections."

Untrue Reports

The Government and the Conservative party could not object to criticism of any mistakes that had been made, but when the Opposition resorted to comments of that kind respecting the Prime Minister it was resented as unfair and unworthy of one of the principal parties in this country. The truth was that Mr. Bennett had withheld reports regarding his condition long after he should have announced it and taken the time to regain his health.

Another untrue reference to Mr. Bennett was published in a Winnipeg paper to the effect that one of the members of a visiting party of U.S. officers had brushed the Prime Minister's sleeve in passing, and that this incident had been reported to the military authorities in Washington. And this incident was reported to have happened at a time when the newspaper knew that Mr. Bennett was in Europe, at Geneva.

"We accept criticism if it is true," Mr. Weir said, "but we have to bind ourselves together to denounce in the strongest terms any propaganda that is based on untruths."

Problem of Markets

Mr. Weir declared that the United States tariffs against the primary products of Canada had been raised during the ten years from 1921 to 1930, the years when the Mackenzie King Government was in power.

The primary products included cattle, sheep, beef, butter, eggs, milk, cheese.

"Before the present Government came into power, duties had been raised against Canadian products to such a level as to shut them out of every market except the United Kingdom. Where, then, is there any truth in the Liberal statements that we restricted markets for the primary products of this country. I don't blame the Liberal Government of those years entirely for that condition, but the tariffs were piled up against us during the time the Liberals were in office.

From 1926 to 1929 we shipped annually some 250,000 head of cattle to the United States. The duty against them was 1½ cents to 2 cents a pound. It was then raised to three cents a pound on cattle of over 700 pounds That shut us out of the United States almost as effectually as if they had raised a stone wall against our cattle. You can imagine the effect on our own market of having that number of cattle turned back on us yearly."

Dairy Products Excluded

Mr. Weir said that the U.S. Tariff on cream had the effect of blocking the export from Canada of supplies of cream which if manufactured into cheese would amount to 52,000,000 pounds of cheese a year. Those were concrete examples of how export markets had been closed confronting the Bennett Government with a new and tremendous problem of finding some solution to the marketing of Canadian primary products.

"We had promised the people that we would give the Canadian markets to the Canadian people. So we raised our tariffs against agricultural products, because ours was the only market over which we had any control. That was a deliberate action, and we have no apologies to make. In the twelve months after that we had as many cars of our own domestic products sold at home as we had imported in the twelve months previous."

Hog Values Increased

Hon. Mr. Weir then reviewed the course of the Imperial agreements, especially the Ottawa trade agreement, and their effects in obtaining new trade terms within the Empire. On bacon hogs alone the increase to Canadian producers amounted on the average to five dollars a hog.

"In the last two years for every hog you farmers marketed, it was just as if a five-dollar bill was on the back of every hog you sold, because of the Ottawa agreement."

Referring to the Natural Products Marketing Act, Mr. Weir explained that this legislation was designed to give the farmers more control over the selling and the prices of their products. Practically every province has asked to come under this Act and on the final vote in the House the Hon. Mr. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture in the King Government, had spoken twenty minutes in favor of the Act. This showed that when the final test came agriculture meant more to him than politics and that in the opinion of the man whom the Liberals considered their greatest authority on agriculture it was a sound Act.

Hon. Mr. Weir concluded his address by outlining the scope of the Debt Adjustment Act which had been devised to assist farmers in meeting their obligations and adjusting them to their present incomes. The results of this legislation had been so satisfactory in its experimental stage, and so much had been learned from its operations, that the Department was now giving greater speed to its general application.

Church Social Is Held At Ballyduff

BALLYDUFF, May 30 (Examiner Correspondence) — In spite of unfavorable weather conditions a large crowd attended the post-anniversary social evening held in the closed-in covered shed in close proximity to Ballyduff Presbyterian Church on Monday evening.

Rev. V. Walker pastor of the church in well-chosen words welcomed the many guests and introduced a brief program including readings by Miss Fairbairn of Fallis School and Miss Vera Strachan of Lifford. A solo was contributed by Miss Eileen Farrow.

Ten enthusiastic games of crokinole were played by those present with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bradley winning the prize awards, the former winning the draw in a tie with three other gentlemen.

A social hour was then enjoyed during which the Ladies' Aid who sponsored the happy event served refreshments.

The small fee charged brought the creditable financial return of nearly nine dollars which with the proceeds from two previous successful crokinole contests has greatly augmented the funds of this ambitious society.

PLAINVILLE

Several from here attended the tea at Cold Springs United Church on Victoria Day. A good play was presented after the tea by Trinity United Young People, Cobourg.

Some of the cottages on the properties of Frank Westington and Ewart King were occupied by Toronto people over the holiday.

The Young People were the guests of the Bethel Grove Young People on Monday evening, Plainville providing the program.

Next Sunday, the Young People are having an evening church service. Rev. Harold Lackey will be the speaker.

Mr. Herb. Blizzard, a theology student and a frequent visitor in this community has gone out west for the summer where he will be preaching.

BARN RAISING AT DOWNEYVILLE

Three Sheep Killed and Several Others Worried by Dogs.

Several Flocks Been Worried.

DOWNEYVILLE, May 30 (Examiner Correspondence)—On Monday afternoon over one hundred men gathered at the home of Ambrose Herlihey to erect a barn in place of the one destroyed by fire last fall.

The barn is large, on a cement foundation and when finished will be modern in every way. Joseph Gooselin is building it and the cement work was done by Albert McConnell of Omemee. Everything went up fine and with not one accident. It is a number of years since there was a barn raising here. After the barn was up a very elaborate supper was served by about twenty-five ladies who were present and an hours social chat was enjoyed by all.

Sheep Worried

On Monday night Leo Harrington who lives on the Downeyville road near Fox's Corner had his sheep badly torn and worried by dogs. Three were killed and a number injured. There has been a number of sheep killed and worried by dogs around here this year.

The people around here were greatly alarmed Monday night when two car loads of gypsies, some twenty-five camped for the night along Pigeon Lake.

The rain of Monday night was a wonderful help and every thing that has been at a stand still here started growing.

Raymond Perdue of Peterborough and Laverne Perdue of Ennismore spent the week-end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Perdue.

REV. JOHN LINE ADDRESSES UNITED CHURCH CONFERENCE

Noted Divine From Victoria College, Toronto, Gives Splendid Talk.

FINE MUSIC.

The Bay of buinte Conference convening in St. Andrew's United Church during this week was fortunate in securing for their best speaker last evening the Rev. John Line, M.A., B.D., S.T.D., of Victoria College, Toronto. The large assembly of delegates was augmented by a representative gathering of the United Church membership of the city to hear this noted divine.

Presiding over the session was the newly elected president, Rev. Mr. James Semple of Belleville. Supporting him on the platform was the Conference secretary, Rev. Jas. E. Becket and Rev. J. M. McCurdy of Renfrew, who conducted the opening service of worship. The fine musical selections were presented under the direction of Cyril Rice, the organist, and included an anthem "Into the Woods My Master went," by St. Andrew's choir, and a beautiful vocal solo, "Angels, ever bright and fair," by Master Frederick Fowler.

The speaker of the evening was introduced by the Rev. W. P. Woodger, B.A., of Cobourg, who recalled their early days of fellowship with many amusing details.

Church and Times.

The Rev. Dr. Line termed his evening message a practical one, dealing with The Church, or Our Christian Evangel in Relation to the Times," following as a logical sequel to his afternoon's address.

"Large congregations are splendid, but they may be very deceptive," said the speaker, who declared that we come to church to honor the real Jesus Christ, not the Christ of the stained-glass window, nor of evangelical theology, nor by liberal theology, but the real Jesus, who was the tragic revolutionary figure of history. Do we want to know Him as such? In spite of large numbers it is not possible that Christianity is a declining force—is it possible that we are witnessing a great epoch in the decadence and disappearance of Christianity? Are so-called Christians the last to realize this? There are no finer ideals than those of Christianity, but the exploited people of Canada are looking for a Gospel, not for ideals. The tragedy is they are finding this Gospel in Communism. Another troubling thing is that wide observers, even those sympathetic to Christianity, regard this age as one of decline, and religion as very impotent. From the Reformation on there has been a tremendous secularization of life. Every government up to the time of the Renaissance had been a theocracy. Now we look upon government as something it is well for ministers and religious people to avoid. While religion was thus dominant in the Middle Ages, the present era is characterized by its absence.

Pathos of Civilization.

Quoting Professor McMurray, the speaker averred that the pathos of our civilization is our inability to stabilize society. The trouble is that human society can only be unified by means of religion, and we haven't the religion to effect that union.

Take 2 Rev. John Line

Russia, Germany and Italy are achieving unification more than Canada or the United States, but a unity effected by external means, that is, by Communism and Fascism. If religion is not vitally and potently presented by spiritual processes of the human mind to bring men together, then it will be done externally by these powerful agencies. Our business is to step into the breach with a gospel so arresting that men will create a bond of union, a Christian, social order, and the kingdom of God on earth. This is the only answer to Communism. Otherwise Christianity is done. This is the challenge before the church.

Under our agency of laissez faire our capitalistic economics are undoing our social contracts and people talk of world war as if it were inevitable, Christianity must function vitally and creatively to overcome this state of war, and find new capacities for living together as individuals and nations.

Religion For Unity.

We must have a revival of religion to bring about this unity.

Questions of human welfare and unity are crucial in connection with economic religion. There is glaring injustice in the world and it seems as though all religious efforts, unless they include the purpose to establish justice in the economic world, will come to a dead end. This calls for courage to face facts as they are.

Philosophers, a century ago, regarded the individual as a purely egoistic force, but the present economic predicament is a sign that this is a moral universe. We must reorganize society, not for aggrandisement and self-seeking, but for unity, using all to satisfy the needs of all. Can we accept this issue as a church?

In spite of the rather dark outlook Dr. Line asserted that he was hopeful of the church's future. When Wilberforce tried to abolish slavery, the bishops were all against him. On the other hand, when Shaftesbury brought in his factory legislation, Wilberforce was against that. Must there always be these moral blind spots in good people and in the Christian church? If in regard to social justice there is this moral blindness the world will become impatient with the church. Even in the church there is a self-interest and desire for promotion. Our very religious education has not adequately made us feel that our individual life is an integral part of the human purpose.

It seems as if God is giving us a great chance to transcend this superficial self-seeking and to get a vision of a world unified and to obliterate self to this vision. This call is God's call to the United church at the present time.

The evening session marked by this timely and illuminating address, was concluded with the benediction pronounced by the Rev. Claude Brethen of Lindsay Presbytery.

More than 2,450,000 tons of sugar were produced in Cuba in three months and a half this year.

I have been asked to state more precisely what I am driving at in my references to the ministry. I am referring to the establishment of a new hierarchy (sacred order) which bases itself not on God but on themselves, and tells us what parts of the Bible are worthy of belief and that they in future will be the "interpretators" of Truth to the people, who will sit open-mouthed and hearken as under "leadership" they have been trained to do.

ROBERTA'S CHAT

A column conducted by a reader of The Examiner for her other reader friends. Address all mail to Roberta in care of The Examiner.

"Absence of occupation is not rest,
A mind quite vacant, is a mind distressed."
—Cooper.

Dear Friend:

Have you ever wished for unlimited leisure? Yet if you had it, you wouldn't know what to do with yourself, and life would be boring and empty.

The average business man, thinks of the time he can retire, yet when he does, he is like a ship without a rudder. I would rather burn out, than rust out.

We would not enjoy our leisure, if we hadn't worked hard first, and of course the really best way is, to have a certain amount of work, and enough leisure to make it equal.

During this unemployment people all over the world, have found out how very necessary work was for them, not alone for the money (although that was a vital necessity) but for the awful feeling of not having anything to do.

"All work and no play", is a good adage, but the counterpart of it is, "Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do."

Let us then, value work as a gift from God, and our leisure for the beauty which is all around us.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

OUR MAIL

Dear Anne Wilcox:

Though not meriting the credit that is due to some of our faithful neighbors, I too, would like to see our page once more in full swing. What a lot could be written on the words "If" and "But." I presume many of us have thought—if with the present knowledge and experience we have, what we could and would do. "But" or "If" we were a young man with brain, energy, health and wealth at our disposal, what we could accomplish—"But"—

This time of year brings thoughts of change in varied ways, and now as old Sol is deigning to show more of his face, after those lovely gentle showers, all nature seems just ready to burst into verdure and blossom.

Knowing of earthquakes, floods, tornadoes, wrecks and sandstorms, elsewhere, one is led to the conclusion that we, living in Peterborough and surrounding districts, are in a favored region of our Dominion—because of the continuity of so many blessings, too often they appear to us as common and we are apt to be slack in our appreciation and thankfulness.

Those articles so full of interest and information by Mr. Homer Moore, on "The Possibilities of Peterborough" surely are a confirmation of our privileges unavailed and not utilized. These statements may prove an incentive that will lead the road to our treasure chest lying buried at the very doors of our Peterborough neighborhood. I am greatly interested and enthused in this subject and hope the writer may yet see, not only the possibilities but probabilities and progression that will develop the wonderful resources stored.

Though not meriting the credit that is due to some of our faithful neighbors I want you to know, that I too, would like to see our page once more in full swing.

Sincerely,
"Meta."

My dear Meta:

It was indeed a great pleasure to hear from you again Yes, indeed, Meta I do think the little words "But" and "If" are two of the most destructive forces in the world. If we could just keep these forces out of our scheme of thought there would be no end to our accomplishments. If we would just decry these two words and instead keep shining and bright in our minds and lives "Faith" first of all the utmost trust in Our Divine Maker and then faith in our fellow man and lastly but by no means least faith in ourselves we will have discovered the greatest force in the world.

How proud we should be of the land of our birth. We do not realize fully I am sure how favored we are in this particular part of the world. No disasters, such as we read of daily in the press from all parts of the world, no crop failures, land, delivered to your very door at a price that just seems too low—but the very best products of the rivers abounding in fish, and right in our county minerals waiting to be mined and developed. We are indeed rich in our heritage.

Do write again, Meta. I shall be looking forward to hearing from you.

Anne Wilcox

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. Shepard

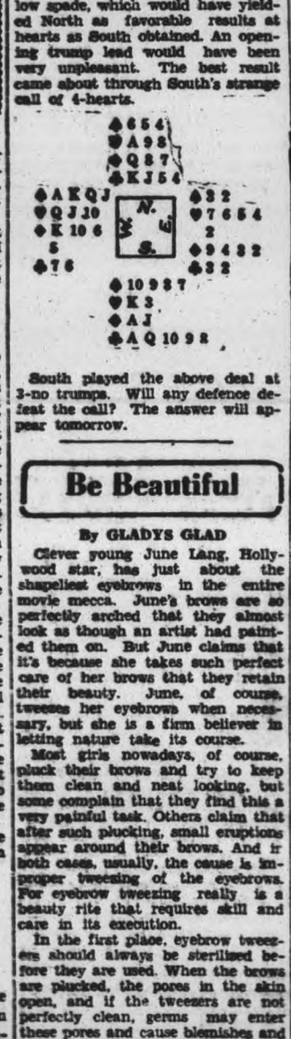
ASTONISHING EVENTS

Astonishing events occur at the bridge table. A reader of The Toronto Star offers an example of such strange events in his description of what took place with the deal shown today.

To say the least the bidding was unusual: South, 1-club; North, 2-spades; South, 3-clubs; North, 3-spades, all of which might take place at any table, although North might well have bid 3-hearts, after having shown his great spade strength, at which he should readily have made 5-odd. Then came the amazing part of the bidding. South, 4-hearts (over partner's 3-spades); North, 6-hearts, ending the auction without a double.



Give South credit for the skill he displayed in playing the hand. The opening lead was the 8 of spades; dummy's ace won; declarer let go a diamond; the Q of spades was covered with East's K. South ruffed. He led a single winning club, to rid dummy of its losing diamond. Then a low diamond put dummy in the lead.

For the fifth trick dummy's lowest spade was led. East followed suit. The declarer ruffed with his ace, then led back his 9 of trumps and overtook with dummy's 10, which held the trick. The gods were with the declarer.

The K and Q of hearts picked up all except a single trump. Dummy held only established spades and the 3 of hearts. Spades were led until West ruffed, for the only defensive trick. Whatever West led back dummy could ruff and the small slam was made. It was an amazing result from a bid made upon only 3 trumps.

Had North played the hand at even 4-hearts he would have had his troubles had either minor suit been utilized for an opening lead. I see no opening lead, except a low spade, which would have yielded North as favorable results at hearts as South obtained. An opening trump lead would have been very unpleasant. The best result came about through South's strange call of 4-hearts.

South played the above deal at 3-no trumps. Will any defence defeat the call? The answer will appear tomorrow.

Be Beautiful

By GLADYS GLAD

Clever young June Lang, Hollywood star, has just about the shapeliest eyebrows in the entire movie mecca. June's brows are so perfectly arched that they almost look as though an artist had painted them on. But June claims that it's because she takes such perfect care of her brows that they retain their beauty. June, of course, tweezes her eyebrows when necessary, but she is a firm believer in letting nature take its course.

Most girls nowadays, of course, pluck their brows and try to keep them clean and neat looking, but some complain that they find this a very painful task. Others claim that after such plucking, small eruptions appear around their brows. And in both cases, usually, the cause is improper tweezing of the eyebrows. For eyebrow tweezing really is a beauty rite that requires skill and care in its execution.

In the first place, eyebrow tweezers should always be sterilized before they are used. When the brows are plucked, the pores in the skin open, and if the tweezers are not perfectly clean, germs may enter these pores and cause blemishes and eruptions. The sterilizing process is, after all, a simple matter. Even boiling water will do the trick. And it certainly is worth doing, don't you think?

Pluck With Care

In the second place, the plucking itself should be done carefully. Before the eyebrow tweezing is started, a generous coating of cold cream or vaseline should be smoothed over each brow and permitted to remain on for a while. This will soften the brows and the surrounding skin. Then the brows should be brushed into shape with a small eyebrow brush, and the plucking itself done. After the tweezing and shaping have been completed, all remaining cream should be removed, and witch hazel or a soothing astringent should be applied in order to close the pores, to eliminate any possible germ infection, and to tone up the skin surrounding the eyebrows. When tweezing your brows, always do the thing skillfully and carefully. For only then will your brows retain a neat, shapely appearance.

Weds Twice In Day

JESSIE CLYDE CAVENDER

Police in Memphis, Tenn., sought a solution to the marriage puzzle provided by Jessie Clyde Cavender, who, unable to choose between two sweethearts, married both on the same day. The Memphis girl, held for juvenile court, was said to have married Earl Longmire at Marion, Ark., and a few hours later wed Dennis Manning. When the husbands met, fireworks started.

Household Hints

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Creamed Spinach and Mushrooms
Grape Fruit Salad
Hot Rolls Surprise Pie
Coffee

This is intended for a supper or luncheon menu. The dessert is especially nice for a guest dessert.

Today's Recipes

Creamed Spinach and Mushrooms —One No. 2½ can spinach, or fresh if you prefer; one eight-ounce can mushrooms, two tablespoons flour, salt and pepper, one cup liquor from mushrooms and spinach, one cup evaporated milk. Drain mushrooms slowly in the butter until delicately browned. Sprinkle flour over mushrooms and stir to blend well. Add vegetable liquors, cook until slightly thickened, then add milk and seasoning and cook until thickened, about five minutes. Fold in the spinach lightly and reheat before serving. If raw mushrooms are used they should be cleaned, sliced and cooked slowly in the butter until tender. Yield: eight to ten servings.

Surprise Pie—Nine tart shells or two pie shells, baked; one cup sugar, one quart fresh strawberries, one package strawberry flavored gelatin, one cup hot water, one-half cup grapes, cut in two; whipped cream. Mix sugar and strawberries, dissolve the gelatin in hot water. Pour this when slightly cooled over the berries, add the grapes. When beginning to thicken slightly pour into tart shells or pie shells. Before serving, cover with a thick layer of whipped cream, garnished with pecan nuts. Half of this recipe may be used if desired.

Tasty Filling

Filberts, black walnuts, brazil nuts or pecans blend well with cream cheese and make very tasty filling for graham bread sandwiches. These are suggested for school lunches.

Melon Days Coming

A combination of cantaloupe, watermelon and honey dew cut into balls or one-inch dices make a delicious combination. Sprinkle a little sugar, lemon juice and orange juice over the top and chill for several hours. This chilling greatly improves the flavor. Such a combination is suitable for cocktail or dessert.

On Wednesday of last week the young people of the Bannockburn Anglican Mission under the direction of Rev. C. C. Brasill presented a three act comedy "Miss Fearless and Co." in the Sunday School rooms of St. Mark's Church. There was a fair attendance and the play was well given, all the actresses taking their parts well. Between acts an orchestra composed of Mrs. (Rev.) W. G. Swayne, piano, Mr. Morley Stocker, bones and harmonica and J. F. Baker, violin and harmonica gave several selections and also led in community singing.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Webb and also Dr. and Mrs. Milton Webb and two children, of Saskatoon, Sask., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Webb and other relatives in this vicinity.

Miss Florence Reid, school teacher of Trenton visited Miss Leola Pollock over the week-end.

Mrs. John Forsyth and Mrs. Cecil Austin of Springbrook, victims of the auto accident on the Belleville highway some days ago are home now and doing nicely.

Sand from the Gobi Desert, evidently carried for hundreds of miles above the rain and snow clouds, fell recently in Sutsien, China.

The engagement is announced of Valeta Eileen Preston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce C. Preston, Lakefield, to Mr. Hilliard Ernest Crowe, son of Mr. Richard Crowe and the late Mrs. Crowe of McCracken's Landing. The marriage to take place the early part of June.

Yesterday afternoon St. Paul's Presbyterian Sunday School room was turned into a veritable Spring garden, huge quantities of lilacs, tulips and apple blossoms filling every corner. The occasion was a reception and tea given to the mothers and babies of the Cradle Roll department by the superintendent. About two hundred and fifty were present. The guests were received by Mrs. Robert Ross, assisted by Mrs. A. T. Barr and Miss Elizabeth Walker. Tea was poured by Mesdames H. O. Steer and T. H. Taylor, at a table placed on the platform. The central decoration was a large silver basket filled with yellow and red tulips, standing on a reflector, around the edge of which were apple blossoms. Four tall yellow candles in junior silver holders completed the appointments, with a cloth of Irish lace. Tables for the mothers were arranged in horseshoe design, the decorations being in apple green with double yellow tulips, while the same color scheme was carried out for the children's tables, with sprigs of apple blossoms scattered over the green. Rev. Dr. Barr pronounced the blessing, and members of the Faithful Workers' Mission Band and C.G.I.T. girls assisted in serving refreshments. Miss Walker introduced those taking part in a short program, as follows: Piano solo by Miss Dorothy Ross; recitation, Margaret Flett; guitar solo, Buster Seel; violin solo, Bill Moorehead, with Don Ross playing accompaniment. Mrs. James Dutton gave a very interesting and instructive short talk on the "Stewardship of Motherhood" and Mrs. V. H. Whittington sang very sweetly, "Does Jesus Care?" accompanied by Mrs. G. W. Craw. On behalf of the mothers, Mrs. James Flett tendered the hostess a very heary vote of thanks to which Mrs. Robert Ross replied. Decorations were in charge of Miss Violet Davidson.

SOME CEREMONIAL FORMS TO BE OBSERVED BY A BRIDAL PARTY

June, the favorite month for weddings is nearly here. Whether a marriage ceremony is performed at church or at home, the procedure is practically the same, always dignified and solemn, with the gaiety following at the reception. Certain forms of a church wedding will be told the bride and groom by the church official. Others are matters of custom and etiquette. Once a marriage was not legal if the ceremony took place after 12 o'clock, noon. Today the ceremony holds good at any time of day or night. The observances given for a simple church wedding would be slightly modified for a home wedding where there would be no chancel.

• • • • • • •

ENTRANCE OF BRIDAL PARTY

The bridal party and groom enter the church simultaneously just as the opening of the rear church door gives the signal to the organist to begin the entrance wedding march. The groom, with right hand ungloved, and the best man with both gloves on, walk side by side following the officiating clergyman into the church from the vestry. The bridal party enter from the rear church door, first the ushers by twos, then the bridesmaids by twos, with maid of honor alone and then the flower girl if there is one. If not the bride on the right arm of her father, or mother, or whoever is giving her away, enters after the maid of honor. There should be approximately four feet spacing between each couple in the party, all of whom should keep step with the music.

• • • • • • •

AT THE CHANCEL

At the chancel the ushers divide and form a segment of a circle at right and left, leaving sufficient space for the bridesmaids to stand between them and the bride, half on each side of the bridal couple. Or the ushers may separate, stand and follow after the maids to their positions. The maid of honor may stand next the bride or at the left and a few steps behind her with the flower girl at her left. The father stands next to the bride, but a few steps behind her after surrendering her to the groom, who steps forward and with his ungloved right hand takes the right hand of the bride and slips it into his arm as they turn to face the clergyman. The bride changes her bouquet from her right to her left hand, she gives her right hand to the groom.

• • • • • • •

THE FATHER'S PART

At the words in the ceremony, "Who giveth this woman to this man?" the father steps forward and takes the right hand of the bride who turns slightly toward him. The father gives his daughter's hand into that of the clergyman, saying as he does so, "I do" and immediately slips into the end seat of the left hand pew by his wife.

• • • • • • •

PROCEEDING TO THE ALTAR

The clergyman gives the bride's hand into that of the groom, and together they follow the clergyman to the altar. The maid of honor and best man follow them, the first stepping to the left, and the latter to the right, when the bride reaches the altar.

• • • • • • •

MAID OF HONOR AND BEST MAN'S DUTIES

The duty of the best man is to produce the wedding ring at the right time, and to escort the maid of honor out of the church when the party leaves. The duty of the maid of honor is to take the bridal bouquet when the bride removes her glove, or slips the ripped finger back, when the ring ceremony is performed. She lifts the bride's veil at the end of the ceremony, returns the bouquet before the bride turns to leave, and sees that her train is straightened as she walks from the altar.

• • • • • • •

LEAVING THE CHURCH

When the ceremony is finished the organ peals forth the wedding march, usually Mendelsohn's, and the bridal party leave the ushers and bridesmaids forming couples, beind the best man and maid of honor as they march after the bridal couple. The flower girl preceeds them strewing their path with roses or rose petals.

RICH AMATEUR SPORTSMAN WINS MOTOR RACE WITH NO. 13

Spurns Superstition When Forced to Change Car, Take 'Fatal' Number

WOMEN SCORE

Brooklands.—A car bearing the number 13—a number normally eliminated from motor racing—made history at Brooklands by winning the great Jubilee International Trophy race, decided over 100 laps totalling 261 miles, at an average speed of 86.96 m.p.h.

Behind this victory lies a most unusual story, the driver, Louis Fontes a rich young amateur airman of Caversham, Reading.

Mr. Fontes, an almost unknown driver in the racing world entered an M.G. car for this big race, but at the last moment, finding the car was not ready, he changed his plans.

He visited the workshop of Messrs. Thomson and Taylor, of Brooklands, the constructors of Sir Malcolm Campbell's Blue Bird, a few days before the race, and bought an Alfa Romeo car originally belonging to the Hon. Brian Lewis, winner with it of the corresponding race two years ago.

Then Mr. Fontes asked the race committee if he could change his class.

The committee pondered a while, and then said he could do so only on condition that he took the racing number 13.

Mr. Fontes—he is only 22—said: "I am not superstitious, and I am quite happy to start with that number."

At the massed start—there were 39 cars competing—he went away in a comparatively leisurely fashion, though the pace was terrific.

For 25 laps no one thought of Mr. Fontes, but after the 50-lap mark, when he was looming very much in the picture, the crowd began to ask who he was.

By this time, many leading drivers had disappeared.

Drivers' Escapes

The pace was still very fierce, and many drivers had narrow escapes. Cars were spinning round at the "S" bend, while the drivers struggled to regain control before a horde of cars descended on them from behind.

A. H. L. Eccles met with serious trouble when travelling at more than 130 m.p.h. towards Byfleet banking.

There was a crash of breaking metal as he was nearly thrown out of his seat by a tremendous blow from underneath his floorboard.

His drive shaft had apparently come adrift, and in a moment the car was diving down towards the crowd lining the track.

Spinning Car's Peril

At the last moment he pulled the wheel round, whereupon his machine spun round in circles. Despite the fact that he had his brakes fully applied, it shot up the banking tail first, in front of other cars travelling at two miles a minute, but fortunately came to rest on the rim of the track.

The only two women in the race—Mrs. T. H. Wisdom and Miss Doreen Evans—put up very fine performances, being placed among the 12 to finish.

Mrs. Wisdom, driving a Riley, drove for the greater portion of the race, but owing to the severe nature of the course, was attacked by severe cramp in her right shoulder. Rather than risk weakening, she pulled into the pits, and handed the car over to her husband, who brought the car home to fourth place.

Freddie Dixon, at the wheel of another Riley, drove a magnificent race. From the start he held his position in the field and gradually crept up to second place.

Three laps from the end, however, he was flagged in for a tire change, which was carried out in record time, thus enabling him to keep his position.

Sir Malcolm Cheered

When Sir Malcolm Campbell drove his new single-seater M.G. over the finishing line into sixth place, with blood from a cut streaming all over his face, he was given a big cheer.

This car, the latest product of the M.G. factory, was only delivered last week, and was consequently almost untried.

This was only the second time in his life that Sir Malcolm had driven a racing car of such small horsepower. The only previous effort was at Daytona in 1931, when he drove a baby Austin and set up a world's class speed record at the same time he was making a world speed record with Blue Bird.

Miss Doreen Evans was given considerable applause when she brought her M.G. into seventh place behind Sir Malcolm.

SMART GIRL "SPIES" NEWEST YARD WORRY

London.—Secret plans have been drawn up at Scotland Yard to deal with a new menace—the girl spy who works for a gang of crooks.

A plausible young woman calls at a prosperous house in the suburbs on some ingenious excuse.

She engages the mistress in a conversation which is dexterously turned to the ways of husbands and other men-about-the-home.

The next event is a burglary carefully timed to avoid the risk of interference by male members of the household.

INVALID GIRL TO TALK ON 'RIGHT TIME' ROBOT

"Golden Voice of Telephone" Competed in Trials for Honor From Hospital

Gloucester.—Pick up your telephone, dial, and get the correct time from a gramophone record clock, where the talking is done by "the perfect telephone voice," which belonged to a girl in a hospital bed.

After speaking from her sick bed in Cheltenham General hospital where she has undergone a minor operation, Miss Elsie Savery of Cheltenham telephone exchange was placed first in a test for "the girl with the golden voice."

The test was carried out at the Guildhall, Gloucester, and telephone girls from Gloucester, Worcester, and Hereford districts competed.

The purpose is to find the ideal woman's recording voice for the "speaking clocks" which will be introduced experimentally by the post-office this year at three centres, including London.

Miss Savery was known to have a delightful voice, and when the district manager heard she was in hospital and likely to be out of the competition, the consent of the hospital authorities and a telephone was installed at Miss Savery's bedside.

Ten competitors were questioned by the district manager. Most of the answers involved numbers, but one sentence was: "She has her fan in her hand."

CAT RESCUER FELL CAUGHT IN A COAT

Improvised Life Net Saves Man in 60-Foot Fall From Bridge

Sunderland.—When Stephen Henry Bell, aged 33, a Sunderland motor-driver, fell from the ironwork of Wearmouth Bridge, Sunderland, he was caught in the outstretched overcoat of a policeman.

Bell had climbed over the bridge, which is 100 feet above the River Wear, to rescue a cat.

His foot caught, and he hung 60 feet above ground-level. It was some time before policemen heard his shouts.

Three constables tried in vain to climb a pipe. A rope dropped from the top of the bridge failed to reach Bell. When the officers used a ladder it broke.

The fire brigade arrived with a longer ladder—but in the meantime Bell had fallen, to be caught by two constables with an outstretched coat.

Bell suffered only slight bruises.

NEW RADIO STATIONS REACH EVERY CORNER

B.B.C. Building Chain of High Power Transmitters —New Type Aerial

London.—The B.B.C. has embarked on a national building scheme that will mean better reception for listeners in "out of the way" and poorly served places.

The announcement that there is to be a transmitting station at Bangor, North Wales, and a new one at Plymouth, brings the number of new B.B.C. stations projected and under construction up to five.

Work on the first of these—the new Northern Inland one, near Belfast—is now nearing completion. The station will be opened before the end of this year.

At Belfast the B.B.C. is trying out, what is to the B.B.C. a new type of aerial. There will be only one steel aerial mast, and that will be the aerial.

The advantage of this is that the signals sent out will be non-directional — that is, signals of equal strength will be sent out in all directions.

50 Kilowatts

The new Northern Ireland station will have a power of 50,000 watts against the 1,000 of the present station.

Work has also been started at Burghead, near Elgin, on a high-powered relay station for northern Scotland. The foundations have been dug and building started.

The power for this and for a new station to cover northeast England will probably be 50,000 watts.

No site for the northeast England station has yet been chosen, but the B.B.C. mobile transmitter is out in the district around Newcastle testing possible positions.

This station, when complete, will replace the present 1,000 watt station at Newcastle.

In addition to these five new stations, the B.B.C. may build a small relay station in the Bristol district.

And they have also to erect a short-wave television station in London by the autumn.

POLICE ARE REPULSED FACE POWDER BARRAGE

Suffragettes Victorious in Election Fight While Compacts Last

Paris.—Montmartre streets rang with the "battle-cry" of the suffragettes recently and a squad of police went down under a barrage of face powder.

It was municipal election day.

Leading French feminist, Mme. Weiss, who has been campaigning for election in a Paris district, was asked to move on when she placed her "voting" booth outside a police station.

"Down with the opposition," cried Mme. Weiss. A dozen handbags clicked open—and a shower of powder and boxes swept down on the police.

Sneezing and rubbing the powder from their smarting eyes the gendarmes retreated.

But three minutes later they came back to find the suffragettes unarmed. The supply of powder had run out.

Mme. Weiss and two of her disciples were seized and carried screaming into the police station.

ARTIST FIGHTS FIRE

Fordingbridge, Hants.—In pyjamas and dressing-gown, Augustus John, the famous artist, and his son Robin, helped to fight a fire which destroyed valuable pictures at his Fordingbridge, Hants, home recently. With extinguishers and buckets of water they put out the flames before the fire brigade arrived from seven miles away.

PUT HIS LAST COIN IN 'PHONE ARTIST GETS JOB ON RADIO

"Perfect Microphone Voice," Say Officials Casting Him for New Show

SLEPT IN FIELDS

London.—A few weeks ago Gilbert Rumbold put his last two pence in a London telephone box and dialed WEL 4468, the headquarters of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

He told an official who answered the call that he was a starving artist and suggested that the story of his life might make an interesting topic for "In Town To-night."

The official was impressed, and arrangements were made for Mr. Rumbold to broadcast in the Saturday night feature.

Among the millions of listeners were certain high officials of the B.B.C. They listened — not so much to the adventures Mr. Rumbold was relating, but to his voice.

"Here is the perfect microphone voice," they agreed, and a message was given Mr. Rumbold as he left the studio inviting him to meet them.

Microphone and gramophone confirmed the first impressions, and Mr. Rumbold was offered a leading part in the new B.B.C. feature, "The Red Saraffan," which is being broadcast with Emilio Colombo and an orchestra he has formed especially for the show.

"I can hardly believe my change in fortune," Mr. Rumbold said.

"Six weeks ago I was tramping London, hungry and homeless. In sheer desperation I telephoned the B.B.C., and with that last twopence changed my whole future outlook.

"Instead of sleeping in the open, I can now afford a hotel."

Mr. Rumbold, who is 39, went to London University to study science, but he became an artist.

OIL REFINERY WASTE TO PRODUCE RUBBER

Russian Scientists Threaten Upset for Vast Industry

Leningrad.—New processes for making synthetic rubber out of the waste products of oil refineries and from calcium carbide are being tried out in Russia.

Heads of the Soviet industrial syndicates expect shortly to be manufacturing the product at the rate of 20,000 tons a year.

This will have far-reaching effects on the rubber-growing plantations of the Far East, and will upset considerably the working of the Rubber Restriction Scheme, under which 30 per cent. of the trees are not being tapped so as to force up raw rubber prices.

The first factory for manufacturing rubber from oil waste is now being started in Moscow.

About 35 lbs. of rubber are produced from the waste products obtained from refining a ton of oil. In the past these products have in many cases had to be wasted.

The rubber is said to have all the working and wearing qualities of real rubber, and to be very much cheaper.

MOST WORK IN 14 YEARS

London.—Unemployment dropped by 109,410 in March, and compared with a year ago there was a reduction of 103,735.

Though the total of unemployed on the registers on April 15 was 2,044,460, it is estimated that there were approximately 10,320,000 insured persons at work—a record for fourteen years.

This total of persons at work was 120,000 more than at March 25 last and 175,000 more than at April 25 last year.

PEER'S DAUGHTER MUST DISBAND MENAGERIE

Kept "Nuisance" of 70 Dogs, 16 Monkeys, 100 Birds and Goat

Chiselhurst.—Monkeys, cats, dogs and birds were mentioned in the chancery division, when an injunction was granted Harold Molins, of Mulbarton Court, Chislehurst, to restrain the Hon. Mrs. Alice McLaren Morrison, of Kemmal Warren, Chislehurst, eldest daughter of the late Lord Pirbright, from creating a nuisance by keeping the animals.

H. B. Vaisey, K.C., for Mr. Molins, said Mrs. Morison had chosen to treat her house as a menagerie on a large scale.

He produced photographs of certain rooms in the house, "stocked with cages."

When an inspector visited the premises he found 70 dogs, 11 puppies, 27 cats, 16 monkeys, 100 birds and one goat.

The dogs kept Mr. Molins awake at night.

Mr. Wynn Parry, for Mrs. Morrison said the granting of the injunction would mean the removal of every animal.

"I cannot help that," said Mr. Justice Bennett. "It is wholly unreasonable conduct."

PRIEST BANS LIPSTICK BREACH OF THE FAST

"Impossible Not to Swallow Some of It," Says Irate Cleric

New Southgate.—Another priest has found it necessary to warn communicants at his church that they will not be served if they use lipstick.

He is the Rev. Joseph Sunn, rector of Our Lady of Lourdes, the Roman Catholic church here.

In referring to the matter at mass, he said that in spite of a previous warning the practice of using lipstick was growing.

"It is questionable if it is not actually breaking the rules of the fast," he said, "for it is impossible to smear so much cosmetic on the lips without swallowing some of it."

On a previous occasion a priest had asked a woman communicant to wash her lips before he administered the sacrament.

The vicar of Christ Church, Belper, Derbyshire, the Rev. H. Walker, who threatened in his parish magazine to refuse the chalice to women who used lipstick, told a reporter that "it was a piece of affectionate advice."

BENCH BLESSES MARRIAGE

Girl Charges Mother Objects from Spite—Mysterious Letter

Wellingborough.—An objection by the girl's mother to the marriage of Doris Ypres Blake, 19, to Reginald Saunders, carpenter, of Raunds, was overruled by the bench.

The magistrates gave their blessing to the wedding and the couple left court hand in hand.

The girl alleged that her mother's action was due to spite. She said she earned $12 a week, of which she gave her mother seven dollars.

Mrs. Beake said that was not the reason, and she handed a letter to the magistrates explaining her refusal.

'PHONE IN EVERY VILLAGE

London.—As far as practicable, by the end of 1936, no village in the mainland of Great Britain and Northern Ireland which had a post office should be without a public telephone, according to a recent announcement of the postmaster general.

UNDERGROUND DEATH HOUSE TO SHELTER 600,000 PARISIANS

435 Miles of Tunnels Offer Bomb Protection Beside Bones of Pompadour

OLD STONE QUARRY

Paris.—In a labyrinth of 435 miles of tunnels more than 60 feet beneath the surface, Paris plans to protect its citizens from the ravages of war.

This bombproof shelter, now being repaired and strengthened, comprises 864 acres of old stone quarries.

Over 600,000 people could be housed at once in this vast underground cellar which the recently-appointed national air defence commission has taken over.

The main difficulty lies in building sufficient entraces—there is at present only one—large enough for the population to bolt underground in numbers like rabbits at a given signal.

The scheme in hand provides for the piercing of new entrances—like those of the underground railway stations—at strategic centres of the city.

Stone That Built Paris

For years these quarries whence the stones that went to build the greater part of old Paris, including the Cathedral of Notre Dame, were cut, have been left untouched save for periodic visits by engineers watching for fissures which may endanger buildings above.

Only a small part—about three-quarters of a mile near the entrance—has been known to the general public as the "catacombs." Here, the bones of six million people taken from old cemeteries and excavated during building work have been stacked in rows along the sides of the quarry tunnels.

An Eerie Dungeon

Accompanying a municipal engineer through this eerie dungeon a reporter flashed his torch on the skull and thigh bones of Madame de Pompadour, on the remains of Roman and Gallic warriors, British and Scottish soldiers who fell in the medieval wars, and on many victims of the Terror.

"As we are now so you one day will be" reads one the many grim legends staring every few yards from the seemingly unending wall of bones.

In this gruesome place it is intended that women and children should seek safety—if need be in the middle of the night—in case of aerial attack.

Lighting Arrangements

Although plans are still at the embryonic stage preliminary work will include the strengthening and buttressing of the walls and roofs of the caverns, providing for the eventual storage of food and lighting arrangements.

The quarries have been carefully mapped. They run under Belleville and parts of Montmartre, most of the southern part of the Latin quarter, the Trocadero section and Auteuil.

DIES WATCHING FIRE

The Thrill of Spectacular London Fire Kills Woman Spectator

London—A woman became so excited at watching a recent fire that she collapsed and died.

She was Mrs. Helen Rodger, 65, of Cleveland St. W., and she was visiting her daughter, Mrs. Cannon, in Dyot St., when a fire broke out in store rooms above, a chocolate factory, in Bucknall St., near the junction of New Oxford St. and Shaftesbury Ave.

Flames shot from the windows of the four-storeyed building and there were showers of glass. Volumes of smoke rolled into the neighboring lanes in fog density.

Over 20 fire engines arrived, and they were augmented later by supplementary engines and 150 firemen. Water towers were run up and firemen wore gas masks.

TRAMPS GET FAG, BUN IN NEW REST COTTAGE

Many "Well Educated" Young Men Use It

Cambridge—A rest cottage for tramps has been opened at Cambridge by the deputy mayor and mayoress, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Spalding and their friends.

Tramps do not always time their arrival at the casualty wards at opening time. Now they can take refuge in the cottage, which is open daily, except Sundays, from four till six.

Visitors are given tea, a scone and a cigarette. Papers and writing material are provided.

The average number of visitors is about ten a day.

An upstairs room has been converted into a small chapel, where short voluntary services are held.

Mrs. Spalding said that several schemes were on foot for providing additional help to the wayfarer, but their funds were small.

"However," she said, "we get most things given to us.

"We find that young men—many of whom are well educated—use the room a great deal."

BEFRIENDED CLERIC STOLE SON'S MEDALS

Woman Lost $300 After Giving Young Curate a Room

Wrexham — The Rev. William Derek Terence Ingram, until recently curate at Gresford, Denbighshire, was sent to prison for six months for stealing articles worth $400.

It was stated that his victim, a well-to-do parishioner named Mrs. Soames of Gresford, who had invited him to stay at her home until a small cottage he had chosen had been made habitable, had described him as "a very charming young man, very kind and thoughtful".

Evidence was given that when Mrs. Soames returned to her home after a temporary absence with her maid, something came to their knowledge which led them to go to Ingram's bedroom, where they found a locked suitcase.

The case was opened and was found to contain a large number of articles belonging to Mrs. Soames, including a $300 diamond brooch, and a military cross and other war decorations belonging to her son.

He was arrested in Belfast.

He received his theological training in Dublin, and was ordained on the Gold Coast.

Doctors called for the defence, including the medical officer of Shrewsbury jail, expressed the opinion that Ingram was mentally unstable, but Dr. Grace, a Chester pathologist, said he was not certifiable, although he was on the high road to certification.

LONDON TOWER GUARD DOES NOT TOAST KING

Loyalty of Fusileers Never Challenged—Back After 250 Years

London.—The regiment whose officers never toast the King's health because their loyalty has never been in doubt has returned home after an absence of 250 years.

The Royal Fusiliers, raised in the Tower of London in the reign of James II are mounting jubilee guard in the Tower.

Eighty per cent. of the regiment are Londoners, and the men feel it is like coming home again—home after two and a half centuries spent in all parts of the world.

The Fusiliers are the only white troops who have entered the Forbidden City of Lhassa, and the only white troops who have fought at an altitude of 19,000 feet above sea level. That was in the 1904 expedition to Tibet.

They came from Pembroke Dock to London by motor-coach, and brought forty tons of equipment, furniture, stores, and silver cups and trophies won at musketry.

A wooden spoon hangs in the sergeants' mess. It is presented to the N.C.O. who makes the worst shot of the year!

THREE-DECKER PULPIT IN CHURCH RESTORED

Reopen Historic Edifice Where Royalty Often Worshipped

Esher, Surrey.—In honor of St. George's Day, the historic little church of St. George here—which, except for rare occasions, has been closed since 1894 — was reopened.

Less than 100 years ago fashionable Londoners in Sunday silks and velvets used to travel by carriages to the services, for Queen Victoria worshipped there beside her "dear Uncle Leopold" — Prince Leopold, afterwards Leopold I of the Belgians.

Scraped clean of the grime accumulated during the years it has been used as a "parish lumber room" — painted, restored and refurnished the church, over whose altar hangs the royal arms of George II, looked its old self again.

Dr. Golding-Bird preached from the old triple-decker oak pulpit, which, in tiers, provides accommodation for preacher, clergyman and parish clerk.

The chamber pew built by the first Duke of Newcastle, and divided for the use of his own family and that of his brother, Henry Pelham, has been restored. Prince Farmer Digs

ANXIOUS FATHER SCOLDS GIRL WEARING SHORTS—SUICIDES

"Sensitive" Daughter Drowns Self When Reprimands Extend to Clothes

PREVIOUS THREATS

Newburn-on-Tyne.—Rebuked by her father for wearing shorts after a jubilee tea party, Sarah Isobel Heeney, 19, daughter of an unemployed miner, ran off and drowned herself in the river.

This was revealed at the inquest when the father, Robert Heeney, said that his daughter tried on some shorts in a friend's house.

When she returned home he rebuked her for it.

He said to the coroner: "I lost my head and gave her a tap and told her she must stop it."

"I sent her to her room," he continued, "and that was the last I saw of her."

A Sensitive Girl

He added that he had several disputes with the girl about the hour at which she was expected to arrive home at night.

She was highly strung and sensitive, and had previously threatened to take her life.

Ellen Clark, one of the girl's friends, said that she found Sarah crying.

The girl ran to the river and on to a disused jetty. There she removed her coat.

Miss Clark and a man called her to return and they attempted to crawl along the piles of the jetty, but just as they reached her the girl jumped into the river and was drowned.

TRUCK JUMPS PRECIPICE

Four British Soldiers and Indian Killed on Mountain Trail

Simla, India.—Four British soldiers belonging to the Fifth (Medium) Brigade of the Royal Artillery and an Indian bearer were killed recently when the truck in which they were riding fell over a precipice.

There were 13 men in the truck—ten soldiers and three Indian bearers. Besides those killed, six are reported to be seriously injured.

The names of the dead soldiers are: W. E. Brown, J. H. Hughes, G. Driver, and H. A. Robertson. With the exception of Robertson, whose father lives in Calcutta, all the men were domiciled in England. It appears from first accounts that the truck was rounding a bend when the steering apparatus broke and the truck crashed into the parapet and toppled over the side of the hill.

BEES SWARMED ON EXHAUST

Hanford, Cal.—An unusual traffic situation was created in Hanford when a swarm of bees droned down the main street and settled in a parked car, completely covering the exhaust pipe. Pedestrians watched Ernest Depuy gather the bees into a hive.

LANDED STURGEON SEVEN FEET LONG

Fish Caught in Lake Erie Weighed 175 Pounds

Sandusky, O.—A female sturgeon, weighing 175 pounds and measuring a trifle under seven feet in length, was caught in Lake Erie off Kelleys Island.

The haul, the biggest in 50 years here, was made by operators of a small fishing boat. According to estimates here, there were between 40 and 50 pounds of roe—or eggs—in the fish, which, converted into caviar will make 40 or 50 pints selling at $3 a pint. Sturgeon steak and smoked sturgeon sell for 70 to 80 cents a pound.

A VERY DUMB BIRD

Trying to Pierce Tin for Seventh Year

Seattle, Wash.—The dumbest bird in the world is back at First Station No. 22 again. For the seventh year in succession the bird, a woodpecker, arrived this spring, and for the seventh year in succession it is vainly trying to bore its way through a piece of tin weather stripping at the base of the station flagpole.

OLD CHAIR WORTH $100

Pottstown, Pa.—Mrs. Leroy Mauger bought an old chair for $2 at a household auction. Later she found $100 in currency under the seat cushion. Mrs. Mauger returned the money to former owners.

WANT MORE ELEPHANTS CHEAPER FOR FARMERS

One Does Work of 16 Oxen, One-Fifth Upkeep of Tractor

Brussels. — A report from Gangara na Bodio, in the Belgian Congo, states that the elephant training station there is finding difficulty in supplying demands from African agriculturists and foreign zoological institutions.

At present there are 40 beasts at the station, including the elephant-instructors, the animals kept to put their newly captured colleagues through their paces. They are caught by experienced hunters, who choose elephants between the ages of 12 and 15 years, and it takes 12 months to school them.

It is first necessary to get them used to the presence of man, and then the elephants must learn to carry a mahout and be guided by him—an instruction not without danger.

That accomplished, the elephants are taught to draw and carry vehicles and tree-trunks, the weight of which is gradually increased. It is estimated that a fully-trained elephant can do the work of 15 or 16 oxen, and that it is five times cheaper to maintain than a motor-tractor of the same power.

ONCE ON RELIEF

James J. Braddock, who fights Max Baer in the Long Island Bowl on June 13 for the heavyweight championship of the world and for a pot of gold, was broke and on the relief a few months ago. He is married and has three small children. Braddock's share of the fight with Baer should net him at least $30,000.

GOLFER SLAPS LADY POLICE SYMPATHETIC

Pram Pusher Wandering Over Course With Children—Man Pays

Glasgow. — Sympathy was extended by a police superintendent at southern police court to Mr. Robert Howarth, a golfer, who admitted having in a fit of exasperation assaulted a woman by slapping her on the face, on the Toryglen course.

Police Superintendent Brown said that the golfer found the course impeded by women and chidlren. The woman mentioned in the case was pushing a perambulator, and she got directly in the line of play.

The golfer asked her to get out of the way, and words followed.

He then pushed the perambulator to one side and struck her in the face.

A fine of $1.75 was imposed.

SWALLOWED FISHING HOOK

Piece of Lead on Line Saves Young Lad

Cape Town, S.A.—A boy who was fishing from the rocks at Mossel Bay accidentally swallowed his hook to which the line was attached. Failing to bring it up, he cut the line near his mouth and hurried home. His parents hit upon an ingenious plan. A ball of lead was pierced, and through the hole the line was threaded. The lead was then greased and the boy swallowed it. Its weight dislodged the hook from his gullet, and both the ball and the hook were easily pulled up.

PREPARE POISONED DAGGERS FOR MURDER, PILLAGE ORGY

31 Hindoos Sentenced for Plot "To Wage War on the King"

FINANCED BY CRIME

Calcutta.—Thirty-one Hindoos were sentenced by the high court here—six to life transportation and the rest to transportation or imprisonment varying from one to ten years—for their part in a plot to "wage war against the King" and overthrow the government. Four others were acquitted.

The court, in delivering judgment, stated that the object of the conspirators was a succession of armed risings throughout India with robbery and murder as subsidiary means to the end in view.

Funds for the conspiracy were to be drawn from the proceeds of crime and used to purchase explosive materials, arms, and ammunition.

"Murder of the State"

"The menace of the conspiracy to the security of the state and the community cannot be exaggerated," the judgment stated.

"Murder of the individual is heinous and terrible enough, but treason is murder of the state and of all crimes the most universally disastrous. It must be stamped out with all the forces that the state can command. We cannot shut our eyes to the conditions in Bengal, where treason flourishes more vigorously than in any other province in India."

The accused men were associated with 500 others in the plot, said a note prepared by the public prosecutor, who went on to describe the conspiracy as having been hatched in a detention camp.

Emissaries were sent to different provinces, where bomb factories were started and arms and ammunition secretly accumulated.

Poisonous ointment was made with which to smear daggers.

LOCATES LOST KIN BY A LUCKY CHANCE

Calls Up Name in Telephone Book on Hunch

Pueblo, Colo.—A hasty consultation of a Pueblo city directory resulted in the reunion of George and E. B. Babcock, brothers, who had not seen one another for 53 years. E. B. Babcock, 79, and his wife were en route to their home in Sioux City, Iowa, when they stopped here between trains.

Acting on a hunch that his brother might be living in Pueblo, he found the name in the directory. The two were born in New York state and separated in South Dakota. Each had made many unsuccessful attempts to locate the other.

LIGHT INCREASES ON JUTLAND LORE AS THE TIME GOES ON History Records Potent Facts of Great Naval Battle Which Took Place 19 Years Ago To-morrow (Friday, May 31).

Written for The Canadian Press
By HARRY EOCLES
(Copyright, 1935, by The Canadian Press)

Nineteen years ago to-morrow was fought the greatest sea fight of the War—and the controversy as to who won rages on. The Battle of Jutland as a conflict between greater ships, bigger guns and more combatants than ever before struggled on heaving waters provides the classic problem for the naval tactician. But on the greater questions there is no argument.

It is written in history that the German High Seas Fleet after inflicting heavier damage on the British Grand Fleet than it received itself, retired to the base where it had already lain nearly two years, and never emerged again until it surrendered.

More light has been shed on Jutland in the passing years. It is known now that the German Grand Fleet sallied forth in hopes of meeting, not the British battle fleet, but a scouting force or at least no more than portions of the main fleet. Once the titans collided, the British Fleet was unable to get a square grip on its elusive adversary. Twice the High Seas Fleet blundered into the teeth of the main British battle force, and twice it escaped; the third time it hacked its way through the tail of the British line in the darkness and found shelter.

In supreme command of the British fleet was Jellicoe; of the Germans, Reinhard von Scheer. It was caution against genius and in the end Jellicoe was right. In ship and men he could afford to lose more than von Scheer, and he did, heavily. But it has been said often and it remains true, that Jellicoe was the only man who could have lost the Great War for the Allies in the space of hours.

The Grand Fleet put to sea from its Scottish bases the night of May 30, warned of an impending German demonstration of some sort. The British had 28 battleships, nine battle-cruisers and eight armored cruisers; 26 light cruisers and 80 flotilla leaders and destroyers. The Germans had 22 battleships and five battle-cruisers; 11 cruisers and 63 flotilla leaders and destroyers. They were outnumbered in ships and in guns and in gunpower.

The initial encounter was accidental, between the light cruiser screen on the east of Beatty's scouting force of battle-cruisers, and the western wing of Hipper's scouting force, also composed of battle-cruisers. Hipper, the High Seas Fleet 50 miles behind him, turned back south; Beatty turned east to engage him and the Battle of Jutland was under way.

British Ships Go Down

Firing started at 3.48 p.m. Beatty's flagship, the Lion, was heavily hit. The Indefatigable was sunk with 57 officers and 980 men. The Queen Mary was rent by explosives and sank with 57 officers and 1,200 men. The German vessels were badly battered but the British shells did comparatively little damage, and not for lack of gunnery.

Beatty sighted the German battle fleet about 4.30. He wirelessed Jellicoe to the north and then succeeded perfectly in luring the main German battle force into the jaws of the British Grand Fleet.

His enemy approaching unawares, Jellicoe turned his line to the east, the Grand Fleet widening into a triangle into the centre of which von Scheer was steaming. Battle-cruisers at the right of the British lines were first to catch the blast of the storm and the Defence, flagship of Rear-Admiral Arbuthnot, was sunk. The Warrior and the Wiesbaden were disabled.

As the lighter action cleared Scheer realized his danger and at 6.35 executed the first of his bold manoeuvres, a skilful right-about turn screened by his destroyers. Jellicoe pursued to the eastward. Vague reports of a submarine attack led Jellicoe to order his divisions to close in to the westward and Scheer, believing the British now south of him, walked into another trap, turning to the east and finding the Grand Fleetacross his path. At 7.12 began another major action. Once again the British had the tactical advantage, and once again von Scheer, as his main vessels came under concentrated fire, ordered another about-face. He headed westward, away from home.

About 8 p.m. von Scheer veered south and Beatty's fore-ranging battle-cruisers once more matched gun for gun with the German scouting force at the head of the High Seas Fleet. At 8.30 Jellicoe for the third time seemed in fine tactical position for an onslaught on the battle force but Scheer foresaw the collision and turned away to the west. Night gathered.

When Darkness Came

Their adversaries now lost in the darkness, the British Fleet took up cruising stations. They were well between the Germans and their base. A few minutes later, about 9.30, Scheer started tentatively to the east, hoping the British fleet was again south of him but determined to break through at any cost. German advance flotillas found the rear of the Grand Fleet and went through without much trouble—they managed to pick up part of the British challenge through indiscreet signalling. British light-cruisers that found themselves in contact with the German scouting force suffered heavily but the Frauenlob was sunk.

Von Scheer had shore information that assured him the main British fleet was to the south, not east or straddling his course. British destroyers put up a valiant show against the goliaths but of course could not stop them and the Grand Fleet was in the dark in more ways than one. The High Seas Fleet before it cleared again ran past part of the British light cruiser forces and sank the Black Prince.

Just before midnight the Valiant and then the Malaya reported "big enemy ships" but they were vague reports, and not even then — and not for some time afterwards—did Jellicoe know the Germans were crossing his wake. Two hours later they were sighted again and in one of the many epics of that battle a destroyer flotilla under Stirling managed to sink the battleship Pommern.

Jellicoe, hampered by lack of information, finally gave up hope when at 4.15 a.m. he received an Admiralty message reporting that nearly two hours earlier the High Seas Fleet was only 16 miles off Horn Reef and safety.

The Germans lost one battleship. The British lost three battle-cruisers and the Germans one. The British lost three cruisers; the Germans four light-cruisers. The British lost eight destroyers, the Germans five. In men, the British lost 328 officers and 5,769 other ranks; the Germans, 160 and 2,385.

FUEL TENDERS RECOMMENDED

Property Committee of City Council Gives Thought to Next Winter.

ICE FOR PARKS.

Fuel tenders were opened at a meeting of the Property Committee held last evening under chairmanship of Alderman Fred Tuggey, and the following recommendation was made to City Council on motion of Alderman James Hamilton and Walter Stocker.

Fire Department, 50 tons at $7 to Conger Lehigh Coal Company; City buildings, 45 tons at $7.40 to McCarthy and Johnston; Queen Mary Hospital, 40 tons at $7.40 to McCarthy and Johnston; Rest room, 10 tons at $13.25 to Thomas A. Rehill; Relief office, 10 tons at $13.25 to H. B. Taylor and Son.

Other tenders taken into consideration by the committee were tabled from: H. B. McGinnis (Fitzgerald and Company), Peterborough Fuel and Transfer, A. Thompson, Sanitary Ice Company, W. Scott Company, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, W. J. Nelson, Scott Coal and Lumber Company.

Alderman Malcolm McIntyre, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee commenting on the fact that the fuel requirements for the Fire Department were estimated at 10 tons less than last winter's requirement, stated it as being due to the fact that the City Trust has recently had the attic renovated, which it is expected will have the effect of helping to keep the building warmer in the winter time.

Two tenders were tabled for ice supplies during the summer months, the contract being recommended by the committee for award to The Allin Ice Company to supply ice for Victoria and Confederation Parks fountains, and the Police Station and City Buildings fountains. Mayor Roland Denne, and Alderman James Ellis included in their motion that the chairman be instructed to make arrangements to include supply of ice for Inverlea Park in the tender.

Alderman Stocker raised the question of blower equipment as a means of economizing on the city fuel bills, while realizing that it was not possible to effect changes immediately. The chairman was instructed to investigate, and in promising to do so, he stated he was of opinion that blower equipment would not be long in paying for itself.

Long Shots Running at Leaside

THORNCLIFFE is going along in very good style despite the efforts of some twenty to twenty-five disgruntled horsemen to put it on the rocks by staging a partial strike. Billy Woollatt has made them every concession he can possibly make even to the extent of putting on nineteen races fashioned exclusively for Canadian breds. There are plenty of horses available even if these ones belonging to the insurgents are kept in their barns.

It was a lucky thing for Lindbergh on Tuesday that the horse Biography did not roll over on him when he fell going to the first turn. Most of the fans in the stands and on the lawns thought the lad was seriously hurt but it turned out to be only a severe shaking up . . . Stand Pat from the Seagram stable is entered in the big handicap to be decided at Detroit on Saturday next and to our way of thinking he has an excellent chance of copping this rich stake. One thing we do know is that he is in perfect shape and on razor edge.

TRACK superintendent Scotty McArthur is being congratulated on all sides for the tip top shape he has the Thorncliffe plant at the current running . . . Butch Keeling, the New York Ranger hockey star is sure picking up a few purses with his good Canuck bred Easter Hatter these days. The former Hatch colorbearer is right at the top of his form . . . Powder Monkey always did have a preference for Thorncliffe and the way he is going about his morning workouts leads us to believe he will win a purse before long. Miss Monoa is another that is not far off a winning effort and she can travel with the best of them.

We hear that Tricky's Son is coming along very nicely and that this horse No Retreat from the Riverdale stable looks like a comer and due to his last two excellent races we are picking him as a winner first time out. It looks as if the highly touted Listaro from the McLaughlin stable and winter book favorite for this year's King's Plate is just a morning glory. As a two-year-old he was unbeaten in the short clashes but this year when the distances were lengthened a bit he does not seem to have what it takes. This stable is having lots of luck this year, but it is all bad. They have only won two purses so far and besides that Horometer had to be retired.

FATAL FIFTH RESPONSIBLE PETES' LOSS

Ponies Click and Collect Four Runs Upon Scriver's Collapse.

CLINCH WIN IN 7TH.

[Special to The Examiner]

KINGSTON, May 30.—One big inning, during which "Spook" Scriver, Knotty Lee's ace hurler, was batted from the mound, gave Kingston Ponies four runs and enough to beat the Peterborough Johnson Motors in their first appearance of the local season here last night. The final score was 9 to 4.

It had been a see-saw battle for four innings; the game had been tied up twice and then along came the fifth and with it Scriver's collapse. Bill Calladine, playing third base for the Petes, was rushed to the mound and while he stayed off the runs for a while, another outbreak in the seventh, when the ponies gathered two more runs, put the game away for keeps, although Calladine only allowed one hit.

Petes Hit Hard Enough to Win

It was only a fair exhibition of baseball, with Peterborough hitting Bud Clancy hard enough to win the average game, but the Petes' infield suffered errors of omission at the wrong time and the Ponies ran riot with them in spots. For the first time this season the Ponies found their batting eyes when they needed the singles, with Jimmy Arniel, veteran catcher leading the way with three hits and a walk, while he tossed in a steal of third and also stole home when Quinn stole second to score a run.

The Ponies had scored a run in the second inning when Arniel's double drove home Ada, who had singled and the Petes had failed to connect safely when the third inning came 'round. After Scriver had fanned, Hollingsworth got the first Peterborough hit, a single to left. Calladine flied to centre but Foley came through with a swat over Ada's head for three bases, scoring Hollingsworth to tie the game. Kearns followed with a single, scoring Foley and putting the Petes in the lead. Murphy and Burton were both hit to fill the bases, but Ash rolled weakly to third.

Tied Count in Third

Ponies came back to tie the count again in the third when Scrutton walked, and was sacrificed to second by Compeau. McQuaid's hard single sent Scrutton home, but Scriver tightened to wreck the side.

Once more Ponies went one up in the fourth when Arniel walked and advanced on Quinn's sacrifice. Clancy fanned and Arniel went to third on a wild pitch. Scrutton raised an easy fly which fell into Hollingsworth's hand and then dropped out, Arniel scored on the play. Compeau singled, but was run down at second.

Tied Up Again in Fifth

Peterborough made the count 3 to 3 in their share of the fifth, Kearns' long three bagger and Murphy's single doing the work, but in the last of the inning Scriver blew up. McQuade started things with a bunt which he beat out as he slid into first. He stole second, while Smith and Ada both walked to fill the bases with none out. Joyce came through with a hard double to right field, scoring McQuaide and Smith. Arniel's single sent Ada home and drove Scriver to the showers. Calladine took his place, Whatley being set to third, and Calladine's first heave was a wild pitch on which Joyce trotted home. Whatley threw out Quinn, Clancy fanned and Scrutton flied to third to end the big inning.

Ponies Two in Seventh

In the seventh the Ponies scored their last two runs with two out. Arniel singled for his third hit and advanced on a passed ball. He stole third. Quinn walked and as he made a dash for second Arniel started for home, both runners being safe when Calladine threw to first to head off Quinn, instead of to second or home. Clancy drove a hit at Murphy, who picked up the ball and then fooled around with Long enough to allow the runner to make first and Quinn to score. Clancy, however was picked off first a minute later.

Clancy shut out the Petes in the sixth, seventh and eighth without a hit, but got into trouble in the ninth. Whatley was hit to start the frame and Hollingsworth dropped a single into left. Calladine forced Hollingsworth at second. Whatley pulling up at third. Foley walked to fill the bases and a walk to Kearns forced in a run. Murphy, however, ended the game when he hit in a fast double play.

BISONS HOLD SECOND PLACE BEATING LEAFS

Baltimore's 9-5 Defeat Drops Orioles to Fourth Position.

ROYALS IN FIFTH.

(By The Associated Press)

A sustained drive that has netted 11 victories in 15 games played since May 12, today had carried Buffalo Bisons from seventh place to within one game of the top in the International League pennant race.

Needing a victory to hold to their runner-up position, the Bisons yesterday took the pace-setting Toronto Maple Leafs into camp, 6-2, for their third triumph in five games played with the league leaders this year.

Newark Bears, however, vaulted into a virtual tie with the Bisons by whipping Baltimore Orioles, 9-5. The defeat dropped the Orioles to fourth place while Montreal Royals fell to fifth as they dropped an 8-3 decision to Rochester Redwings.

In beating the Leafs, Bill Harris, former major leaguer, shut out the Canadians with three hits until the ninth inning, while Ollie Carnegie drove out two home runs to increase his total for the year to 11 and drive five of the Bisons' runs across the plate. Harris let up in the ninth, however, and the Leafs connected with three successive singles, which coupled with a force out, gave them all of their runs.

The Newark-Baltimore game was a slugging contest, which ended in the eighth when a heavy rain forced cessation of hostilities. After the Orioles had scored one run in each of the first three innings, the Bears put on a three-run rally in the third to drive Harry Gumbert from the mound and take the lead. They counted three times in the sixth and twice in the eighth off Cy Moore, while Bob Miller was going to the rescue of Jack Lareeca. The former entered the game in the sixth and pitched shutout ball the last two frames.

The Redwings jumped away to a 6-1 lead in the first four innings and never were headed in their test with the Royals. Held to one run the first six innings by John Berly, the Royals rallied in the seventh and scored twice on four successive hits, but Johnny Michaels relieved Berly and stopped the threat short.

After battling on fairly even terms for seven innings, Syracuse Chiefs broke loose and counted seven times in the eighth and one in the ninth to defeat the lowly Albany Senators, 10-2.

YANKEES CONTINUE WINNING WAYS ON NEW YORK GROUNDS

Take Ninth Victory in 13 Starts By Copping a Six-inning Slugfest From Senators 7-4—Victory Puts Yanks in Virtual Tie With Chisox.

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer.)

Since the beginning of the season sundry baseball experts have pointed out New York Yankees as a team to watch this year, and if they keep going at their present rate it appears that all the other clubs will have to look upwards to watch them.

After an almost disastrous Western trip, the Yankees hit their stride when they returned home May 16 and Manager Joe McCarthy who had been ill, took the reins again. Since then, they have bowled over the invading Western clubs nine time in 13 starts and continued their spurt at Washington by taking a six-inning slugfest from the Senators, 7-4.

That triumph, which was halted in mid career by a rainstorm, put the Yanks into a virtual tie with the idle Chicago White Sox for the league lead. New York, having won two more games than the Hose and lost two more, remained somewhat behind in the percentage column.

Regular Slugfest

The lact of hitting which frequently has troubled the Yankees this year was nowhere in evidence as they hammered Bob Burke out in four innings with eight blows, including a homer by Pitcher Red Ruffing and Lou Gehrig's fifth circuit swat of the year. Each came with one on base. They also battered Henry Coppola for three more runs in the seventh and Washington got one back on Jake Powell's homer, but the whole business was wiped out when the rain interfered before the inning could be completed.

With many of the clubs travelling to the scenes of to-day's holiday bills, only three other big league games were played. Boston Red Sox took a running broad jump to a 10-8 victory over the Athletics and a half interest in third place in the American League while the Braves outlasted the Phillies in a National League batting match, 8-6. The Cardinals ended Cincinnati's cherished six-game winning streak with a 6-3 victory, while the Cubs-Pirates game was rained out.

Eight-Run Seventh

The Red Sox put in six innings gathering speed against Bill Dietrich then hopped of fto an eight-run seventh that brought three Philadelphia pitchers into action and decided the game. The Hose collected five hits and three passes in that one inning and got the benefit of two errors. The Braves worked it the other way, scoring seven times in the first two frames then standing off a series of Philly rallies when Bob Smith relieved Ed Brandt and pitched no-hit ball for the last five innings.

The Cardinals got even with Gene Schott, Cincinnati rookie hurler, for a five-hit defeat earlier in the season by smacking him for four runs in the second. The Reds threatened in the seventh, but Paul Dean, relieving Bill Walker, got a lucky break when Bill Campbell's pinch hit struck Oskie Slade on the base path for the third out.

ALDERVILLE WINS FROM ROSENEATH

Game Goes Ten Innings With Final Score Being 11 to 10.

ROSENEATH, May 30. (Examiner Correspondence).—Roseneath citizens took full advantage of sunshine and blue skies to enjoy the celebration of the Queen's birthday.

A snappy game of basball was played in the afternoon between Alderville and Roseneath. It was necessary to play ten innings which settled the score 11-10 in favor of the visitors, Alderville.

In the evening the Orange Hall was comfortably filled to hear the three act farce by Jay Tobias, entitled "Dotty and Daffy" presented by the Bailieboro Y.P.S.

A dance followed the play with Doug. Hutchinson and his rhythm Aces providing excellent music until the small hours in the morning.

The concert and dance were under the auspices of the Roseneath Women's Institute which cleared upward of $40.

Keene Outfit Beats Havelock Team 13-7

HAVELOCK, May 30 (Examiner Correspondence).—Keene softball team took the local team for a ride to the tune of 13-7 in a league game here at the local park grounds last night, when in the first eight innings the locals captured only two runs to the visitors 12. In the ninth Havelock took a sprint and brought the score up to seven counters in a desperate attempt to carry off the honors. Keene made only one run in this latter period. The visitors had it all over the local boys like a tent. It was a good clean game with lots of speed, and the Keene boys always on their toes. Teddy Hooper of Havelock was the umpire. This makes the second defeat on the home grounds for the locals, they having been bested by Norwood on the holiday. Hastings was defeated here in the first game of the season.

CENTRAL DROPS 11-4 DECISION

Visitors Collect 7 Runs in Two Innings to Gain Lead and Victory.

CLOUT BALL HARD.

Prince of Wales defeated Central, 11 to 4, in their School Softball League game played Tuesday in Central. The visitors went to town for seven runs the first two innings and added four more in the fifth, while Central, after a three-run splurge in the opening stanza, could do little. The Princes clouted the ball hard, while the fielding was spotty. Maldover went good on the victors' mound. The teams:

KINGSTON HERE SATURDAY GAME

Art Lepper Will Take Mound For Petes Against Threatening Ponies.

Seahorses Seek Revenge.

Kingston Ponies come here Saturday for their first local appearance of the season. They clash with Johnson Motors at three o'clock in Riverside Park. Fresh from last night's 9-4 victory over the Petes, Joe Daley's gang are quite cocky and predicting another win at Knotty Lee's expense. The Petes won their first game of the season but have lost two since then on the road. They must take Saturday's game to keep up with the other C.O.B.L. squads. With all the old-time rivalry between Kingston and Peterborough players, local fans can look for an exciting battle here day after to-morrow.

Art (Lefty) Lepper will do the Petes' pitching, with Frank Whitehouse in reserve. Lepper deserved a better fate in Oshawa last Saturday, as he twirled good ball till his team fell down on him in the fifth and sixth frames. He has a world of speed and a sharp-breaking hook that should bother the heavy list of left-hand hitters on the Ponies' lineup. Tammy Jamieson will likely get the flinging assignment for the visitors. Both teams expect to be at full strength for this contest.

GROVE XI. DRAWS TRINITY ELEVEN

Clever Cricket Display Given in Lakefield Game on Wednesday.

The Grove XI drew with the Trinity College School first eleven at Lakefield yesterday (Wednesday). The previous night's rain had made an excellent wicket. T.C.S. won the toss and elected to bat first. Seagram, coming in first wicket, played a faultless not out innings of 36 runs; Keefer contributed 27, when he stepped in front for a l.b.w. Kerr's 16 helped to raise the score to 106 for seven wickets. The game commenced at 2.30 and T.C.S. declared their innings closed at 4.15. After the tea interval, the Grove had an hour and a half to get the runs before stumps were drawn at 6 p.m. With four wickets down for 94 runs, and ten minutes left to play, it was an exciting finish. But the time was up before the Grove could get the necessary dozen runs. For the Grove, Fletcher's innings of 43 was splendid, getting all around the wicket. Strickland's 17 and Dunn's 11 also were valuable.

In the bowling, Fitzgerald, for the Grove, took 6 wickets for 21 runs, while Truax took two for Trinity for 18.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

DAY BY DAY

(By C. J. P.)

The baseball attraction of the evening is an intermediate "A" Lakeshore League tussle at 5.30 down in the Exhibition Grounds between Cobourg and the Petes. Shapes up like a nifty squabble. Both teams have a flock of ex-seniors aboard. Doug Moore's gang will include Fetter, Masterson, Corbett, Hillier, Padgett, Mein, L. Hollingsworth, Mowry, J. Bailey, Pryde and Dallin. Guys like Rollings, Ibey, Campbell, Mitchell and Turpin stud the visitors' lineup. It rates a crowd.

First local lacrosse game of the season is tomorrow (Friday) night at 6.30 in the Auburn field—near the Auburn plant—with Norwood meeting the Woollens in a Tri-County Lacrosse League fixture. Judging from the 3-1 score for Auburns away in the first game, these teams are well-matched and should put up another lively battle here tomorrow. As that 3-1 game was halted just before the finish by rain, we don't know whether it means a win for the locals or a replay. Bob Townsley is managing Auburns, assisted by Ira Dundas in a playing capacity.

Over half a ton of beef on the hoof will perform in the ring at the pro rasslin' show in the Armouries here next Tuesday night. Not all at the same time for goodness' sake! But actually, the six grapplers taking part in the three bouts would jar the hay scales at 1282 pounds if they all clumbed on at once! This is a lot of beef in any stockyard and when you figure that these behemoths are all muscular young men with little excess fat, it spells a lot of grunts and grunts for the fans in return for their shillings. The lightest guy will go 200 even while the heaviest tips 238 pounds. These are your he-men, gals.

This is a real baseball town, as we've often said before. Not only have we got a flock of teams playing and big crowds at the games—compared with other burgs the same size—but we've got so many telephone fans that if they were all laid end to end, it would be a pity. The C.O.B.L. schedule is no sooner begun than the Petes' away-from-home games find our office phones ringing steadily all evening—as if for playoffs—while feminine, masculine and children's voices inquire breathlessly the score. Many register pleasure or disappointment at the news but most are non-committal.

• • • • • • •

The Petes dropped a 9-4 C.O.B.L. tilt in Kingston last eve, it being their second loss of the season and the Ponies' first win. Spook Scriver—who had worked all night previous to the game—faded in the fifth and Bill Calladine had to take over the task with no pitching practise so far this season. The patched-up Petes didn't go so badly at that and found the highly-touted Bud Clancy far from invincible. In fact, he was reached for eight hits, including triples by Kearns and Foley, while he walked three, struck out five and hit three local batsmen. Kingston could only get nine hits off Scriver and Calladine. However, they pay off on runs scored.

• • • • • • •

This second loss doesn't mean a thing so early in the schedule and considering the fact that the Lee crew has had more than its share of injuries to date. With Lefty Lepper slated to chuck 'em by the lefthand Kingston clouters here Saturday, a vastly different tale should be unfolded. Cy Whatley will likely be back catching then and Murphy will be at short, his finger pretty well healed up. A win at home against the Ponies will put the locals right back with the others. Meantime, it looks like another close C.O.B.L. race with us starting by beating Oshawa and then losing to them. Kingston tying and losing to Belleville, and the Ponies then knocking us off.

• • • • • • •

Rotary Juniors of the Lakeshore Junior Baseball League will hold a practise tomorrow evening at six in the Exhibition Grounds. All certificates must be handed in at this time. Herb Ralph is going to Port Hope Saturday and expects to complete final arrangements for opening here earlier than the schedule calls for—which is June 12th. He wants Cobourg to open here a week from Saturday, and they may be agreeable. The Rotary squad is coming along nicely and should be a strong morsel for Cobourg, Port Hope, Oshawa and Bowmanville to chew on.

Praising highly the lively Dinty's Inn-Lindsay lacrosse opener in Scugogville Tuesday eve, the Lindsay writer goes on to say: "Jack (Smoke) Gardner was elected captain of the local team in a pre-game meeting. He was the unanimous choice for the position and should be able to carry the local side of any argument quite efficiently. Chick Baker, at this confab—chairman of the sports' committee of the Kiwanis Club—expressed the appreciation of the local people to the Peterborough players who have come to Lindsay to teach the local boys the game and to play on the team. 'We appreciate it more than we have perhaps shown up to date', he said. Auburns play in Lindsay Monday night, while our intermediates have an exhibition game with Rama Indians in Lindsay this eve.

QUEEN MARY KEEPS MARK

West Enders Cinch Verdict With Seven Run Splurge in Sixth.

FINAL SCORE 13-9.

Queen Mary kept intact its winning streak with a 13-9 victory over King Edward in their School Softball League game. Scoring seven runs in the sixth frame, the Westerners cinch the verdict after a classy game between the well-matched outfits on the winners' diamond. Some fair pitching and fielding was shown on both sides with safe hard hitting in spots. The teams:

King Edward: Anderson, 2b; Murduff, cf; Mackness, ss; Morley, 1b; Harvey, lf; Nokes, 3b; Tarkington, rf; Ferguson, c; J. Grose, p.

Queen Mary: Merrett, 2b; R. Crary, lf; Robson, c; D. Crary, 3b; Easton, cf; Mortimer, 1b; Neiman, Monerief, McGregor.

THE FIRST THING we want to do is correct an error that unintentionally crept into Monday's tennis news. On that occasion, we mentioned the executive of the Lakefield club and listed Mrs. K. Brown as secretary. This position on the executive is held by J. Melrose, and we welcome the correction.

• • •

THE ENTIRE executive of this flourishing club is as follows: President, A. B. Burrows; Vice-President, Mrs. Fred S. Brown; Sec., J. Melrose; Treas., D. J. Campbell. This group, along with other club members who are serving on various committees, have been working hard all spring in expectation of another successful season.

Last year the club's approximate membership was sixty, and with their two courts in fine playing condition again this year, they hope to even top last year's record.

• • •

QUITE A NUMBER of local players have been trooping to the Lakefield courts for Sunday tennis. The club feels they will have to put a stop to it, not because they don't welcome visiting players, but because it is crowding their own members off the courts. A meeting will be held this week to reach a definite decision with regard to the matter but it looks as if the only way outsiders will be able to play is by taking out a full season's membership in the club. And rightly so.

• • •

WITH THE OPENING of the Kawartha League just a little over a week away, The Peterborough Club arranged their teams for the season's play at a meeting held Monday night at the club house. Last year there were three teams, "A," "B," and "C," led by Max Cotton, Bob Maybee and Jack Kirkwood respectively.

• • •

THESE SAME boys will be captains again this year, and the chosen teams will play each other Saturday afternoon to determine their rating for the year. Commencing at 1.30 p.m. each team will play each other once, and the winner of the afternoon will be the "A" team for the season. The second and third place teams will be known as the "B" and "C" squads.

• • •

"A" TEAM will play in one section of the league, while "B" and "C" teams will be in the other division. Each team has about 30 players and the captain will select from this number, a group of 10 to play in the scheduled matches each week.

• • •

MAX COTTON, leader of last year's "A" team which won the Kawartha League championship, will have the following players with him this year when he plays the other teams Saturday to determine the rating: Ladies: Mrs. J. Dewart, the Misses S. Levine, G. Caddy, V. Davidson, I. Cowan, P. McClellen, J. Best, I. Reid, A. Franks, A. Langley, I. Cox, H. Steer, A. Herd, M. Jones, D. Glover, F. Cruthers. Gents: M. Cotton, (capt.), H. Toole, B. Swartz, G. Scott, W. McGee, H. Macdonald, A. Lord, M. Clarke, C. Boate N. Alton, W. Herd, D. Lillico, J. Richardson, R. Ackford H. Steer, D. Duncan, P. Turner, I. Black.

The personnel of the other teams will appear Monday.

AT A SPECIAL meeting of the Kawartha League held last night, the two divisions of the league were outlined as follows: The south division will consist of Peterborough "A" and "C" teams, Kawartha "," Lakefield and Port Hope. The north part is made up of Peterborough "B," Kawartha "B," Quaker, and Lindsay.

• • •

THE SECRETARY of the league, Stan Shields, will make up the schedule, taking into consideration the fact that Lindsay can't play any home games in June due to ground regulations. The southern section will play a double schedule of home and home games, opening on June 8th, and finishing Aug. 24. The northern section, consisting of only four teams, will play a triple schedule opening on June 15th, and finishing the same date as the other part.

Play-off dates will be arranged at the conclusion of the regular schedule.

PLAY LAWN BOWLING THE HERB. MARTIN GAME

The Schedule for the 1935 season got under way last night and judging from the enthusiasm shown by the members it looks like a big Summer. The boys got away to a good start and were all through by ten o'clock.

To Benny Chesler's Rink goes the honor of having high score, and also the honor of scoring the first 6-end of the season.

× × ×

There Were No Less Than four 5-ends scored on the opening night—Cullen, Dearborn Sedgewick and Routley, each getting one.

× × ×

The Hanging Flower Baskets, donated by Cecil Williamson, add greatly to the appearance of the Caledonian bench.

Now, About To-morrow night: It will be our first Friday night of this season and we want a record crowd out—last year we had 16 entries.

× × ×

The Draw Will be made sharp at 7.30 p.m. and the boys are asked to co-operate and be on time. Telephone your name in early. The fee is the same as last year—25 cents.

Be a Booster for our club—the place for the knocker is on the outside.

Last Night's Scores: Chesler 23, Chenhall 6; Cullen 20, Cairns 11; Dearborn 16, Gimblett 13; Maynecrd 21, Sedgewick 15; Sloane 18, Routley 12; Allan 18; A. Brown 13; Braund 15, F. Brown 14; Hendry 16, Clegg 10.

St. James' Bantams Win Initial Game

St. James Bantams won their first game of the Church Softball League season last night with a 16-14 score over Park Street. With two out in the final frame, Lawsons triple, with two on, beat the loop leaders. Park Street led most of the way. Self and Anderson fielded and batted in good style with Leether good afield and Hal Campbell with the willow. The teams:

Park Street: Herb. Campbell, c. M. Weaver, rf; Anderson, 1b; Martin, ss; Miles, 3b; Briscoe, cf; Hal Campbell, 2b; Sanderson, p; Tarkington, c.

St. James: Jamieson, cf; Dalliday, 3b; Leether, ss; Watson, 2b; Grose, p; Drysdale, 1b; Hodson lf; Lawson, rf; Self, c.

Park Street ..... 151 400 2—14
St. James ..... 302 403 4—16

Umpires—H. Robinson and J. Smith.

Pitchers' Wildness Cost Trinity Game

Wildness on the part of three Trinity pitchers gave Knox Juveniles a 22-12 win in their Church League softball game last night. The winners hit timely and received 16 walks to cop the nod easily. Graham hurled good ball for Knox 'till the late stages, fanning nine and walking five. Graham, Laing, Saunders and Davern hit homers with Vallery and Penrose also batting well. Laing, Todd, Smoke and Deering went good in the field. The teams:

Trinity: Patterson, 2b; Coutts, lf; Vallery, p, 1b; Ward, c, p; Deering, 3b; Smoke, ss; Brown, rf; Andrews, rf; West, cf; Davern, 1b, p, c.

Knox: Lucas, 2b; Curtain, rf; Penrose, c; Graham, p; Laing, 1b; Todd, cf; Milburn, ss; Saunders, 3b; Gardiner, rf, 2b; Doughty, lf; Stewart, lf.

Trinity ..... 102 113 4—12

TRINITY SENIORS SECURE 13-10 WIN

West Enders Swamp Presbyterians For Eight Runs in Third and Victory.

Trinity Seniors got revenge on St. Paul's in the Church League softball game last night with a 13-10 win. The Presbyterians had one bad inning, Trinity getting eight runs in the third. Aside from this, Marsh pitched nice ball with Nichols turning in his best effort of the season on the other mound and batting well. McBain, Mattice, Bary and Broadley made a lot of noise at bat. The game was played in the Exhibition Grounds as C.G.E. girls got King Edward Park for a practise. The teams:

Trinity: Nicholls, p; Wolstenholme, 2b; Mattice, c; Clarke, lf.; McFadden, ss; Gadd, 3b; McBain, lb; Morrow, cf; Rehill, rf.

St. Paul's: Ascott, lf; Barr, cf; Rowan, ss; Marsh, p; McIntyre, c; G. Morrow, 3b; Broadley, 1b; C. Morrow, 2b; Leith, rf.

GOLF NOTES

PETERBOROUGH CLUB

(By Mashie Nib)

The ladies of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club held their first field day on May 28th, and a large gathering turned up for the opener; bridge and golf were the order of the afternoon.

In the golf section, results were as follows: Mrs. G. A. Wood, after a rather shaky start, settled down for the nice score of 99 less 20, net 79, to clinch the first prize for the best net. Miss L. Lyle ran a very close second, but copped the prize for the best total on three sealed holes with 14.

In second division the prize winners were Mrs. Carl Brown, best net prize winner, with 54; Mrs. J. Marshall won the sealed holes, with 17. Other net scores were:

18-Hole Section.—Mrs. A. Howson, 108; Mrs. R. Turner, 93; Mrs. C. Graham, 85; Mrs. H. Bradburn, 99; Mrs. J. P. Strickland, 93; Mrs. F. Roy, 94; Mrs. Scott, 91; Miss E. Mulholland, 96; Mrs. C. Westbrooke, 108.

9-Hole Section.—Mrs. H. A. Morrow, 56; Miss N. Davidson, 54; Miss A. Wood, 54; Mrs. H. Hill, 63; Mrs. G. Matthews, 86.

ESSEX DEFEATED.

LONDON, May 30 (C.P. Cable).—Middlesex defeated Essex by an innings and 41 runs in a county cricket championship match concluded at Lord's to-day. Essex has yet to win a match in the competition, having lost five straight games.

Middlesex opened with 298 runs, their opponents replying with 85 and 172.

Softball League Is Formed In Havelock

HAVELOCK, May 30 (Examiner Correspondence).—A meeting held in the Recreation Club rooms here on Monday evening, resulted in the organization of a Softball League composed entirely of Havelock boys. Four entries were received, the same to be known as Hooper's Hustlers, with Jim Hooper as manager, McCutcheon's Wreckers with Bob McCutcheon in charge, Kennedy's Superiors with George as manager, and Brennan's Cards with Doug. Brennan as coach.

The first game will be played in the local park on Monday afternoon, June 3rd, between Hustlers and Superiors, and the full schedule will be drawn up at a later date.

The Recreation Club is donating a handsome silver cup to the winner in an effort to promote greater interest in this healthful sport.

St. Paul's Juveniles Gain Close Verdict

St. Paul's Juveniles nosed out a 5-3 Church Softball League verdict over Mark Street in a classy game last night. The winners finished strong to come out on top. Moorhead and Craig made it a pitchers' battle. Mark Street had a couple of costly errors in the sixth to lose out. St. Paul's have yet to lose a game this year. McMillian continued his hitting with four, while Brady and Agnew led the losers. The teams:

St. Paul's: Easton, cf; Sedgewick, c; Moorhead, p; McMillian, 1b; B. King, 2b; A. King, 3b; McCartney, rf; Williamson, ss; Rutherford, lf.

Mark Street: Brady, 3b; Nicholls, ss; Craig, p; Scriver, c; Basson, lf; V. Ferguson, 2b; Clarke, cf; Agnew, rf; C. Ferguson, 1b.

GYPSY GIRL

THE STORY OF AN IMPASSIONED ROMANCE

By DONALD HENDRYX

CHAPTER 38

Consuelo basked in the warmth of homage that fell upon her. She accepted jewelry and presents and for payment laughed and went her merry way and no man touched her lips. If she had been confident before, she was cocksure now, and this new assurance of power carried out into the audience, and if they had applauded before, now they applauded more and sometimes the show stopped for five minutes while they recalled her.

Goldberg fretted and chafed that he could not put her on as headliner in the show. The kid was a sensation, no doubt of that. The papers, too, began to sense that something should be done about it. They wanted to know why the gypsy was given only one act, and there were remarks printed about L'Ville that did not forebode well for the star of the show. Other producers came to see if they could get the gypsy and even if she could have gone to them she would not.

Goldberg raised her salary and had another act written for her and rushed rehearsals. He made a place for her in the finale and she stayed with the curtains. Again Louise fought with Goldberg and gained no ground. Golberg begged Stewart to buy Louise off and put Consuelo on, but Stewart would not. After all, why should he do anything more for the gypsy when she was too busy to see him?

His gifts stopped. He was hurt and angry with her. He liked to think that it was the success that had gone to her head, but deep within him he knew that it was not so. He heard about her from this one and that, and saw the new jewelry she wore, and he told himself that she was nothing but a common gypsy. Nevertheless he was piqued that she should wear other gifts than his and treat him so indifferently.

Consuelo worked harder than ever with Renaldo. Louise's dancing partners came down and practiced long hours with her. The little understudy was given a place in the pony line-up and the gypsy became the official understudy. Costumes were duplicated and all was in readiness for the time when Louise might not show up, either from accident, illness or for any other reason.

The gypsy waited. The wait grew tiresome, for no strong-willed gypsy is used to waiting, but still she held her peace and did not act—not yet.

She had not seen Stewart for a week when he appeared at her dressing room door.

"Ah, my friend, I am glad to see you again."

He came into the room and looked at the girl. Then he laid down his cane and hat.

"I wonder."

"Now what is it you wonder about?"

"Oh, nothing. Waiting for the finale?"

"Yes, Mr. Goldie has been so good to me. You have seen my new act? You have seen me in the finale? Yes I am pretty fine, eh?" She put back her head and laughed her throaty laugh. "At the train so long long ago you said I couldn't dance good enough, do you remember, white man? It is different now."

"Yes, of course. Different in many ways. Are you having a good time?" His voice was quite impersonal, but his eyes were upon her as they had been that first time they met.

"Yes. The men of New York are generous. I have found that gold is less than clear water. Marcu gave my father three horses and an unborn colt and a purse of gold and a watch and the gypsies said it was a good price in America for a woman, but I have been offered a thousand times that."

"To marry you?" Cynical question.

She held up her pretty fingers.

"There have been five who have said, gypsy girl, I will give you anything in the wirld if you will marry me—" Her eyes darkened. Her red lips pouted. "I have said no to all of their offers, but I find that it might be easy to say yes." She paused. "You see, there is not one of them who can give what I want." The coquetry was stripped from her. "All of my life I have had one dream and it has swept everything else aside. I have seen a marble palace on top of a high hill and I was dancing there. I left the gypsy camp and my own people and the sound of Romany and the tang of sweet night air and the music of gypsy laughter to come to New York because I thought that here I would find the end of my dream. But it is not true and I am unhappy. I am standing within reach of this thing I want and it eludes me!" She bent her head in her hands. She was trembling. "To the person who will give me my dream I will pay any price!" The words were wrung from the depths of her heart.

There was silence between them.

"What a queer little minx you are. Here I thought you were only concerned with the good time you were having. Is your dream then still so strong?"

"More than life itself!"

"Can't you be satisfied with going slowly? There is next year, you know. You are building your foundations now."

"You do not know that for a thousand years I have been making myself ready for now. Next year, next year! No! Now is the time! Now, white man, now! I am ready. I am a race horse straining at the post. New York has accepted me. They go mad when I am on the stage. They are holding up the marble palace and beginning me to enter and I stand outside starving. I could step into her place tomorrow. Ah, my darling, help me!" Her plea was an impassioned one.

"And you think this is fair to Louise?"

"Fair? Fair? How can I care whether is is or not? I am me—just me—more than me perhaps, but of the more I do no know. I am burning up with my desire. I am consumed by a white flame. I am a prisoner. I stand down in the wings and I see this woman dancing and singing and she is like a hundred devils to me. I hold back my feet that I do not run out on the stage in front of her and cry aloud, this is my place! And I hold back my hands that I do not tear her hair from her head!"

The lights flickered, recalling her. She turned to the dressing table and mechanically took up her rouge.

"I have been talking like a mad woman." Her voice was heavy. "I have been looking into the impossible and I am tired of it."

The lights flickered again.

"The end of the show for tonight. Finale. I go down and for a moment drink from a cool fountain and carry with me the sound of their applause. We will both be on the stage, this light-haired woman and I, but I shall know that the applause is for me and she will know it too." She got to her feet and went to him. She put her hands on his face and looked down at him. "You will be here when I come back?"

"Yes."

FAREWELL TO MINISTERS.

The Ministerial Association will give a farewell dinner at St. Paul's Church next Monday to four members whose pastorates have terminated here. The guests will be Rev. J. E. J. Millyard of George Street United Church, Rev. F. M. Wootton of Trinity United Church, Rev. J. F. Hughes of St. George's, and Rev. E. R. James, who has been assistant at St. John's Church.

SURVEYING FOR BRIDGE.

Engineers were noticed yesterday surveying approaches to the projected bridge on No. 7 highway over the Indian River. Contract for this bridge is expected to be let in the near future, and also for another bridge over the Ouse river.

ORDERS NEW TRIAL

Before Chief Justice Mulock and Justices Middleton and Masten hearing of an appeal was continued at Osgoode Hall yesterday, in the action Toms vs. Toronto Transportation Commission. A new trial was ordered, and the place of trial was changed to Toronto so that the jury may inspect the street car in question. The order was made on the terms that the defendant pay in advance the expences of transportation and reasonable hotel bills of plaintiff's witness.

I. S. Fairty, K.C., for appellant; W. J. A. Fair of Peterborough for plaintiff, respondent.

Thief Takes Bath In Home of Mayor

NEWCASTLE, Del., May 30.—(CP).—The splashing of water wakened Mayor Charles E. Klingmeyer. He peeked in the bathroom and saw a stranger taking a bath.

While the intruder scrubber, police went through his clothing. They found the Mayor's watch, several dollars and jewelry.

The bather, who said he was Thomas Gaffney, 21, of North Bergen, N.J., rubbed down with one of the Mayor's towels and went off with one of the Mayor's policemen.

HASTINGS GETS FIRST VICTORY

Twilight Fixture Gives Homesters 14-3 Decision Over Norwood.

LOSE SHUTOUT BY HAIR.

HASTINGS, May 30 (Examiner Correspondence).— After dropping their first two starts in the Kawartha Softball League, Hastings knocked off a win over Norwood, 14 to 3, in a twilight fixture Wednesday before a big crowd.

The tough break for "Tony" Phillips in the second inning robbed Ev. Whitred of a shutout; with two men retired, C. Puffer lofted a high one to left field that looked to be the third out with the reliable Phillips camped under, only to have the sun get in his eyes and he lost it; the visitors crossed the plate three times before the third man was out. From the second on, Whitred had the game well in hand, fanning five and issuing three walks. His support was also good, Phillips and Sargent pulling off some nifty catches in the outer gardens. Hastings pulled off the only double killing in the first inning, a Wilson to Hahn to Hogan act.

Webb started on the mound for the losers and was in difficulty the most of the route until he was yanked in the seventh; "Chuck" Puffer relieved him, but the damage was done. Godin was the big noise from a fielding standpoint; he nailed everything around the hot corner.

McKee with two doubles, a single and a walk out of five trips to the plate led the winners in batting; while Ennis and the Puffer brothers collected the majority of the Norwood hits.

Hastings.—Hahn, 3b; McKee, c; Sargent, cf; Scriver, ss; Hogan, 2b; Phillips, lf; Whitred, p; Thompson, rf; Wilson, 1b.

Norwood.—Webb, p; Rathwell, c; Packenham, 1b; Ennis, 2b; Godin, 3b; G. Puffer, ss; Rogers, rf; C. Puffer, cf; B. Puffer, lf.

Johnson Through

CHICAGO, May 30. (AP) — Walter Johnson led Cleveland Indians against the American League leading Chicago Sox today, aware that it might be his last day as manager of the club.

Whether the "Big Train" shall continue as manager of the Indian rests on the outcome of a hearing tomorrow before Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis who will decide if Johnson was justified in firing Infielder Willie Kamm from the club last week. Johnson said the action was taken "for the best interests of the team."

Kamm denied charges by Johnson he "was affecting the play of the younger players with his suggestions and advice."

MOUNT PLEASANT

Mr. and Mrs. L. Burns and son Ivan of Beaverton motored here and spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Foster Eggleston and other relatives in the community.

Friends of Mrs. Alex Tully will be pleased to know that she was able to be removed to her home from Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough on Sunday following an operation for appendicitis.

Miss Helen Perritt spent the week-end with her cousin, Miss Mabel Eggleston.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Tully of Orange Corners visited Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sisson on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Finley of Best's Station and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Finley, Emily were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Handley on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Boyd spent Sunday visiting with Mr. and Mrs. J. Windrem, Emily.

MT. PLEASANT WOMEN MEET IN GRAHAM HOME

MOUNT PLEASANT, May 30 (Examiner Correspondence) — The monthly meeting of the Mount Pleasant Women's Association was held on Thursday afternoon, May 23 at the home of Mrs. Thomas Graham with an average attendance.

The devotional period was taken by Mrs. Norman Fee. There was a lengthy business discussion and committees were appointed to look after the various items under discussion. The program consisted of reading by Mrs. W. H. Lowe entitled "A Woman's Pocket Book," also readings by Mrs. N. Fry and Mrs. T. Graham; recitation by Mrs. Hubert Lowe and a reading "Short Sermons and Great Themes" by Mrs. H. Rutherford. Meeting closed by singing of hymn "Come Thou Fount of Every Blessing" followed by the mispah benediction. A very dainty lunch was served by the hostess and a social half hour was enjoyed by the members.

Employment in France is gaining.

FARMERS FACE HAY SHORTAGE

Dry May With Many Cold Frosty Nights Retards Growth of Pasturage.

CROPS NONE TOO BRIGHT

BURNBRAE, May 30 (Examiner Correspondence)—With a shortage of hay again looming on the horizon, local farmers are wondering just what to do for emergency crops. Three weeks ago hay prospects were bright, the land was drying rapidly and everything available was rushed into spring grain. A dry May with many cold frosty nights has retarded the growth of the clover and pasture fields as well as the curly sown spring grain and unless rain comes very soon the crop prospects are not as favorable as last year. There is a greater interest in roots this year than ever before and many inquiries come each week to the veteran root growers of the district regarding the best methods of culdure. Many of the poorer hay fields will probably be plowed for corn after the cows have pastured for a while.

Cheese factories are running below par again this spring, as the price of cheese hardly compares with the price creameries have been offering. Then too, the greater demand for dairy cows throughout the district has induced farmers to raise more heifer calves and the skim-milk is a mighty valuable feed not only for calves but for the hogs which have proved many a hard-pressed farmers salvation this last year. Pure-bred dairy cows at $80 to $100 each, hogs at $11.40 a cwt. rail grade scarcely look reasonable with butter fat selling only slightly over the 20 cent mark and eggs under fifteen cents for top grades.

LONDON (C.P.) — Sir Ambrose Fleming, 85-year-old inventor of the wireless valve, one of the pioneers who put the science of radio in the forefront of the exact sciences, has been given the Kelvin Medal.

WEDDING

McLEAN—WORBOY

Packed to capacity for the occasion, All Saints' Anglican Church was the scene at half six o'clock last evening, the eve of Ascension Day, of the wedding of one of the most popular and well-known members of the congregation: Dorothy Agnes Worboy, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Worboy of 586 Sherbrooke street, whose wedding to the Rev. C. M. McLean of Queensport, Nova Scotia, eldest son of Mr. William McLean of Northam, P.E.I., and the late Mrs. McLean, was an event in the annals of a church in whose many activities the bride has been prominent since childhood. As a Deaconess of the Anglican Training College in Toronto, Miss Worboy spent a memorable summer in the Canadian West, in charge of one of the travelling Van Sunday Schools operating throughout Saskatchewan, and has also during the past few months had considerable nursing experience, so that she is well fitted to assume the duties of a minister's wife in the far-off Maritime province to which she will go with her husband.

Carrying out an often-repeated wish of the bride for a lilac wedding, the ceremony transpired in the blossoming time of these fragrant flowers, and quantities of mauve and white lilacs decorated the altar, chancel and pulpit, while delicate sprays of lilac were held in bows of white tulle that marked off the guest pews. Palms and ferns added to the general attractive decorative setting, which was supervised by Mrs. L. G. Dobbin and her daughter, Miss Gwen Dobbin.

With the bride and bridegroom kneeling on a white satin cushion placed on the steps of the chancel, the marriage service was read by the rector of All Saints, the Rev. J. D. Paterson, while the service of Holy Communion which followed immediately was solemnized by the Rev. T. W. Isherwood, professor at Wycliffe College, Toronto, and the Rev. Leonard Geary, assistant at the Church of the Redeemer in Toronto.

The robed choir was in attendance with Mrs. W. A. Logan at the organ. As the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, the choir and congregation sang "Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost" and during the Communion Service, the Communion hymn, "O God, Unseen Yet Ever Near," was sung by the choir, which also rendered the Wedding Hymn later in the service. During the signing of the register, Miss Ena Young sang "My World." While Mrs. Logan played Mendelssohn's Wedding March, the bridal party left the vestry and proceeded down the aisle to the entrance, to leave the church through a Guard of Honor formed outside by the choir members.

Ushers for the occasion were former college associates of the bride and bridegroom: the Rev. E. Worrall of Havelock; the Rev. T. Millman of Grafton; the Rev. H. Blake of Fenelon Falls, and Mr. E. Rigby of ePterborough, at present a Divinity student at Wycliffe College.

The bride's straightline gown was of white satin with a short train. The sleeves, full at the top, were fitted from the elbow to the finger tips, and the neck, pointed in front, had a Queen Anne collar that framed the face. Rows of tiny buttons trimmed the sleeves and the back of the gown.

A floor-length veil of white tulle was bound in cap fashion to the head with two braids of white satin. White kid slippers and white chiffon hose completed the ensemble, with short white satin gloves.

The bride wore on a fine chain a silver cross studded with marquisettes, the gift of a girl friend living in Germany. And she carried the gift of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. McCracken of Cricket Place, a lovely prayer book of white kid with a gold cross on the cover. From this depended narrow white ribbons showered with lily of the valley and forget-me-nots.

The bride was attended by her sisters. Miss Marjory Worboy, as maid of honor, and Miss Marion Worboy, as bridesmaid, were attired in frocks of a similar type, of organdy embroidered in an all-over delicate white floral design resembling a butterfly, the former wearing pale green, the latter pale yellow. The gowns were of the Regency mode, piquant and demure, with flaring skirts, full sleeves tightening at the wrists and little flat collars. They were trimmed with tiny buttons and with them were worn matching tiny sidewise hats made from the cutout design of the dress material and finished with long streamers of grosgrain ribbon, down the back.

They carried old-fashioned nosegays of mauve sweet peas centered by a wellow rose, and tied with matching ribbons.

Matching the lilac shades of the wedding was the dainty dress of the little flower-girl, Marilyn Moore, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Moore, who wore mauve flowered Swiss voile with matching poke bonet, and carried a basket filled with pink roses and forget-me-nots.

The best man was the Rev. W. Stocks, curate at St. Anne's Church, Toronto.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the bridal party received the half hundred guests, with Mr. and Mrs. Worboy. The latter wore an ensemble of navy blue silk crepe, with matching hat and corsage of roses.

The rooms were filled with quantities of tulips, daffodils, gladioli, lilacs and apple blossoms. The table from which buffet refreshments were served was done with a lace cloth centered by the bride's cake and decorated with vases of white gladioli and white carnations. Tall white tapers were in junior silver candlesticks.

Assisting with the service of refreshments were the Misses Lillian Lacey, Clara Doris, Marjory and Marion Worboy and the ushers.

Later, the Rev. Mr. McLean and his bride left to take the train to Ottawa and Montreal. Before going to the bridegoom's charge at Queensport, N.S., they will motor for three weeks through the Maritime provinces.

For travelling, the bride wore a suit of navy blue wool flecked in silver, with blouse, collar and cuffs of gold-colored satin, a navy hat and matching accessories.

The gift of the bridegroom to the bride was a monogrammed silver dresser set; to the maid of honor and the bridesmaid, compacts; to the flowergirl, a necklace; to the organist, a brilliant clip; to the soloist, a beaded bag; to the ushers monogrammed leather billfolds, and to the assisting clergymen fountain pens.

Thorncliffe Program Unfilled For Saturday

TORONTO.—Entries for Saturday's races at Thorncliffe Park remained unfilled to-day an hour after the usual time. It was understood unofficially continued differences between the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association and track operators, with breeders refusing to enter their horses, caused the holdup. One breeder said an answer was expected from officials shortly but if settlement were reached some time would elapse before the Saturday card could be completed.

Campbellford Doctor Drugged in Cell

UNDER ARREST IN COBOURG ON GRAVE CHARGE

Dr. F. B Britnell Unconscious When Police Opened Cell This Morning.

REPORTED RECOVERING.

Eugene Dunlay, Formerly of Campbellford, Remanded Until Thursday.

COBOURG, May 31, (CP).—Two men and two women today were under arrest on charges of administering a drug to procure a miscarriage.

While Dr. F. B. Brittnell of Campbellford, Ont., was recovering in hospital after being found unconscious in his cell, Eugene Dunlay, Alma Grace Willoughby and Anne E. Hughes, all of Cobourg, appeared before Justice of the Peace Leslie Wilson on charges of administering a drug to procure a miscarriage.

The three were remanded until June 6.

COBOURG, Ont., May 31. —(CP)—Dr. F. B. Brittnell of Campbellford today was found unconscious in a drugged condition in his jail cell where he was placed last night on a serious charge.

Dr. Brittnell was discovered by Inspector E. C. Gurnett and Provincial Constable W. J. Carey when they went to take him to court where he was to appear on a charge of administering a drug or other instrument with the intent of procuring an abortion of a Campbellford woman.

He was rushed to Cobourg hospital where he regained consciousness and doctors said he would recover.

Found Three Letters

Police found three letters beside Brittnell which were said to be addressed to his family and the police. Their contents were not divulged.

Eugene Dunlay, of Cobourg, arrested with Dr. Brittnell last night, appeared before Justice of the Peace Leslie Wilson today on a charge of attempting to procure an abortion and was remanded until next Thursday.

Dr. Brittnell was in Campbellford until late yesterday afternoon when he was placed under arrest and removed to Cobourg.

It was reported domestic relations in his home had become strained some time ago, and that his wife has been working in Toronto for six months.

Eugene Dunlay was a resident of Campbellford until he came here some time ago on securing some trucking job with the Ontario Government.

Police refused to discuss the letters found in Dr. Brittnell's cell, and no information was available except the bald announcement of the doctor's condition when he was found by Constable W. J. Carey this morning.

WOMAN CHARGED THEFT OF $31,000

22 Years Manager of Niagara Falls Building and Saving Association.

SHORTAGE OF $110,090.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., May 31 (CP)—Miss Isabelle Benson, 22 years manager of the Niagara Falls Building, Saving and Loan Association, appeared before Magistrate John B. Hopkins to-day, charged with stealing $31,000 from the association during the years 1934 and 1935. Without being asked to plead she was remanded until June 28.

Arrested yesterday afternoon she was in the cells until one o'clock this morning, when sureties for $30,000 were posted. Today cash bail was set at $10,000 not yet raised, several bondsmen who arranged bail refusing to continue securities.

Special audit of the association is being continued.

A statement issued by the directors states there is "apparent shortage of $110,090.10."

Warrant for Miss Benson's arrest was sworn out by W. S. Byers, acting president, on the advice of the Attorney-General. She was arrested by Inspector Ward of the Criminal Investigation Department on a downtown street on the same day President John Muir, president of the company died.

STAN WATSON IS BADLY INJURED

Admitted to Nicholls Hospital With Skull Fracture Last Evening.

STRUCK BY CYCLIST.

Struck by an unidentified cyclist as he was crossing the intersection at George and Hunter Streets shortly before six o'clock last evening, Stanley P. Watson, 20, of 409½ George Street, sustained a fracture at the base of the skull. He was admitted to Nicholls Hospital, under Dr. H. V. Dobson, and to-day his condition is stated to be serious.

Immediately following the accident, the injured man was taken into Bond's Drug Store, where first aid was administered. Informed of the accident, Noel Risher and William A. Davern, colleagues of the accident victim, who is a jeweller at Schneider Brothers, later conveyed him to the Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic, and Dr. Dobson then ordered him into hospital.

The cyclist, who had not reported the accident to City Police at an early hour this forenoon, was stated to have been in Bond's Drug Store when Watson was receiving first aid, and to have called in at the store later in the evening to enquire as to the condition of the injured man.

Believed From Out of Town.

No one appears to have learned the cyclist's name, however, but it was stated by an employee at Bond's that the cyclist was a young man believed to be from out of town because of a Belleville marker that was on his machine.

The cyclist is stated to have remarked that he had the lights with him and that the accident was unavoidable.

It is believed that the cyclist had been riding east on Hunter Street, and that he was in the act of turning south on George Street when Watson was struck. Watson, it is said, was on his way to the Post Office and was attempting to cross from the south-west corner over to the south-east corner of the intersection.

THREAT TO GET MISS MACPHAIL PRISONER SAYS

Former Convict Threatened to Smash Inspector Dawson's Nose.

IN HER DEFENSE.

Alleges Dawson Said She "Made a Fool of Herself."

OTTAWA, May 31 (C.P.). — Commissioner E. J. Daly was told to-day by A. G. Hall, former convict at Kingston Penitentary, he had practically threatened to smash J. D Dawson, inspector of the penitentiaries branch, on the nose for reflecting on Miss Agnes Macphail, member of Parliament for Southeast Grey.

"In fact I lost my temper and told him (Dawson) if he were not a penitentiary inspector I would smash him in the nose," Hall swore. He said he had told this to Dawson at an interview with the inspector April 9, 1934, when, he claimed, the official had said: "Aggie made a fool of herself in the House of Commons; when we are finished with her she won't be able to hold up her head again in the House."

Term Expired April 27.

On the whole it was not an unfriendly interview except for two incidents "when I got hot under the collar," Hall swore. At stages the interview was friendly "when Dawson has talked to him about the time Hall had lectured in Kansas City. His penitentiary term expired last April 27, Hall said.

"How did this alleged statement regarding Miss Macphail come about?" Mr. Greer asked.

Informed Miss Macphail.

Dawson had before him a lot of papers and had asked him about a fellow convict, Charles Baynes. The witness continued Dawson had said: "Do you know this fellow (Baynes) tried to smuggle out a letter to Miss Macphail?" He had told Dawson he was not interested in the latter. Dawson, proceeded witness, had said Bayne was a 'most unmitigated liar' and 'the worst type of criminal' and had added: "This was the type

TWO CHILDREN ARE FOUND SAFE

First Thought Children of Fisherville Man Were Kidnapped.

WITH THEIR MOTHER.

FISHERVILLE, Ont., May 31 (CP)—The reported kidnap of two small boys of W. O. Tudhope collapsed to-day when the father announced he learned the children were safe with their mother.

Tudhope, manager for the United Gas Company in this Southern Ontario district near Cayuga, said he became alarmed when the boys disappeared on their way to school this morning. He was told a large automobile stopped the children and they were hustled into the car.

Tudhope quickly notified police and a wide search was started. Upon learning of the children's safety, Tudhope said he regretted causing a "sensation."

'QUAKE CLAIMS 20,000 LIVES NORTHERN INDIA

Thickly Populated Native Section of Quetta Completely Destroyed.

44 OF GARRISON KILLED.

Urgent Request is Made to Government For Physicians and Nurses.

KARACHI India, May 31 (AP)—An estimate that 20,000 persons were killed early to-day in Quetta alone by the earthquake which jarred Northeast India was contained tonight in a wireless message from the Quetta wireless station.

The message was one of the first complete estimates to reach here since the earth shock wrecked all land communication lines throughout the district.

Before the message arrived, unofficial and unconfirmed estimates had placed the death toll as high as 30,000.

Hundreds Injured

Quetta reported the number of injured was thus far estimated only as "in the hundreds."

Earlier reports had told of the Royal Air Force garrison being badly hit with the death of 44 men. This last message said most of the other garrisons had escaped serious damage and various troops had been ordered into service digging through the debris of the city and extricating the injured.

The earthuake hit around 3 a.m. with three violent shocks, devastating the countryside around Quetta, on the northern frontier.

Although the offices of the Governor-General and the Staff College and military headquarters escaped serious damage, most of the other sections of the town, including the thickly populated native districts, were destroyed by the shocks.

Britishers Killed

Among those reported killed were Meredith Jones of the political department and his wife and her mother, Mrs. Bradford, an irrigation engineer named Francis and also his wife.

The aviators reported killed included Flying Officer Charles Paylor.

Previous reports railways suffered heavy damage later were believed incorrect as it was said relief supplies and workers were able to penetrate the 'quake-hit sections.

Relief work was started at Quetta with hospitals and camps set up on a racecourse and the grounds of the residency. Supplies were said to be sufficient for the present.

Call for Help

Sir Norman Carter agent of the Governor General, sent through a message to Simla, confirming the intensity of the earthquake and made an urgent request physicans and nurses be rushed.

The 'quake wreaked its havoc in about one minute.

The province of Baluchistan, populated by 686,000 persons, were hardest hit. Unofficial reports said in one village of the province, Mastung, with its 4,000 persons, suffered a loss of 80 per cent of its inhabitants.

COMMISSIONS WERE RETURNED BY HON. STEVENS

Voluntarily Returned His Commission For Sale of Defunct Company's Stock.

GODFREY INQUIRY.

Joseph Sedgwick of Attorney General's Dept., Given Stiff Examination.

TORONTO, May 31. (CP).—Correspondence was produced to-day to show Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, had voluntarily returned commissions collected for sale of stock from the defunct Manufacturers' Finance Corporation.

Norman Sommerville, K. C., counsel for Mr. Stevens at the inquiry by Ontario Securities Commissioner J. M. Godfrey, K.S., into collapse of the company seven years ago, read correspondence between Mr. Stevens and J. T. Clarkson, receiver for the company, regarding money paid the former minister for stock sales in Vancouver.

Letter is Read

Counsel read a letter, dated Nov. 5, 1929, expressing an offer by Mr. Stevens to return all monies received as commissions as British Columbia agent for the company.

"Following the unfortunate collapse of the company" Mr. Stevens' letter said, he thought it "would not be fair" to retain the commissions and offered to return the money if Mr. Clarkson would advise him of the total amount received by him. "This offer is made," the letter concluded, "without prejudice or compulsion of any kind."

Mr. Clarksons reply assured Mr. Stevens he was not obliged to return the money but suggested it was the "kindly thing to do."

Counsel also read minutes of a director's meeting, July 15, 1925, deciding Mr. Stevens should be paid a commission of 20 per cent, 18 per cent of which Mr. Sommerville contended was paid to Robert Smith, a salesman. He read records to show Mr. Stevens received only two per cent for office expenses "and even this was returned when the company collapsed."

Counsel argued against a suggestion by S. L. Springsteen, com-

NEW INVASION OF CHINA FEARED

Japanese Demands Made on China Said to be Most Sweeping.

BRITAIN IS PREPARED.

PEIPING, China, May 31.—(AP). —Fears of a new Japanese invasion of Northern China arose to-day after announcement of the Japanese army's latest demands upon the Chinese Nationalist Government.

The Rengo (Japanese News Agency) was informed the Japanese demands were even more sweeping than disclosed yesterday in Tokyo.

Sweeping Demands.

Rengo's information said they included: Removal of anti-Japanese magistartes in North China, abolition of the Peiping military affairs council, dismissal of Yu Hsueh Chung as provincial governor, removal of the provincial capital to Pactingfu, surrender of the Chinese accused of the murder of the pro-Japanese publishers in Tientsin, abolition of the Peiping gendarmerie, suppression of subversive Kuomintang activities in North China, and submission of political appointees in the area for approval by the Japanese military authorities.

"No, certainly not, my child," replied the aged man.

"Then why weren't you drowned?" asked the child.

Sleeping Children Not Given Chance To Escape Flames

Father And Mother And One Small Child Escape Through Second Storey Window Of Alderwood Home Near Toronto.

OLDEST GIRL TO PERISH COULD BE SEEN TRYING TO RESCUE 15 MONTHS OLD BABY.

Flames Seemed To Burst Out All Over, Giving Children No Chance To Escape—Took Three Firemen To Hold Back Father.

TORONTO, May 31.—(CP)—Five children of Harry Scott lost their lives today when fire swept their two-storey frame dwelling in suburban Alderwood, near Long Branch, a few miles west of Toronto city limits.

Those burned to death or suffocated were Victor, 19; Vera, 12; Bobby, 8; Dorothy 4, and Sadie, 15 months.

Scott and his wife, Frances, escaped with their three-year-old son, Douglas.

One report said it was believed the fire started from an exploding oil stove but this could not be confirmed.

Scott, milk truck driver, arrived home about 4.30. An hour or so later he was awakened by the fire. Hurriedly he lifted his wife, with Douglas in her arms, to the verandah roof. Then he dropped to the ground and caught the boy, tossed to him from the roof. He also caught his wife who leaped safely.

Held Back By Firemen

Scott tried frantically to re-enter the building that was burning fiercely. Firemen held back the crazed father knowing any effort to enter would be hopeless.

Smoke and flames leaped from the frame house as Scott rushed about in front crying, "My poor kids; my poor kids."

SHORTAGE SEEN IN MINISTERS OF UNITED CHURCH

Day Fast Approaching When Be Shortage of Ministers Conference Warned.

48 STUDENTS.

Delegates to the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada, continuing their sittings in St. Andrew's United Church, today were warned by Professor A. H. Kent, principal of Queen's Theological College, that a day when the United Church will find itself short of ministerial material is fast approaching. The number of young men training for the ministry is decreasing almost yearly, he said.

Five years ago there were 100 candidates for the ministry studying at Victoria College, Toronto, he stated. Two years ago, the number had dwindled to 60, and, last year, to 48.

The Principal urged carefulness on the part of the Conference in accepting candidates as ministers. A candidate may lead a good life and know his theology off by heart, yet be an unworthy minister, he said.

He announced that, for the first time in Canada, theological students at Queen's University, recognizing the importance to a minister of an acquaintance with psychiatry, will take advantage of certain lectures in the faculty of medicine this year.

Settlement of a controversy which has troubled several past sessions of the Conference seemed in view to-day as the Conference agreed that the various presbyteries should send nominations for next year's Conference president to the Conference secretary. The proposal was sponsored by Rev. C. W. Barrett of Brighton and seconded by Rev. A. E. Jones of Lindsay.

PROTEST SCOPE OF DALY INQUIRY

Judge Daly Rules Stick to Instructions in Penitentiary Inquiry.

NO FULL INVESTIGATION.

OTTAWA, May 31 (CP)—Protests against any narrowing of the scope of the inquiry by Judge J. E. Daly into alleged abusive language used about Miss Agnes Macphail, M.P., by Inspector J. D. Dawson to G. A. Hall, a former convict in Portsmouth Penitentiary, were made when the inquirfy resumed yesterday by J. G. McRuer, counsel for Miss Macphail. Judge Daly ruled he would have no "roundabout investigation," and he would stick to his instructions.

Inquiry Nonsense

Mr. McRuer claimed all statements made by Dawson to any convict should be investigated. If they were not the whole inquiry was nonsense.

"You don't need to use that sort of language," said Judge Daly.

Mr. McRuer read at length from an affidavit by Hall and claimed all matters leading up and surrounding the alleged remarks should be looked into. He insisted it was his right at least to have all matters mentioned in Hall's affidavit examined. He said the inquiry was a public investigation and should be unrestricted.

If the judge was in difficulty in interpreting his instructions Mr. McCruer said he should go to the Government and get them clarified.

"I am in difficulty," said Judge Daly.

In that case, said Mr. McRuer, the judge should return the commission and ask that it be clarified.

"I dont think it's my duty to do that" said Judge Daly.

R. H. Greer, commission counsel said the point to be investigated was whether or not Inspector Dawson made the slanderous statement about Miss MacPhail. The remarks on the face of them were extremely derogatory and most improper when made by a Government official about a member of Parliament.

Political Ambitions

"My friend Mr. McRuer has political ambitions and has made certain statements," said Mr. Greer.

Mr. McRuer entered an angry protest and declared his political ambitions had nothing to do with the case. He was representing his client, Miss MacPhail.

To attempt to turn the inquiry into a general investigation of conditions at the penitentiary would be to go far beyond the intention of the Government, said Mr. Greer.

Must Control Tongues

The inquiry would not be a waste of time if it established once and for all government employees must control their tongues in speaking of public representatives in Parliament.

Hall, the ex-convict, argued for a wide-open inquiry. He said the Minister of Justice obviously contemplated an inquiry into all the charges made in his affidavit. He was prepared to prove the charges.

Judge Daly then ruled he would investigate only the truth or falsity of the statement that Dawson used abusive and profane language about Miss Macphail at Kingston Penitentiary April 9, 1934.

At Mr. McRuer's request the judge ordered Inspector Dawson to allow Miss Macphail's counsel and Hall to look through all departmental records and files in the presence of a departmental official. The inquiry adjourned until late in the afternoon.

Hall applied for the right to interview convicts in the penitentiary alone. But the judge said the interviews would have to be in the presence of the warden. Miss MacPhail, however, as a member of Parliament has the right to see them alone.

Owl in Stove

TILBURY, Ont., May 31 (CP)—Visions of ghosts arose before Joseph Mousdi, Raleigh Township farmer, as he sat at the dinner table and watched the lid on his unlit gas stove bob about. After the lid had risen a foot or more in the air Mousdi obtained a poker and gently lifted it. There was a swishing of wings and a small owl flew from the stove and out through an open door. It is believed the bird fell down the chimney into the stove.

BOUISSON TRIES TO FORM GOV'T FLANDIN BEATEN

President of Chamber of Deputies of France Accepts Premiership.

GRAVE CRISIS LOOMS.

French Banks Raided in Effort to Halt Speculation—Some Are Closed.

PARIS, May 31. (AP).—Fernand Bouisson, 60-year-old President of the Chamber of Deputies, accepted the Premiership of the Chamber of France to-day and the task of waging the battle in defence of the Franc which caused the downfall of the Government of Pierre-Etienne Flandin.

The big, bald bearded former football player announced his decision after conferences with Leon Blum, Socialist leader in the Chamber. Socialists hitherto have declined to participate in any cabinet but Bouisson hoped to obtain their support.

The chamber president's design was to form a coalition cabinet to carry France through the monetary crisis resulting from a persistant drain on the gold reserves of the Bank of France.

Government Defeated

He was thrust to the fore front of the agitated political situation as the Flandin government went down to defeat in a dramatic early morning session of the chamber.

The fall of the Flandin government was the consequence of the deputies' refusal to approve the Premier's demands for dictatorial powers to combat devaluation.

Unmoved by Flandin's personal appeal, they voted their lack of confidence in his regime, 353 to 262, after hearing the Premier's warning, devaluation would be inevitable if his successor were denied the same powers he sought.

Those powers would have enabled the government to adopt by decree measures to balance the budget, restored business activity and defend the currency against speculators.

A Heavy Task

Despite the handicap of a fractured arm, Flandin took the rostrum to argue for his program. The haggard lines of his face betrayed what the effort cost him.

After his appeal, Flandin was assisted to an anteroom where he collapsed from his exertions.

Immediately after the government's defeat, authorities went into action against speculators. Several banks were searched and many documents seized as bank managers were routed from their homes for questioning.

It was announced the doors of at least one "financial establishment" had been closed.

Relief Camp Workers Plan Ottawa March

VANCOUVER, May 31.—(CP)—Voting to continue their strike, relief camp workers to-day laid initial plans for their contemplated march on Ottawa of all relief camp workers in Canada.

So far no reports of endorsement of the march on Ottawa proposal have been received here from other provinces where relief camps are in operation. The march is planned for Monday.

While 2,000 relief camp workers are estimated to be on strike against existing condition in the camps, the secret ballot taken on continuation of the strike showed less than half that number voted. Officials announced 623 voted for continuation of the strike with 770 opposed.

30,000 ARE SAID TO BEEN KILLED IN QUETTA ZONE

Terrible Earthquake Takes Heavy Toll in Northern District of India.

CITY IS DESTROYED.

44 Attaches of Military Airdrome at Quetta Were Killed.

LONDON, Eng., May 31. (AP).—The Karachi, India correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Agency said to-day that "unconfirmed reports now coming through estimate earthquake deaths at 30,000 in Quetta zone—two thirds of the population having been wiped out."

On the other hand, the Simla correspondent of Reuters estimated there were 1,000 deaths at Quetta where most of the police force was said to have been killed.

Reuters quotes the following fragmentary report from the Northwest Indian Government:

City Destroyed

"An appalling earthquake occurred at 3 a.m. to-day at Quetta. Fragmentary wireless reports hitherto received state that the city, civil and railway areas have been devastated with, it is feared, very heavy casualties."

The Government offices at Simla are safe.

Relief work in the stricken area has already got under way. A camp has been formed on the race course for the homeless and injured and the grounds of the residency were turned over for similar purposes.

Food and medical supplies, at first accounts, were satisfactory and the railway from Quetta was intact, promising adequate facilities for aiding the victims.

Shocks 30 to 60 Seconds

The shocks lasted between 30 and 60 seconds but caused tremendous damage. The epicentre was apparently between Quetta and Kalat.

The authorities asked the Punjab Government to rush doctors and nurses to the stricken district.

Among civil servants reported killed are Meredith Jones of the Political Department, with his wife and mother-in-law; a Mr. Francis, irrigation engineer and his wife. Sir Norman Carter, agent of the Governor-General, was reported safe. Other prominent civil officers survived but several reported the loss of children.

HYATT NABBED WHILE ASLEEP

He was caught yesterday getting some sleep in a stolen automobile near Lucan, 20 miles from here. Despite the fact he was armed with a shotgun and a .22 calibre rifle, he offered no resistance to the officers.

Hyatt's arrest brought to a successful conclusion the jail-break at the jail, located at Kingston, last Sunday, in which three made good their escape.

Others Arrested.

Of the other two, Bernard Leavey was arrested at Listowel Wednesday and the third, Leo Dionne, was taken within a few hours of the escape. The three had smashed a cell wall, waylaid a turnkey and stolen his keys and climbed the jail wall to freedom.

All day yesterday police combed south-western Ontario for Hyatt, at the same time probing armed robberies at Merlin and near Sarnia, which are now said to be charged against the captured man.

At Lucan a lumber office and a planing mill were entered, a service station was held up at Chatham, an attempt at highway hold-up occurred near Mitchell and an abandoned automobile was found near Sarnia.

Hyatt was freed from a term in Kingston Penitentiary by the King's amnesty on Jubilee Day. He was immediatley arrested, however, and placed in Frontenac County Jail, pending possible extradition to Virginia.

The first White Russian toy exhibit, held recently in Minsk, included airplanes, trains, electric boats, automobiles, bicycles, furniture and musical instruments.

HER ARMS AND LEGS IMMOVABLE

Ten Years with Rheumatism

To this woman it must have been like commencing to live a new life, when she began to use her arms and legs again, after they had been helpless for ten years.

"I suffered with rheumatism," she writes, "and had been bedridden since 1920. I could not move arms or legs, and had to be fed like a child. Everybody thought I should be an invalid all my life. I forced myself to fight against it, and tried a number of different things. It was Kruschen that eventually saved me, and to-day I consider it is saving my life. My condition has greatly improved and my limbs are gradually becoming more supple. Already I can eat without assistance, and dress myself—which I had not done for ten years."—M. H.

Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are the most effectual solvents of uric acid known to medical science. They swiftly dull the sharp edges of the painful crystals, then convert them into a harmless solution. Other ingredients of these Salts have a stimulating effect upon the kidneys, and assist them to expel the dissolved uratic needles through the natural channel.

COLORADO FLOOD TAKES BIG TOLL

Twenty-three Persons Reported Dead and Missing and Hundreds Homeless.

FAMILIES MAROONED.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., May 31. (AP).—Twenty-three persons were reported dead and missing today as flood burdened mountain streams loosed their thundering menace of death and destruction.

Hundreds of persons were homeless and the property damage in Colorado Springs, Pueblo, and two small villages north of here was estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Emerging from a night of terror and its most disastrous flood in 15 years, the harassed area took stock by daylight and saw this eastern slope city was the focal point of the waters' attack. Homes were swept away, highway and railway bridges gone and communication, power and transportation paralyzed.

Property Damage

Pueblo, scene of the 1920 flood disaster, escaped with some property damage but no deaths. Denver's fears turbulent Cherry Creek would rampage this morning were alleviated as the crest of a black torrent roared into the South Platte river without flooding the city.

Greatest concern to-day was centred on the still isolated community of Kiowa and its neighbor, Elbert. Which suffered the brunt of two huge torrents originating in a cloudburst on the crest of a watershed."

PIPES SHATTERED RANGE EXPLODES

Campbellford Housewife Finds New Way of Cleaning Kitchen Stove.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 31 (Examiner Correspondence).—A new and simple method of cleaning stove pipes has just been discovered by a Campbellford housewife. The system may not be entirely original, but is certainly most effective. All one has to do is to close all the drafts of the kitchen stove, and when the fire is burning briskly, throw on a chunk of bacon grease—the action of the grease causes a backfire which not only cleans the pipes but takes them down in the one operation.

This is exactly what happened in a residence on Sebastapol street at 6 o'clock on Wednesday evening. The noise of the explosion could be heard all around the block and the force of the escaping gas tore out the grate in the living room—absolutely shattered one of the elbows in the upstairs pipes, and while nobody was injured there was an awful mess to clean up.

SALES TAX HITS CHURCH PAPERS BELFORD CLAIMS

Could Print in Buffalo More Profitably Than Toronto, Quinte Conference Told.

OLD-TIME EVANGELISM.

Outlook For Young People's Work in Conference Never Was Better.

A severe penalty is being imposed on Canadian religious publications which are being imported, Roy Belford, Toronto of United Church Publications, complained to the Bay of Quinte Conference here yesterday afternoon.

"We could locate in Buffalo and operate our business more profitably than in Canada," he said.

The sales tax means about $5,000 a year to the church organization, he continued. The bulk of imported American religious publications are allowed in free of sales tax and duty, he said. Nevertheless, he reported, the organization is a paying business and enjoyed a turnover of more than $1,250,000 last year.

Elmer Davis of Kingston, past president of the Manufacturers' Association of Canada and chairman of the publications committee declared "We believe we are rendering a service—a vital service—to the church, the Sunday school and all the organizations of the United Church. The only thing of which we can complain is that we are not reaching our constituency." He asked for a wider reading of the publications throughout the church.

CHEESE QUOTES PRODUCE AND LIVESTOCK

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, May 31.—The undertone was weak among cattle on the two Montreal live stock markets this week, while the other lines were fairly steady. Receipts totalled 3,-731 head, of which 931 were cattle, 803 sheep and lambs, 2,268 hogs and 3,869 calves.

Prices on steers ranged from $3.75 for the commonest light kinds to $7.35 for a load of choice cattle. Good steers generally brought $6.75 to $7.25 with medium kinds mostly from $5.75 to $6.50, and with the bulk of the common kinds around $5. Heifers ranged from $3 to $6, with an odd top of $6.25. Butcher cows ranged from $2.50 to $4, the bulk of the good cows selling at $4.50, medium kinds ranging from $3.25 to $4 and common kinds mostly around $3. Canners and cutters were from $1.75 to $2.25, and bulls from $3 to $4.50, with one choice light bull at $5.

Calf trading was active and prices higher. The bulk of the sales were between $3.50 and $5. A few calves of good to choice quality sold in small lots or singly at $6 to $7.50.

Spring lambs ranged from $8 to $12 per hundredweight, the bulk being from $10 to $12, with prospects of lower prices in the near future, or as the supplies increase. Sheep were from $2.50 to $4.25, mostly $3.50 to $4.

Hog prices ranged from $9.50 to $9.75, with one load at $10 for bacons, fed and watered, with the usual cuts on the off-grades, and with $1 per hog premium on selects. Feeder hogs sold up to $10.50. Sows sold from $6.50 to $7.25, the bulk going at $6.50 to $7.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, May 31.—The wheat market displayed a somewhat better tone yesterday, but trading volume dwindled appreciably in continuation of dolorums that have gripped activities on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange for the last three days.

Light offerings and steady cables proved a sufficient anchor to check a downward price trend and raise quotations to fractionally higher levels. At the close gains of ¾c to ½c were chalked up, to leave May at 82¼c and July at 83⅝c.

Export recovery was small, but there was a good shipping demand for grades of casn wheat from No. 3 Northern down to No. 6. Sales were estimated at 200,000 bushels of all grades.

Chicago on Holiday.

With Chicago and Buenos Aires on holiday, Winnipeg and Liverpool played a lone hand. The English market, firmer than expected, failed to reveal any brisk demand for wheat. Closing prices there were ½d to ½d lower per 100 pounds.

Reports from Argentina stressed the need of heavy rains, especially in the North and West, where seed was planted in a dry seedbed, and is stated to be germinating slowly.

Lower grades of cash wheat were in fair demand, and a fair quantity of coarse grains was worked for export. Prices were steady.

SATURDAY NIGHT WILL BRING TO CLOSE THIRD PERIOD OF CLUB

Only Two More Weeks Remain Before Trip to Bermuda.

LATEST STANDING.

Saturday night brings to a close the third period of the Travel Club. Only two more weeks remain after this week to win the free holiday trips. Candidates and their friends are advised not to lose any time between now and the end, as the race is a close one and every vote will be necessary to capture the attractive travel prizes. The standing below represents the standing of the members up to the week ending May 25th. Those who are contemplating aid for their members should not hold off another day, as the votes will never be greater than they are this week. Each period of the campaign sees a sharp decline in the vote schedule and a subscription paid this week means many thousand more votes than the next period offers.

The districts have been loyal in their support of the club members and even keener interest is expected as the club contest draws to a close. To capture one of the free tours means not only victory for the candidate, but it also means victory for the district she represents. When the New York-Bermuda party leave Peterborough for the tour that will take them to New York and from there on a 700 mile ocean journey to Bermuda, many

SUMMER HOME LOST IN FIRE

Second Fire Within 10 Days Takes Heavy Toll at Bridgenorth.

STENTON PROPERTY

A gaunt, grey brick chimney and fireplace reared in the midst of a heap of smouldering ruins, was all that remained of a brand new summer cottage at Bridgenorth, shortly after an outbreak of fire occurred early last evening.

Marking the second serious fire loss in the village within the last ten days, the outbreak robbed the Misses Marjorie and Nellie Stenton, 610 Reid street, Peterborough of a property in which they had only recently invested a considerable sum of money.

They built the cottage only last fall on a choice location facing west on Chemong Lake at the north end of the village, and had been working around the cottage with their father Thomas J. Stenton a short time before the fire was discovered, putting on finishing touches prior to early occupation.

Mr. Stenton declared there was no sign of fire when he left the cottage at 5.50 p.m. after having completed some painting, and he was of the opinion that the fire originated in the electric circuit which had only that day been connected with the Hydro power lines.

An adjoining cottage owned by Joseph Mann of Bridgenorth and tenanted by Bert W. Manning and family of 499 Aylmer street north also took fire and considerable damage was done to the north peak of the roof, and to the interior of the building by water.

It is probable that the combined loss will amount to upwards of $1,-500 although The Examiner was unable to obtain any official estimate.

The Peterborough City Fire Department responded to the call with the pumper and chief's car, but the fire was too far advanced for their services to be utilized.

Two Stores Burned Village Of Shedden

SHEDDEN, Ont., May 31 (C.P.)—Fire early to-day threatened the business section of Shedden, 10 miles west of St. Thomas, when flames destroyed two stores, causing damage estimated at $7,000.

Volunteer firemen of Shedden, aided by Fire Chief Meterlla and Fireman Draper of St. Thomas, succeeded in preventing the flames from spreading to adjoining buildings.

The fire was discovered by a party of tourists who were passing through Shedden early to-day. Mr. Morrison was in his store until a late hour last night and was unable to explain the origin of the fire.

Safe, Sensible, Simple Rules to End

BILIOUSNESS

Many people who are subject to bilious attacks, headaches and kindred "little ills" are victims of unsuspected constipation. Their bodily elimination is regular, day after day, but it isn't complete. Waste poisons are undermining health, and the victim is totally unaware of it. There is a commonsense way to check this dangerous condition.

First, eat moderately. Second, get lots of sleep. Third, take regular exercise. Fourth, get as much fresh air as you can. And fifth, take a bracing, effervescing glass of Andrews Liver Salt about twice each week.

These are all reasonable rules. And the last is particularly important. Andrews, taken while it is bubbling deliciously, has a definite beneficial action on the stomach lining, and a soothing, sedative effect on the digestive organs. It purifies and invigorates the whole system. Andrews heads off biliousness, headaches, weariness of body, and indigestion and promptly corrects the little faults which develop in the system from time to time. Andrews is a pleasant-tasting cooling drink, as well as a purifying tonic.

Keep fit the Andrews way. Get Andrews Liver Salt from your druggist. In tins, 35c and 60c. Extra large bottle, 75c. Sole Agents: McGillivray Bros. Limited, Toronto. 282

THE RIGHT PLAN.

It is to be hoped that the magistrates of Ontario have not failed to take note of the statement of Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, that the most effective treatment of reckless driving is to cancel the driving licenses of the offenders.

The Examiner has long contended that such a plan would make a valuable contribution toward safer driving conditions, and for that reason would like to think that the courts everywhere will see to it that in every flagrant case of reckless driving a recommendation for the cancellation of driving licenses is made.

Magistrates in Toronto have been doing so in recent cases, with the result that during the present month over fifty motorists have had the privilege of operating automobiles taken away from them for periods of three and in many cases six months.

Such a punishment is doubly advantageous: it impresses other dangerous drivers with the fact that if they do not mend their ways they, too, will be banned from the highways, and at the same time it makes travelling safer by removing for a considerable period those whose conduct has demonstrated their unfitness to be entrusted with the privilege and responsibility of operating a motor car.

In the past there has been a seeming reluctance to charge motorists with being drunk in charge of a car, and it is significant therefore that the Toronto courts have been jailing motorists and taking away their driving licenses in all reckless driving cases where there was any evidence of drinking.

Trying to mix gasoline and alcohol is soon going to be a very expensive experiment in Ontario.

THE PRINCE ALBERT STRIKE.

The fact that a number of convicts in the Prince Albert penitentiary went on strike recently is being used by those who are loudly criticizing prison administration in Canada as an argument that conditions in the penitentiaries are badly in need of reform.

However, advocates of an investigation into the management of Canada's penal institutions will have to bring forward something more serious than this Prince Albert disturbance if they hope to succeed in their campaign.

The inmates of this western prison did not go on strike as a protest against the manner in which they are clothed and fed or against abuses in the treatment accorded them; on the contrary, their demonstration was staged to back up demands for privileges such as permission to play baseball, a bigger allowance of tobacco, the doubling of the remissions of sentences granted in connection with the King's jubilee, and Sunday and holiday entertainment.

As the Brantford Expositor says, it is a wonder they did not also ask for the importation of some star artists to sing them to sleep.

These demands show that the constant criticism of prison management coming from certain quarters is regarded by penitentiary inmates as an indication that public opinion is behind them, and they are justified in rioting in an effort to obtain all kinds of impossible privileges.

These men are entitled to decent treatment, but surely they are not to be rewarded for their crimes against society.

HUGE INDUSTRIAL INVESTMENTS.

According to an informative article in Agricultural and Industrial Progress in Canada, the manufacturing industries of the Dominion provide an immense field for the investment of capital, and show how far this country has progressed from its old status as an agricultural country.

The total investment in industry in 1933, the latest year for which returns are available, was over four and a half billion dollars.

The growth of manufactures was rapid in the early years of the century under the stimulus of the settlement of the western provinces, and it expanded greatly during the war. Since the armistice there has been again an immense expansion, calling for further huge investments.

In the last decade approximately $1,300,000,000 of new capital has been absorbed, and in the sixteen years since the annual census of industry was begun the growth of these industries has required approximately two billions of new money.

At the opening of the century the capital investment in Canadian manufactures was $446,900,000. By 1905 it had risen to $833,900,000, and by 1915 to $1,938,700,000.

In 1923, when conditions had returned to normal after the war, the capital employed in Canadian industries was $3,380,300,000, and in 1933 it had climbed to $4,689,300,000, although that huge total was well below the peak year 1929, which saw the five billion dollar mark passed.

The provincial distribution of manufactures shows that in 1932 Ontario had 45.2 per cent. of the Dominion total and Quebec 34.4 per cent., while British Columbia held third place, and the others followed in this order: Manitoba, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island.

MORE ABOUT TAXATION.

In its latest bulletin on the taxation situation the Canadian Research Institute effectively disposes of the idea that taxation is always a necessary evil, pointing out that it is the demand from the public for increased public expenditures that results in increased taxes.

A tax, the bulletin points out, is a forced contribution toward the needs of a government.

In early times the needs of government had little or no relation to the needs of citizens, and the contributions had little relation either to the ability of any particular citizen to pay or the services he received from the government.

It was in these days that the present tax complex, of which many citizens are the victims, was established, and many are still under the impression that taxation is a necessary evil.

As a matter of fact, says the article, much existing taxation and many existing taxes are necessary, and taxation in itself is no more an evil than the necessity of paying for any other service we use.

A tax is still a forced contribution in that, if not paid, force may be exercised to secure payment. The force is exercised, however, by an authority over which the taxpayers exercise control in their capacity as electors.

It is still a contribution to the needs of governments, but the needs of governments in democratic countries are, or should be, the needs of the people who support and control the government in order that such needs may adequately be met.

If it were not pitiful it would be humorous to observe how the same persons can demand public expenditure and protest against increased taxation.

If public expenditures increases faster than the total number of taxpayers, the rates of taxation must increase.

This is, of course, a truism, but no other truism is more widely and completely ignored.

The result is that when public budgets do not balance governments rarely resort to drastic cuts in expenditure, but usually seek out new sources of taxation or bear down heavier on old sources, or both.

In this, like everyone else, they follow the line of least resistance, and this naturally has a direct influence in still further increasing the tax tangle and still further confusing the tax boundaries between the three types of taxing authority.

An increase in the amount of public expenditure has a direct bearing on the forms used in that some forms might not be resorted to but for the pressure of demand for expenditures.

WHAT HAS ENGLAND GOT?

Now that the tumult and the emotion of the King's jubilee have somewhat subsided, one can sit down and analyze, after a fashion, those qualities of character that enabled the English to rise to such heights of joyful jubilation.

To those who do not understand the subtle shadings of the English temperament, it is a perplexing mystery how any people, laboring under the financial and economic disadvantages that are plaguing England, could achieve merriment and felicity over anything.

Thus, the Americans, for instance, are either up in spirits or they are down. They are either revelling in national prosperity or sunk to the depths in national doldrums.

And Canadians, for all their British blood, partake generously of those American characteristics.

It seems to be quite beyond our power to rise from the mire of circumstances to any degree of spiritual exultation.

How do the English do it?

Here are forty million people saddled with forty billions of debt. Every man, woman and child in that little country has yoked around his or her neck a one-thousand-dollar responsibility that curtails and affects every activity of his or her life.

Many of our Canadian relief camps have a higher standard of living than that enjoyed by three-fourths of the people of the British Isles.

Over here we have five times the material wealth of England. We have every natural factor of prosperity, every element that goes into the building of a great, happy and contented nation.

Yet we in Canada are down in the dumps, while the English people are engaged in a celebration of rejoicing.

What have England and the English got that we lack?

From whence do they derive their resiliency of spirit that enables them to rise above adversity and the buffets of fortune?

The truth is that there is a race memory in the English that subconsciously bears witness to the inevitable conquest of evil.

Down through the long years of English history countless depressions have been ended, scores of misfortunes have been overcome.

As instinctively as we know that morning follows night, the English know that standing firm on the fundamentals of sound character, they have nothing to fear.

Revolution has raged around them. Thrones and governments have toppled on all sides. The world has beat its frenzied hands against a multitude of wailing walls.

But adhering to a principle and clinging courageously to a way of life, the English have been less touched by all this furore than any other nation.

They are not sure of themselves. They are not sure of their destiny. But they are sure of the everlasting rectitude of that spiritual lodestar by which they govern and guide their national life.

And so they are enabled to regard these temporary misfortunes as mere incidents in the calm and inevitable procession of a people.

They are enabled to build up a reserve of strength that passes them through any adversity.

Rooted in their own soil, they are as indestructible and immovable as the rocks and earth of Britain.

They refuse to be the pawns of time.

All the wisdom and all the valor of England are not sleeping in the Abbey nor laid away with Arthur in the quiet vales of Avalon.—Vancouver Sun.

ESSAY ON A VERY IMPORTANT SUBJECT

Food is what we are about to talk about....and it is a very serious matter, because everything must eat or drink. Trees drink enormous quantities of water, but don't care at all for alcoholic liquors. Elephants eat hay and peanuts. Tigers eat meat. Small boys will eat anything (between meals), but sometimes their appetites fail them and that worries their parents. Gophers pull your very nicest plants underground and devour them. Moles eat worms, but it is practically impossible to surprise them at dinner. Household expenses eat up salary checks. And it isn't true that two can live as cheaply as one.

Human beings can and do eat everything. Some of them make a great fuss over their meals. Others merely want plenty. Some fuss and dawdle. Others lick their plates and yell for more. Bernard Shaw is a vegetarian. But Primo Carnera wants a thick steak, rare. Stefansson, the explorer, is a very intelligent man and he lived on meat alone for one entire year and didn't get tired of it. The writer of this sentence isn't astonishingly bright, but he never ate a "vegetable plate" in his life....So you never can tell.

Twenty or 30 years ago, bright fellows were talking about doing without meals altogether and substituting food pills, but nothing ever came of that (forunately) and meals still take up a lot of time.... Some people eat anything and never get fat. Others insist that they don't eat enough to keep a bird alive (the fibbers), but still they put on weight. Such people will not go to heaven when they die.... Dieting is very bad for you. If you succeed, it makes you vain. If you don't it is bad for your character.

Husbands complain about the sameness of their meals, but if THEY had to decide, every day, what the family had to eat, they wouldn't do as well, either....Savages eat a lot at one time and then starve. Children would do the same thing, but their fathers and mothers won't let them. (Fathers and mothers are mean! They make little boys and girls eat their salads) ....Some people eat only what is good for them, and that accounts for the grouchy look on their faces. ....We could write much more about food, but it's time to go to lunch.

Veteran Railroader

CAMPBELLFORD, May 31 (Examiner Correspondence).—On Thursday, May 30 Salem Heard completed forty-six years and one month continuous railroad service. There is some talk of his retirement, but Mr. Heard is still going strong, and the C.N.R. station here would not seem natural without his cheery voice.

What's in the Name of Canadian Cities and Towns?

by FRANK H. WILLIAMS

MAHONE, NOVA SCOTIA

Mahone occupies a very fine situation at the head of Mahone Bay with its countless delightful islands.

The site on which Mahone stands was known to the Micmac Indians as Mush-a-Mush, the name afterwards given to the river which flows into the harbor. The name "Mahone" is said to be derived from an old French word, "Mahone", a low-lying craft used by river pirates.

The town was founded in 1754 by Capt. Ephraim Cook. Sacrifice Island, Murderer's Point, Indian Point and other names in the vicinity are reminders of the grim days of Pirates and the Indian scalping knife.

A Thought

Truth, tactful, called to low Despair,
So ill, where Hope, had healthy been,
And tenderly said: "Come with me
Till Hope returns to you again."

Hope came with courage and content,
Despair has fled and now, above
There's beauty, honor, humble peace
Who live and serve with fearless love.

Lakefield Legion Parades To Service

LAKEFIELD, May 31.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The Lakefield post of the Canadian Legion held a church parade on Sunday evening last, headed by the Citizens' Band. The parade started from the legion room and proceeded up Queen street to the "V," then down Regent street to the United Church. Rev. W. R. Archer, B.A., delivered an excellent address on the subject of "Sacrifice," a subject appropriate to the occasion, and dealt with in a very thoughtful manner. Special music was provided by the choir.

Your Health

By DR LOGAN CLENDENING

When people ask about the proper way to take care of a baby they usually are thinking of what is the healthful way to bathe it, to clothe it, and so forth and so on. There is, however, another aspect to the question which is far more important to the baby's health than the arrangement of any of these other things, and that is to be certain that the baby is immunized against the infectious diseases, so far as possible.

I like very much an advertisement that one of the insurance companies has been putting out, showing a young mother with a little baby about a year old on her lap. She is saying to a visitor, "The inoculation was perfectly simple. He didn't mind it a bit. This young man will never have diphtheria."

The gravest menaces to the young child's health are the contagious diseases, and no cradle or nursery is safeguarded unless immunization against them is included in the health program. When you remember that before the days of immunization against diphtheria one out of every 100 children born in the United States was destined to die of the disease, you can readily understand that protection against it was a matter of primary importance. These figures are based upon the following computation. The birth rate is about 2,000,000 live births per year. Before 1923 there were 14,000 deaths from diphtheria in the United States. This means that seven out of every 1,000 children born were destined to die from the disease. Today, in 1934, the death rate has fallen.

Destroyers of Children

The grimmest destroyers of children are as follows: From birth to the age of two years, intestinal infection, infantile dysentery, etc. This can be controlled, and has been controlled in safeguarded communities by controlling the cleanliness of the milk supply.

From the age of one year to the age of ten, the greatest menace is by immunization with diphtheria toxoid. The administration should not be given, however, until the child is about a year old.

From the age of five to the age of twenty, a very serious menace is typhoid fever. Perhaps it is better to say WAS typhoid fever, for with the control of the water supply it is largely a thing of the past. However, it is not safe to trust to the water supply, nor inoculation should be done.

Another menace which is largely a thing of the past, is smallpox but it is a thing of the past only because vaccination is practically universal. Vaccination against smallpox should be done at the age of about six months.

Whooping cough is a less serious menace for which a vaccine has been produced, although, as yet, we are not perfectly certain of its value.

Measles and scarlet fever are dangerous, although of recent years scarlet fever has been so mild as to be almost negligible. At any rate, we have not, at present, any reliable method of preventing either of these diseases.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: 'Indigestion and Constipation', 'Reducing and Gaining', 'Infant Feeding', 'Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes', 'Feminine Hygiene' and 'The Care of the Hair and Skin.'

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

MILITARY MUDDLING IN 1868

On this date (May 31) in 1866 the Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto left for the Niagara frontier to prevent further invasion by the Fenians. Although the government had been warned in advance, no preparations had been made for proper equipment or even food for the troops. Colonel G. T. Denison, who went over a couple of days later with the Body Guard, was most emphatic in his denunciation of conditions: "The want of organization seems incredible. I had to take my corps on a campaign without carbines, but with revolvers for which we had only four or five 10-year-old paper cartridges for each. We did not know whether they would go off or not. We had no haversacks, no water bottles, no nosebags. Some of us had small tin cups fastened on our saddles. We had no canteens or knives or forks or cooking utensils of any kind. We had no clothes except those on our backs. We had no tents and no blankets. The infantry were as badly off as we were. They slept in their ranks in the high green grass, wet with dew, without blankets or great coats, and no fires or lights were allowed."

At last food arrived. Wagons came up with raw beef and hard tack. "The beef was given us in small chunks. We made fires of rail fences. When the meat was cooked and browned on the outside we had to take the chunks in our fingers and eat them, tearing them to pieces with our teeth, with the juice running over our hands, and all we had to drink was water from a nearby contaminated brook."

Yet, despite these difficulties, the volunteers did their duty and stayed the Fenian invasion; but when the North-West rebellion broke out in 1885, there was again the same lack of preparation, although it was evident for months that troops would have to be sent west.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK May 31 (A.P.). — The utilities were the best performers in to-day's stock market although some of the metals, oils and scattered specialties were in demand.

Most speculative forces were inclined to deal cautiously in view of the crisis confronting the gold standard nations.

Gains of 1 to 3 points were recorded by Columbia Gas Preferred, Commonwealth and Southern Preferred, American Telephone, Public Service of New Jersey, Western Union, U.S. Smelting, Howe Sound, American Can and Standard Oil of New Jersey. The late tone was steady to firm.

Transfers approximated 1,000,000 shares.

CONFUSION IN NAMES

CALGARY, May 31 (CP)—When an Irishman bears the name of Macdonald and Scotsman answers to the name of Gallacher confusion is bound to result. Irishmen were astonished to learn Hugh Gallacher of the Scottish soccer team now touring Canada, was born in Scotland and that the only son of Erin with tourists was Duncan Macdonald.

GOODLY GAINS ARE RECORDED IN THE MINES

An Improved Metal Market and Sterling Rate Factors in Advance.

SECONDARY GOLDS UP.

TORONTO, May 31. — (CP)—Buyers came into the mining market to-day to sell the turnover and give prices a vigorous push upward. An improved metal market and sterling rate were factors in the advice which helped also by the market's technical strength, the result of several preceding sessions of active selling. Gains up to 90 cents were recorded in the Base Metals, up to 10 cents in the Silvers and up to 20 cents in the secondary Golds.

Hollinger gold was up about 70 cents to skirt the $15 mark while Braiorne remained at $5 its low price for the year. Lake Shore, Teck Hughes and Pioneer had narrow gains and Wright Hargreaves advanced 40 cents.

Noranda and Hudson each gained 50 cents to 20 cents while moderate advances were posted for Mining Corporation, Big Missouri, Pend Oreille and Base Metals Corporation.

Eldorado Silver held a gain of a few cents, having dropped back from the days top of 1.91. Castle and Bear each closed a few cents up also and Premier gained 5.

COMMISSIONS WERE RETURNED

mission counsel, there had been any "secret agreement" regarding the commission paid to Mr. Stevens, one of the company directors.

Joseph Sedgwick of the Ontario Attorney General's Department who made a report on collapse of the company, admitted under questioning he had been mistaken when he implied in his report there had been any "secret agreement." He was not aware, he said, the agreement regarding the commissions had been read into the directors' minutes.

Represents Senators

Peter White, K.C., representing Senator J. Anthony McDonald, former president of the company, questioned Mr. Sedgwick regarding statements made in the report on causes of the collapse and charges "high pressure" methods had been used in sales of the company.

One of the causes of the collapse of the company, said Mr. Sedgwick, was the company "did not do a regular finance business. They did not go out to buy the best notes they could for their dollar but practically 90 per cent of their paper originated on pianos produced by Amherst (N.S.) Piano Company." Sedgwick also said his reference to "high pressure" sales had been based on information given by men who had made the sales.

"They sold 'no cash down' to people obviously and hopelessly unable to pay," Sedgwick added.

He also said there had been "over-payment to dealers who in instances were paid two or three times on the same notes." He would not agree with Mr. White it was a "simple transaction" of returning the notes to the company which charged them back to the dealers. Instead, said Mr. Sedgwick, there was the indication the payments were made as "advances to keep these dealers alive." Certain payments, Mr. Sedgwick said, he believed were "illegal" but denied he suggested in his report they had been kept secret from the directors.

"Oh, no," he interrupted Mr. White, "I wouldn't say these payments had been made secretly but some of the executive were careless and probably criminally so."

Mr. White accused Mr. Sedgwick of making statements without foundation in the report which suggested an offer of $4,000 had been made as a "bribe" to get Hugh Sutherland, Toronto mining man, on the board of the company.

Sedgwick said he had no proof on which to base the suggestion the money was offered as a bribe, and admitted he had never spoken of the matter to Sutherland, a former director of the company, to discover why the money really was paid. Sedgwick admitted he "might have been wrong" in his opinions expressed in the report.

BAD FOREST FIRE

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta.—Threatening to destroy one of the best remaining timber stands in the district, a mill and 1,000,000 feet of cut timber, a forest fire was gaining ground to-day against fire fighting crews in a limit 25 miles northwest of here along the Saskatchewan River. Rocky Mountain House is about 105 miles northwest of Calgary.

POPULATION CUT IN TWO

POOCHOW, China.—The population of Fukien Province, formerly estimated at 30,000, has been decreased by more than one half during the last eight years of fighting and trouble with Communist bandits.

The provincial authorities are giving a grant of $10 monthly for each additional child where there are more than seven children in a family.

LONDON, May 31 (AP)—Well-informed quarters stated to-day that the British Embassy in Rome had protested to the Italian Government against attacks made by the Italian press against Great Britain.

AMATEUR CONTEST HELD AT GARDENS

Orville Wainman Wins First Prize in Large Entry List.

The first of a series of amateur contests held at the Summer Gardens last night proved to be a tremendous success, when over two thousand persons applauded their favorite contestant as they played, sang or danced during the course of the performance.

The contestants in the order of their appearance were: Elmer Hickey, Rodney Theobald, Donnie Perks, Vess O'Donnell and George Eason. Two young ladies, Joan and Adele McMurray, sang next in delightful unison "The Lullaby of Broadway", Miss B. Curtis, Maurice Dunkley, Stewart Martineaux, Rick Brioux, Miss Eleanor Brown, Percy Ridley, Arthur Phillips, Eddie O'Toole, Miss Celia Foster, Jack Watson, Reggie Land, and Orville Wainman.

During the course of the program almost every type of voice and style of singing and presentation was presented to the audience including cowboy singers, harmonica players, guitar players, a variety of love ballad singers, and also the so-called "hot" type of jazz singer.

Master George Eason was the first contestant to receive a rousing ovation, receiving a total of 1,700 points from the judges. Jack Watson was better still, with applause registering 1,900 points for his imitation of a trumpet playing "Bye-Bye Blues.", Jack then jumped to the floor and presented the crowd with a very clever step dance. Mr. Percy Ridley received the next loudest applause, showing 2,300 points for his efforts, but his host of friends made too much noise shouting and whistling that the judges were forced to discount him slightly. The next highest who proved to be Miss Eleanor Brown with 2,400 points, carried off third prize by singing.

Arthur Phillips received a thunderous applause for singing "I Love You Truly," in a fine mellow voice which bespoke careful training and hours of tedious practise. Arthur sang as his encore, "Just a-Wearying for You," but when the crowd roared their approval was forced to repeat the second chorus of "I Love You Truly." Mr. Phillips ambitions to become a professional singer are well founded ;that fact could be easily judged by his performance, when he netted 2,900 points.

Orville Wainman proved to be the sensation of the evening, when he again carried off the honors in an amateur contest by receiving from the applause 3,200 points. Orville seems to be making a habit of winning amateur contests, but the public will agree on the fact that he really earns his applause, with his beautiful voice and winning smile. Master Wainman sang first, "Every Day," and as his encore the ever-popular "Dinah"; at this point the audience went wild for another encore, to which he obliged with "Nobody's Sweetheart Now."

The last five or six named were brought back before the audience to make the judges' decision fair and unanimous, but this failed to change the order of standing, therefore first prize went to Master Orville Wainman; second to Mr. Arthur Phillips, and third to Miss Eleanor Brown.

The management has decided to make these amateur contests a weekly feature, barring the winners from further competition until the final contest at which time all the winners will take part on one program. Please keep in touch with the Summer Gardens' advertisements for further announcements.

If there are any singers, dancers or instrumentalists who feel they would like to try out for these contests, please get in touch with Andy Rutter at the Summer Gardens, Brock Street, Peterborough.

TORONTO LIST CLOSES MONTH IN FIRM TONE

Oil, Metal, Food, Construction and Miscellaeonus Groups Show Gains.

BRAZILIAN IN FAVOR

TORONTO, May 31. (CP).—The Toronto industrial share market closed the month with a firm tone, gains showing in the oil, metal, food, construction and miscellaneous groups. Volume was on the fair side, bulking mainly in the oils and metals. Brazilian was again in favor, trading in good volume at a steady price.

Oils had gains up to ¾ around mid-day but the gains were shaded slightly in the last hour. Imperial closed around 20 for a gain of about ¾, and International Petroleum at 35½, holding a similar gain. British American was up also.

Consolidated Smelters failed to hold a gain of nearly 3 points, closed with a small fraction to the good, while Nickel held about 28 for a gain of ¾.

Distillers Seagrams lost about ¾ and the other issues were steady, including the brewing corporation stocks and Canada Malting.

Cricket Results

LONDON, May 31 (C.P. Cable).—The return to form of Harold Larwood, famous English bowler, was in a large measure responsible for Nottinghamshire's victory over Hampshire at Nottingham to-day in a county cricket championship match by an innings and 241 runs.

Larwood, who has cut down his lightning-like deliveries to a medium fast rate, took four Hampshire wickets for 18 runs in the southern county's second innings, the entire side being retired for 27 runs.

The Hampshire players in their first attempt made 231. Nottinghamshire declared with a score of 499 for nine wickets. Hardstaff was top-scorer with 169.

Lancashire won from Sussex by 64 runs at Hove. Kent downed Glamorgan at Cardiff by 283 and Warwickshire gained a nine wickets victory over Northamptonshire at Birmingham. The scores in these matches were:

Lancashire, 122 and 226 (Farrimond 55 not out); Sussex, 216 and 67 (Booth five wickets for 26 runs).

Kent, 330 and 280 for four wickets, declared; Glamorgan, 207 and 129 (Freeman five for 49, Lewis four for 27).

Northamptonshire, 186 and 129; Warwickshire, 199 and 117 for one wicket (Kilner 64 not out, Santall 52 not out).

Kidnapped Boy Will Be Returned Alive

TACOMA, Wash., May 31 (AP).—Hope that nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser would be returned alive was given official weight today for the first time since he was seized by kidnappers a week ago.

Even as the United States Government was believed about to invoke the stringent Lindbergh law in a search for the abductors of the little lumber heir, the first hint was dropped authorities believe his parents would get him safely back again.

Chief William Cole of the Washington State patrol declared tersely at Olympia:

"The Weyerhaeuser boy will be returned to his parents alive."

His statement was the first anyone officially connected with the $200,000 ransom kidnapping has given permission to be quoted directly.

PETILLO TRAVELS 106 M.P.H. IN WINNING INDIANAPOLIS RACE

Los Angeles Italian-American Beats Brilliant Field Before 155,000 Fans.

TRAGEDY MARS EVENT.

By Charles Dunkley
(Associated Press Staff Writer).

INDIANAPOLIS, May 31 (A.P.).—During 30-year-old Kelly Petillo, who risked his last penny to get in the race, claimed the victor's spoils to-day for the fastest 500 miles ever turned on the death-ridden bricks of the Indianapolis motor speedway.

The Los Angeles Italian-American celebrating "the first time a car ever stayed together" for him, whipped his powerful little cream-colored speedster across the finish line before a record crowd of 155,000 race fans yesterday for a 500-mile average of 106.240 miles an hour. He will collect a $30,000 cash first prize, $2,050 in lap prizes and thousands more for accessories.

Tragedy Mars Event.

The great speed spectacle was marred by another fatality, the fourth for the 1935 classic and the 31st since the 2½-mile oval was opened to the racing daredevils in 1909.

Clay Weatherly, 25, Cincinnati driver at the wheel of the doomed racer that killed Johnny Hannon of Norristown, Pa., in a trial run May 31, rode it over the wall of the north-west turn at 110 miles an hour on the eighth lap. A "slow" signal from his pit crew had gone unheeded. He was dead when picked up. His mechanic, Francis Bradburn, 23, of Indianapolis, remained in a critical condition in a hospital to-day, his back broken.

Petillo is a former Los Angeles fruit truck driver, who turned to racing in the past five years.

Other Winners.

The other prize-winners and their averages: Wilburn Shaw, 105.900; Bill Cummings, 104.758; Floyd Roberts, Los Angeles, 103.228; Ralph Hepburn, Los Angeles, 103.177; William Cantlon, Detroit, 101.400; Chet Gardner, Los Angeles, 101.129; Deacon Litz, Dubois, Pa., 100.907; George Mackenzie, Addington, Pa., 100.506; Chet Millet, Detroit, 100.476.

VETERAN ELDER LAID TO REST IN LAKEFIELD

Church Filled to Capacity for Funeral of Late Andrew Fairbairn.

PRESBYTERY IN CHARGE

LAKEFIELD, May 31 (Examiner Correspondence). — St. Andrew's Church was filled to capacity on Wednesday when a very large number gathered to pay a last tribute to Andrew Fairbairn who for a good many years has enjoyed the distinction of being the oldest man in the community. The funeral service was in charge of the Presbytery of Peterborough, represented by Dr. A. T. Barr of Peterborough, the Moderator; Rev. Mr. Duncan of Warkworth, the clerk; and Rev. A. C. Reeves, who for some years was presbyterian minister in Lakefield, being ordained to the ministry in the former Knox Church in 1894. The laity was represented by James Dutton of St. Paul's, Peterborough, Rev. W. B. Walker of the Baptist Church, a warm personal friend of the late Mr. Fairbairn, also assisted.

The choir was well represented and led the singing of two favorite hymns of the deceased namely, "Rock of Ages," and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and of the 23rd Psalm (the Shepherd Psalm), which every Presbyterian child was taught as soon as he or she is old enough to lisp the words. Mrs. T. W. Chaplin presided at the organ, and while the cortege was entering the church played very softly "Nearer My God to Thee."

Always Faithful

Rev. A. T. Barr, Ph.D., spoke of the honor they felt in paying tribute to Mr. Fairbairn, who for close to a century had been a resident of the community, and had a lifetime's close association with the Presbyterian Church, always faithful in the discharge of his duties, a record in faithfulness as an officer of the church and soldier of Christ.

Rev. A. C. Reeves of Norwood, whose association with Mr. Fairbairn began more than forty years ago, preached the sermon, taking his text from the 26th verse of the 5th chapter of the Book of Job: "Thou shalt come to thy grave in full age." Our Lord shortly before His death spoke words of comfort to His anxious disciples and we have these words, "Let not your hearts be troubled, ye believe in God"; "In my Father's House are many mansions" and the assurance of the future life is based upon the words of Jesus to His followers who are assured that while the body shall return to the dust, the Spirit shall return to the God who gave it.

Record of Service Unique

In his personal tribute to the deceased elder, Mr. Reeves said his record of service was unique, not only in Lakefield but in the Persbyterian Church in the entire Dominion. Several characteristics stand out in Mr. Fairbairn's character, such as his cheerfulness, the clear, firm tones of his voice, his steadfastness in pursuing his line of conviction, his earnestness. For many years Mr. Fairbairn has been the Clerk of the Session, in fact, he held the office at the time of Mr. Reeve's ordination in the old stone church on the hill, and the church in Lakefield owes a great deal to his methodical and painstaking efforts. He was present at the last meeting of Presbytery, on April 16, where he appeared vigorous with remarkable strength, both physical and mental. A vote of appreciation of Mr. Fairbairn and his services was accorded, and the hope for a continuance of the same was heartily given. He was very proud of his great age, and he loved his church with an abiding affection and lifetime of service was given heartily and was a matter of joy to him. His Christian life was a real one and he occupied the position of a Patriarch in the church's councils. On at least three occasions he attended the General Assembly in widely separated centres, once at Vancouver and twice at Halifax.

In the words of the Scripture he might have said: "The hour of my departure's come; I hear the voice that calls me home."

The pall-bearers were two fellow elders, Messrs. Richard White and J. M. Simpson, and four nephews, the Messrs. J. and E. Falls of Boycaygeon and Richard and Sidney Fairbairn.

Interment was made in the Lakefield cemetery.

He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. C. L. Bickell of Toronto, Mrs. Hugh Kidd of Lakefield, and Mrs. John Hampton; and one son, William A., who resides on the farm cleared many years ago by his grandfather. A son, Bruce, died at the age of ten years.

A very strong Presbyterian, Mr. Fairbairn's association with his church was remarkable; he helped to draw material for the building of the old stone church (Knox Church) when it was built in 1863 and his appointment as an elder was made when he was still a young man, so that for more than half a century he ranked among the seniors in the counsels of the session, where he was secretary for many years, holding the office at the time of his death.

His interest in the new church, built in 1930, has been of a constructive character, and his clear voice rang out through the building on the night of its dedication as, without the use of spectacles, he read a history of Presbyterianism, prepared by himself for the records which he had gathered and filed for years. He loved the church and his later days were made happied by the fact that a church was built to carry on the Presbyterian faith in Lakefield. He attended the church services regularly also the "Sabbath School," as he always called it, preferring the use of the older form to the word "Sunday." Mr. Fairbairn was a strong Liberal in politics. He had a strong capacity for friendship and his passing leaves a vacant place which will be difficult to fill, for he was a community figure, one of the hardy pioneers who cleared the land and tilled the soil and played a notable part in the history of the township of Smith and the village itself.

Closing Meeting Of Havelock Y.P.S.

HAVELOCK, May 31 (Examiner Correspondence). — The closing meeting of Knox Church Young People's Association was held in the Sunday School Room on Monday evening, and was largely attended. After the regular business session a delightful program under the convenorship of Miss Betty Mathison was given.

Vocal solo, "Old Faithful," by Miss Helen Bedford; a talk by Dr. Thompson on the likeness of the human body to the motor car; and a short additional talk on First-aid: vocal solo by Lois Thompson "There's a little old church in the Valley," a group of games conducted by P. Yuill, and a concluding solo number, "Bye-Bye Blues," by Betty Mathison, rounded out a very pleasing program. Afterwards a dainty lunch was served by the young ladies of the association.

WEEKLY LIVESTOCK REVIEW

TORONTO, May 31 (C.P.) — Price changes were numerous on the Toronto Livestock Market this week, but were mostly on the down side. The only gain was in the hog division which went up 25 cents on Wednesday but closed easier. The cattle division was 50 to 60 cents lower on some grades, with others from 15 to 25 cents lower. Calves dropped 50 cents and truck hogs were 10 cents lower.

Receipts were heavier in all divisions and about 700 head of cattle were left over at the close of trading. There were no American buyers on the market. The decline was due to the influence of stagnant and lower American markets.

Butcher cattle were generally 25 cents lower. Butcher cows sold steady to 15 cents lower, and fed calves were down 25 cents. A few of the best weighty steers sold at $7 to $7.50 cwt, with closing tops at $7.35. Common steers sold as low as $4.25. Good cows brought $4.25 to $4.75, with canners and cutters at $1.50 to $2.75.

Butcher bulls of good quality sold steady at $4 to $4.50 and bolognas brought $3.50 to $3.75. Fed calves opened at $7.50 to $8 for choice, but closed at a general top of $7.50 with mediums downward to $4.50 cwt. Plain stockers sold slowly at $4 to $4.50.

One load of feeders brought $6.75 on Monday. A few good Durham cows brought $30 to $40 each. The store cattle movement slowed up and some were unsold at the close.

One load of good veal calves was taken for Buffalo, but the market for good and choice calves dropped 50 cents after Monday, while common to medium calves held steady. Tops opened at $7 to $7.50 and closed generally at $6.50 with only a few making $7 cwt. Common to medium calves sold readily at $3.50 to $5.75.

Prices advanced unevenly on the hog division up to Wednesday, but the close was easier. Bacon sold at $9 f.o.b., at $9.25 off trucks and at $9.75 weighed off cars. With only truck hogs offered Thursday the price was down 10 cents at $9.15 for bacons. Bids from packers were down to $8.75 for weekend loadings.

Sheep and lamb receipts included 800 Western feed-lot lambs, and a couple of cars from Ontario feedlots. An offering of 600 lambs sold last Saturday at $6.50 to $8.50 cwt. Monday's feed-lot lambs brought $8. Spring lambs opened at $10 cwt. for choice and at $7 to $9 cwt. for common to medium grades. Sheep were unchanged at $1 to $3.50 cwt. according to quality.

SALES TAX HITS CHURCH PAPERS

aid is making itself felt very strongly. Rev. Dr. Ernest Thomas of Toronto said in an address to the report of the evangelistic and social service committee. He declared the times are auspicious for a spreading of the evangelical gospel.

"This Bay of Quinte Conference pledges its cordial co-operation in the futherance of the Dominion-wide mission of renewal and witness recommended by the Inter-church committee on the Evangelism of Canadian Life". Andrew McLaughlin stated, presenting the report of the Evanglism and Social Service committee. "In proclamation of this evangelism one of the most demanding necessities of this present-time is for the church, and in particular for her ministry, to realize and emphasize that to apprehend aright this Christian gospel of good news about God, is to apprehend at the same time our responsibility for the accomplishment of a more Christian order."

Christian Living

Further, the report urged upon all ministers the importance of special evangelical efforts with a view to persuading men in this day of deep need to a "definite and ever fuller commitment of themselves to the Christian way of living."

Rev. Dr. J. M. Shaw of Queen's University, chairman of the committee, spoke to the report. He claimed adolescents of to-day take a very light attitude toward the matter of smoking. Newspaper advertising of cigarettes and tobacco is responsible for that he said.

He declared ministers break loose with a sermon denouncing liquor once or twice each year yet overlook their duty of talking to the young unmarried men and women of their congregations about their "tremendous and delicate" one, he claimed.

Dr. Shaw contended in a further word that young people are not thinking in terms of evangelism.

Dr. Baker

Dr. E. W. Baker of Belleville, ex-principal of Albert College and one of the oldest United Church ministers in the Dominion, took the floor. "I am disturbed to hear that the evangelism of forty years ago is not being accepted to-day". He spoke of the only "approach to God" as an hour's service on one's knees.

Rev. Dr. D. N. Morden of Perth was given the floor on the same subject "What I am afraid of as a minister is that I shall not be seized with the importance of this at the present time", he said, referring to a conference controversy over the modern and old-time evangelism which seemed to be arising.

"The fact that forty men got up and left during this discussion indicates to me it has no vital effect," Shouts of "Hear! Hear!" were heard through the gathering.

Rev. Morden declared the church is now faced with a crisis and that an emphasis of evangelism is the only way out. "We've got to get God into the experience of our life."

Prof Watts

Prof. J. R. Watts of Queen's University, introduced by Rev. J. M. Allen of Pembroke, chairman of the Home Missions committee, asserted that over-churching has been largely responsible for the fact a number of ministers in northern charges are being paid less than $1,000 a year. The rural communities throughout the settled areas of the province are overchurched, he said.

He said rural churches nationally suffer more acutely in depressed times than churches in larger centres. However, he maintained a great measure of the distress of rural churches is the result of mismanagement.

Young Peoples' Leader

Stephen Saywell of Oshawa declared the condition of Young People's work in the Bay of Quinte Conference has never been better. "The Young People's Societies need the church and the church needs the Young People's Societies."

He said that reports of increasing numbers of young people drifting away from the church are erroneous' He assured the delegates that they may count on the present youth in the United Church to carry on the work in the future. The great need at present is a definite program reaching well into the future for the Young People's department, he said.

Y.P. Conference

This is the year of the Young People's Bi-ennial Conference, he said .It will be held in Kingston later in the summer. The young leader asked for the whole-hearted support of Young People's work by ministers of the Conference.

Returned Missionary

Mrs. C. M. Scott of Peterborough, a former missionary to India, and conference president of the Women's Missionary Society, brought greetings to the Conference from the W.M.S. of the Conference. She outlined the program of the W.M.S. asserting the Society is making a great contribution to the religious work of the church. She drew a vivid word picture of the life through an average day at a W.M.S. mission post in India, describing, among other institutions, a typical W.M.S. hospital in the East.

Surgical work is often the opening of the door for the evangelist among the mission subects, she said. Recovering from ailments with the aid of W.M.S. doctors patients are often open to the message from Christ she said.

Other Conferences

By the Canadian Press

Another stormy session in debates on war, a discussion on the question of a National Church for Canada occupied attention of two separate conferences of the United Church as they continued sessions in Ontario, yesterday.

Hamilton conference, meeting at Guelph, was the scene of a vigorous battle over the wording of a resolution condemning war. The matter was stood over until today. An attack on text books that glorified war was also made.

Dr. James Endicott, of the board of foreign missions, told Hamilton conferees, mission branch of the church was in a serious financial plight. Situation was worse than at any time in the church's history. Unless financial assistance was forthcoming closing of one or more mission fields was inevitable, he said.

An address by Rev. Gordon A. Sisco, Sarnia, featured yesterday's session of the London conference, meeting at Stratford. Mr. Siscoe said he was not afraid to visualize a national church in Canada, because a national church in Canada was not a state Church.

Rev. W. S. Owen, Stratford, was chosen president of the Theological Union. W. G. MacArthur was elected president of the Laymen's Association of the London conference.

HIGH SCHOOL GETS NUMBER 1 GRADING

CAMPBELLFORD, May 31 (Examiner Correspondence).—A regular meeting of the Board of Education was held at the Public Library on Monday evening; Chairman John A. Irwin presiding. Trustee George A. Kingston was appointed as representative of the board to attend a meeting of the Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association which will be held in the village of Warkworth on Friday June 7th.

According to Inspector Anglin's report, the accommodation and equipment of the Campbellford High School was graded No. 1, and the average efficiency of the teaching staff was graded high.

The report also made refrence to the need of redecorating the interior of the building, and also made recommendation for certain additional equipment for the gymnasium. Trusee Glan Thompson drew the attention of the board to the advantage to be gained by having a bi-monthly report form sent to the parents to show the standing of pupils in the various subjects. His suggestion meeting with approval, a committee composed of Principal Charles Haig, G. A. Kingston and A. G. Thompson was appointed to draw up the wording and have the necessary number of forms printed. The pay sheet was then read by Secretary Wesley Stephens and after passing same the board adjourned.

30,000 ARE SAID TO BEEN KILLED

shook the Quetta district early this morning.

The native city, railway station and civil government offices were destroyed in a series of three violent shocks. The first was felt at 2:44 a.m. (4:44 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.)

Four Out Of Five Killed

Four out of five of the population between Quetta and Kalat, 100 miles to the south, were reported to have been killed.

Every building in the area was either destroyed or seriously damaged.

The shocks were felt severely in the upper districts of Sind province.

The populace of Larkana, Shikarpur, and Ratadero spent the remainder of the night in the open, many praying to their Hindu gods.

The quakes were so strong that even birds were thrown from their nests.

Of the 44 killed at the airdrome, one was an officer. The number three indian squadron and two 'army cooperation' squadrons are stationed here.

Communications Severed

All communication with the stricken area was severed. Among the reported casualties were members of the railway staff stationed in the village.

The earth shocks were said to have spread devastation over a wide area.

Quetta is the capital of British Baluchistan and the southernmost point in the line of frontier posts and strategic railways on the northwest frontier of India. It is situated 536 miles north of Karachi.

The name also is applied to the district in which the city is located, an area of 5,127 square miles.

The capital has a population of approximately 49,000. It stands in an open plain about 5,500 feet above sea level within a ring of mountains which rise above it to an altitude of more than 11,000 feet. It is the trade centre for much of Western Afghanistan, Eastern Persia and parts of Central Asia. Commerce in fruit is one of its principal activities.

LIONEL HOLMES GETS WIN CREDIT

St. John's Nine Stages Great Comeback to Defeat St. Mary's 11-9.

CAMPBELFORD LEAGUE.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 31 (Examiner Staff Correspondence). — The best game of the season was witnessed by a large crowd of spectators at the School Grounds on Thursday evening when Les. Stover's St. John's put it over St. Mary's by a score of 11-9.

If ever luck changed it was at the start of the 6th innings. St. Mary's had been having things all their own way, with the sign-board reading 9-3 in their favor. Then things began to happen and St. John's came to life just when the crowd was beginning to drift, those Stover boys actually changed those figures by ringing up 8 more runs. Young Tommy Smith pitched an excellent ball for the first three innings—then Lionel Holmes, with a home run already to his credit, took a hand, and to him the credit for victory is given in last night's game, when in the last innings, with three on, he struck out Frank O'Sullivan and the old ball game was over.

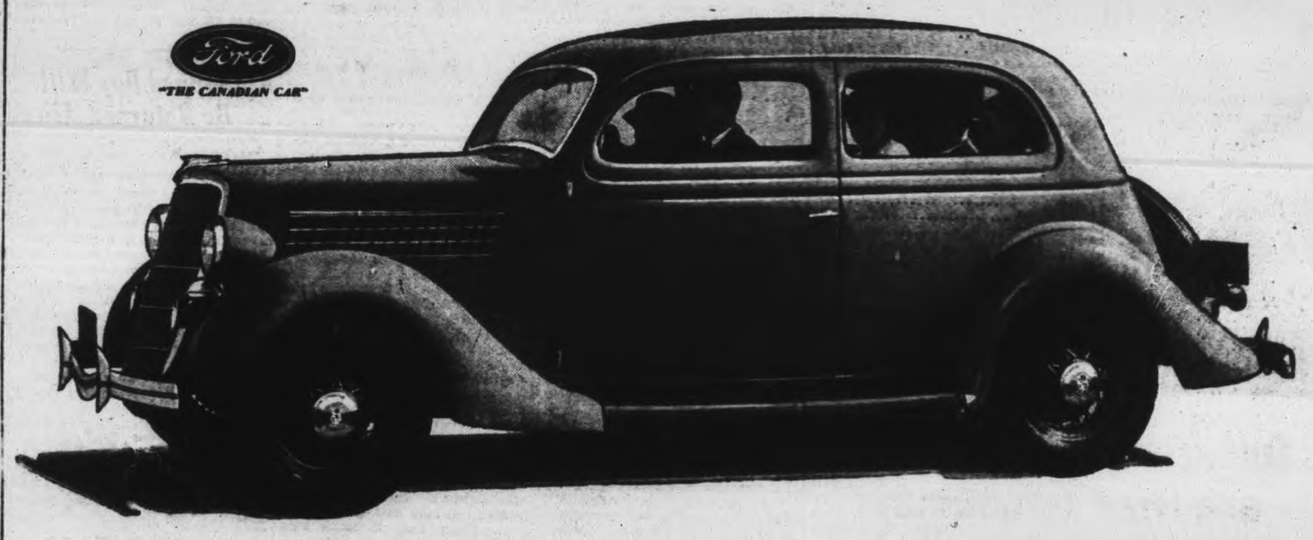
It was just about as spectacular a climax as was ever seen in any league game, and that crowd did roar. Don Meyers, Choppy Bennett, and Ken Davis did some grand work in the outfield, all making sensational catches. The line-ups:

St. John's — E. Wilks, c; Tom Smith, p; Maybee, 1b; Myers, 2b; S. Flint, 3b; Bennett, ss; Couch, rf; Holmes, cf; Ed. Grills, lf.

St. Mary's — Frank O'Sullivan, c; Crossen, p; Davis, 1b; McKay, 2b; Morton, 3b; Ed. Bush, ss; C. Bush, rf; Keating, cf; Turley, lf.

The next game called is for Tuesday, June 4, when St. John's will clash with St. Andrew's at 6.30 sharp.

In the FORD V-8 you ride completely surrounded by SAFETY GLASS* and STEEL



*Safety Glass standard equipment all around in all closed models

AGAIN we demonstrate the Ford policy of continuous improvement. The Ford V-8 you order today will have Safety Glass all around without a penny of extra cost. Whether you buy a De Luxe or a Standard model, you are secure in the knowledge that the passengers in your car will have this added protection.

The second standard Ford V-8 safeguard is the all-steel, one-piece welded body. Every panel, rib-brace and bracket is steel — with no seams to open, no part to yield. In laboratory tests, the steel V-8 body has supported a weight of approximately 3500 pounds. This load did not distort the body.

Other safety factors of the V-8 are the bigger brakes, tip-toe clutch and brake operation, finger-tip ease of steering and the larger 30-pound pressure tires with wider tread. The wider transverse springs increase stability—reduce "sway" on fast turns. Have a demonstration soon of Ford V-8 safety. See how it balances V-8 performance, economy and riding comfort.

The extra safety of the Ford V-8 is vital to all . . . is is doubly important where there are children. The Ford has always been a leader in safety. Ford pioneered in the use of the all-steel body with Safety Glass in a low-price car.

SHERIF'S BRASS BAND PLAYS FOR LAWRENCE

EARS ACHED WITH NOISE AS WAR-PRISONER BAND PLAYED TERRIBLE MUSIC

Got Tired of Turkish Music and Asked for German Numbers.

LAWRENCE STARTS TRIP

By T. E. LAWRENCE

In the evening the telephone rang; and the Sherif called Storrs to the instrument. He asked if we would not like to listen to his band. Storrs, in astonishment, asked what band? and congratulated his holiness on having advanced so far towards urbanity. The Sherif explained that the headquarters of the Hejaz Command under the Turks had had a brass band, which played each night to the Governor-General; and when the Governor-General was captured by Abdulla at Taif his band was captured with him. The other prisoners were sent to Egypt for interment; but the band was expected. It was held in Mecca to give music to the victors. Sherif Hussein laid his receiver on the table of his reception hall, and we, called solemnly one by one to the telephone, heard the band in the Palace at Mecca forty-miles away. Storrs expressed the general gratification; and the Sherif, increasing his bounty replied that the band should be sent down by forced march to Jidda, to play in our court-yard also, "And," said he, "you may then do me the pleasure of ringing me up from your end, that I may share your satisfaction."

Not Right Leader

Next day Storrs visited Abdulla in his tent out by Eve's Tomb; and together they inspected the hospital, the barracks, the town offices, and partook of the hospitality of the Mayor and the Governor. In the intervals of duty they talked about money, and the Sherif's title, and his relations with the other Princes of Arabia, and the general course of the war; all the comonplaces that should pass between envoys of two governments. It was tedious, and for the most part I held myself excused, as I had made up my mind that Abdulla was not the necessary leader.

The company of Sherif Shakir, Abdulla's cousin and best friend, proved more exciting. Shakir, a grandee of Taif, had been playmate from boyhood of the Sherif's sons; and he played yet, publicly and privately, in the enormous fashion which his wealth and courage and self-confidence united to make possible. Never before had I met so sudden a man, passing instantly from a frozen dignity to a whirlwind or jesting life, strident, intense, athletic, magnificent. His face, eaten away by small-pox so that hardly a hair-root remained, mirrored like the window of a speeding car at once what passed without and within it.Abdulla had commanded at the siege of Taif: but it was Shakir who led the troops with a headlong dash that defeated its own purpose by excess of danger. The Arabs dared not support him into the very breach of the wall: and Shikir had to return, alone and unscathed, cursing his fellows, laughing at them, and jeering wildly at the discomfited enemy: whose revenge was to pour petrol over his great house, and burn it, with its famous library of Arabic manuscripts.

Brought Along Band

That evening Abdulla came to dine with Colonel Wilson. We received him in the courtyard on the house tops. Behind him were his brilliant household servants and slaves, and behind them a pale crew of bearded, emaciated men with woe-begone faces, wearing tatters of military uniform, and carrying tarnished brass instruments of music. Abdulla waved his hand towards them and crowed with delight, "My Band." We sat them on benches in the forecourt, and Wilson sent them cigarettes, while we went up to the dining-room, where the shuttered balcony opened right out, hungrily, for a sea breeze. As we sat down, the band, under the guns and swords of Abdulla's retainers, began heart-broken Turkish airs. Our ears ached with noise, but Abdulla beamed.

We got tired of Turkish music, and asked for German. An aide-de-camp stepped out on the balcony and called down to the bandsmen in Turkish to play us something foreign. They struck shakily into "Deutschland uber Alles" just as the Sherif came to his telephone in Mecca to listen to the music of our feast. We asked for more German music; and they played "Ein'feste Burg." Then in the midst they died away into flabby discords of drums. The parchment had stretched in the damp air of Jidda. They cried for fire; and Wilson's servants and Abdulla's bodyguard brought them piles of straw and packing cases. They warmed the drums, turning them round and round before the blaze, and then broke into what they said was the Hymn of Hate, though no one could recognise a European progression in it all. Some one turned to Abdulla and said, "It is a death march." Abdulla's eyes widened; but Storrs who spoke in quickly to the rescue turned the moment to laughter; and we sent out rewards with the leavings of the feast to the sorrowful musicians, who could take no pleasure in our praises, but begged to be sent home.

Riding up to Feisal

Next morning I left Jidda by ship for Rabegh, the headquarters of Sherif Ali, Abdulla's elder brother. When Ali received his father's "order" to send me at once up to Feisal, he was staggered, but could not help himself. So he prepared for me his own splendid riding-camel, saddled with his own saddle, and hung with luxurious housings and cushions of Nejd leather-work pieced and inlaid in various colors, with plaited fringers and nets embroidered with metal tissues. As a trustworthy man he chose out Tafas, a Hawazim Harb tribesman, with his son, to guide to Feisal's camp.

Ali would not let me start till after sunset, lest any of his followers see me leave the camp. He kept my journey a secret even from his slaves, and gave me an Arab cloak and headcloth to wrap round myself and my uniform, that I might present a proper silhouette in the dark upon my camel. I had no food with me; so he instructed Tafas to get something to eat at Bir el Sheikr, the first settlement, some sixty miles out, and charged him most stringently to keep me from questioning and curiosity on the way, and to avoid all camps and encounters.

Hills Were Too Rough.

We marched through the palm-groves which lay like a girdle about the scattered houses of Rabegh village, and then out under the stars along the Tehama, the sandy and featureless strip of desert bordering the western coast of Arabia between sea-beach and littoral hills, for hundreds of monotonous miles. In daytime this low plain was insufferably hot, and its waterless character made it a forbidding road; yet it was inevitable, since the more fruitful hills were too rugged to afford passage north and south for loaded animals.

The cool of the night was pleasant after the day of checks and discussions which had so dragged at Rabegh. Tafas led on without speaking, and the camels went silently over the soft flat sand. My thoughts as we went were how this was the Pilgrim Road, down which, for uncounted generations, the people of the north had come to visit the Holy City, bearing with them gifts of faith for the shrine; and it seemed that the Arab Revolt might be in a sense a return pilgrimage, to take back to the north, to Syria, an ideal for an ideal, a belief in liberty for their past belief in a revelation.

We endured for some hours, without variety except at times when the camels plunged and strained a little and the saddles creaked; indications that the soft plain had merged into beds of drift-sand, dotted with tiny scrub, and therefore uneven going, since the plants collected little mounds about their roots, and the eddies of the sea-winds scooped hollows in the intervening spaces. Camels appeared not sure-footed in the dark, and the starlit sand carried little shadows, so that hummocks and holes were difficult to see. Before midnight we halted, and I rolled myself tighter in my cloak, and chose a hollow of my own size and shape, and slept well in it till nearly dawn.

ROBERT ROHME

Robert Rohme, Austrian-born Englishman, was recently sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment by a German court in Berlin for "making grossly insulting remarks about Herr Hitler, the German nation and German women." According to a letter to his wife in London, however, Rohme intimated he soon may be reunited with his family.

SATURDAY NIGHT WILL BRING TO CLOSE THIRD PERIOD OF CLUB

friends from the different districts are expected to be present to wish their candidates "bon voyage."

It will be a day of excitement for all as they board the train and bid "auvoir" to the friends who so loyally backed them in their effort to win. Upon their return they will have hundreds of interesting stories to tell. During the time they are away every hour will be crammed full of interesting episodes, there will not be a dull moment from the time of departure till the day they step off the train at Peterborough and close the cover on their travel book that will remain dear to them forever.

STANDING

	Votes
Miss Marjorie Frankish, R.R. No. 2, Lakefield	3,286,750
Miss Mary Jones, Hastings	3,215,950
Miss Marjorie Francis, Keene	3,178,500
Miss Viva Shearer, Hall's Bridge	3,150,000
Miss Margaret Sullivan, Ennismore	3,095,600
Miss Olive Bell, R. R. No. 4, Peterborough	3,021,750

Miss Ruth Evans, Indian River	2,780,900
Mrs. Dave Wellman, Bonarlaw	2,780,600
Mrs. George Fife, Indian River	2,780,600
Miss Gertrude Franklin, Marmora	2,780,600

Without a decidedly accurate check, it is really impossible to definitely state the exact standing of the above tied candidates.

Miss Virginia Lobb, Westwood	2,750,900
Miss Roberta Wood, Fraserville	2,746,800
Mrs. Roy Longmuir, Havelock	2,730,500
Mrs. H. T. Scott, Campbellford	2,272,900
Miss Marion Armstrong, Peterborough	2,200,500
Mrs. Theo. Douglas, Warsaw	2,200,500
Miss Helen Thomas, Campbellford	2,200,500

Less than a two year's subscription would change the standing for Miss Lobb and Miss Wood, while a very slight marginal difference would place Miss Thomas in a higher order.

OTHER CONTESTANTS

The following contestants are by no means out of the running for the free tours. The race is a decidedly close one and startling as it may sound, the element of competition is so keen and the race so close between even more than one of the following candidates for higher honors, that the best estimate of the ultimate outcome of the Travel Club competition would be but a mere guess. Only the end of the campaign will reveal the names of the winning ladies. Up to now, at the half way mark, it is still anybody's race.

OMEMEE COUPLE 53 YEARS WED

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Poast Honored by Friends and Relatives.

BOTH IN GOOD HEALTH

OMEMEE, May 31 (Examiner Correspondence) — Mr. and Mrs. Richard Poast, well-known and highly respected citizens of Omemee, celebrated the 53rd anniversary of their marriage on Thursday, May 30th.

The elderly couple celebrated quietly with relatives and close friends while the whole community extended to them best wishes for many more years of wedded bliss.

Mr. Poast is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Poast and was born on the fourteenth concession of Cavan Township over seventy years ago. Mrs. Poast, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Balfour, was the eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Balfour. They were united in marriage by the Rev. Edward Barass, pastor of the Omemee Methodist Church, on May 30, 1882. They settled on a farm approximate to their old homes and by arduous toil and careful management they made a great success of their undertakings.

Four daughters and two sons were born of this union, all of whom received a good education which enables them to fill a place of responsibility in life. The living are Mrs. P. H. Coad, Mrs. Elvin Laird and Winnifred Poast, all of Saskatoon, Sask. and Mrs. Melville Lethangue, of Ballyduff and Orman Poast of London, Ont. Roy, the youngest of the family at the age of 17 while attending the University heard the country's call and enlisted in the Great War. He paid the supreme acrifice.

There are also nine grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Poast were both members of the former Methodist Church and later entered into the United Church. They are still very regular in their attendance at church and very seldom miss either the morning or evening worship. Both are in very good health and quite active in household and church duties.

Presiding Teachers Named For Exams.

JANETVILLE, May 31 (Examiner Correspondence) — A change has been made this year in regard to the presiding officers for the coming midsummer examinations which centre here. In previous years, Mrs. Carscadden of Bethany Public School, presided for the examinations, but this year the local Continuation School teacher, Miss Eunice Malcolm will preside for the entrance examinations, while Percy Hamilton of the local Public School will preside over the Departmentals.

Ontario's Highways are NOT Speedways!

SENSELESS SPEED which leaves terrible injuries and death in its wake is hardening the hearts of people, police and courts against all reckless drivers. They will be dealt with ruthlessly . . . to make Ontario's highways safe for everyone.

In self-defence you are wise to fight the temptation to speed . . . especially at night. Make sure that your brakes, lights and tires are efficient. Cultivate a definite sense of responsibility towards pedestrians and other drivers. It is the only wise course.

DEATH SENTENCE GIVEN BOY OF 18 ENGLISH COURT

Verdict Ends One of Most Sensational Murder Trials in London.

DISREGARD INSANE PLEA.

Rattenburys Lived For Several Years on Canada's Pacific Coast.

LONDON, May 31 (CP)—George Percy Stoner to-day was found guilty in the Bournemouth Triangle murder case and sentenced to death. His co-defendant, Mrs. Alma Rattenbury, was acquitted.

The verdict ended one of the most sensational murder trials the Old Bailey has ever witnessed. The couple—the boy aged 18, and the woman aged 38—were tried for the murder of the woman's elderly husband, Francis Mawson Rattenbury. The Rattenburys lived for several years on Canada's Pacific coast, and Mrs. Rattenbury spent her childhood in Kamloops.

No Insanity Evidence

The jury of ten men and two women gave heed to the defence contention Stoner struck the blow with a mallet that inflicted fatal injury to Rattenbury but disregarded the plea the youth was insane with drugs and jealousy at the time.

The jury was instructed by Mr. Justice Humphreys there was no evidence on which they could come to the conclusion if Stoner was guilty, he was insane at the time—"so as not to be responsible in law for his actions."

Waited All Night

People again waited all night long to get into the Old Bailey where the trial has gone on before a tense throng since Monday. The throng was undeterred by the rain that fell during the night. The jury might think the result of the evidence as a whole pointed to young Stoner as the person who caused the injury to Rattenbury and Mrs. Rattenbury was a party to the attack but not the actual assailant, said his lordship, in his charge.

If it had been proved to their satisfaction Stoner attacked Rattenbury without justification, and thereby committed wounding without intention to cause grievous bodily harm, if not killing, then unless something happened in the case Stoner was guilty of murder, he declared. (Rattenbury died four days after he was struck).

If the jury came to the conclusion it was proved Mrs. Rattenbury was present and was aiding and abetting Stoner in the commission of the crime, or that although absent she had counselled and procured—that is to say, advised, agreed with, and suggested to Stoner he should commit the crime, then as an accessory before the fact she was equally guilty of murder.

His Lordship declared the verdicts must be separate. There were statements in the course of the trial which were evidence against the person who made them, but not against the person who did not make them, he pointed out.

A Healthy Shake

BALTIMORE, May 30.—(CP)—Patrolman Harry Bates shook hands hard enough yesterday to break his arm.

Bates, a western district officer here, saw Irvin Edelstein, a friend, on the street. They shook hands vigorously and Bates felt a sharp pain in his arm.

Physicians at Mercy Hospital found Bates' arm was broken just below the shoulder.

FLOWER DISPLAY IS BIG SUCCESS

Beautiful Showing of Tulips and Other Spring Flowers Shown.

PRIZE WINNERS

The first flower display of the year under the auspices of the show committee of the Peterborough Horticultural Society was staged in Comstock's store window on Wednesday.

The quality of the bloom, despite the dry weather, was of the highest standard and many comments pointed to greater public interest in the work of this society.

The committee, under the chairmanship of J. S. Mason, with the capable assistance of Cecil Lapp and the staff of Messrs. Comstock and Sons as deserving of high praise for a beautiful display of tulips and other Spring flowers. Displays by C. A. Hope were of a high standard and tasteful design. A special class of tulip novelties called for special mention. The prize list follows:

Darwin Tulips

12 blooms alike or different.—1, J. S. McGiffen, Parkhill road; 2, Geo. East, 14 Lundy's Lane.

Vase of mixed tulips.—1, W. Smith, 314 Mark street; 2, J. A. Smith, 150 Benson ave.

Vase of poeticus narcissus. — W. Smith, 314 Mark street.

Bowl of Pansies.—W. Smith, 314 Mark street.

Vase of Spring flowers — W. Smith, 314 Mark street.

Collection of tulip novelties—1, W. C. Wilks, 584 Chamberlain street; 2, W. Smith, 314 Mark street.

The committee wishes to acknowledge the kindliness of Messrs. Comstock and the services of W. H. Young who filled the position as judge.

The public is invited to watch for further announcements regarding future window displays of roses, delphinium and dahlias in season.

And growers are advised to get their tubers ready in time for a special window display of dahlias in the autumn, when a trophy will be presented for the grower obtaining the most points.

Pope Pius Reaches His 78th Birthday

VATICAN CITY, May 31.—(AP)—Pope Pius reached his 78th birthday today, having served as pontiff for a longer period than 234 of his 261 predecessors.

The head of the Catholic church declined to let the anniversary disturb his normal routine.

Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, took much more notice of the Pope's birthday than did the pontiff himself. It was Pacelli's duty to acknowledge the heaps of telegrams of felicitation that arrived from every part of the world, many of them from crowned head and chiefs of governments.

Prelates who have seen the Pope recently say he is in fine physical condition. He works nearly as hard as when he was elected to the throne of St. Peter 13 years ago.

Magistrate's Court

Seven days' imprisonment was the sentence given to Ethel Martin, 411 Bethune Street, when she pleaded "guilty" to-day to a charge of driving an automobile while in an intoxicated condition.

She was originally charged in the name of Ethel Munro, but when her name called she stated that her surname was Martin and the charge was accordingly amended.

The accused, who had nothing to say on her own behalf, was stated by Chief Constable Samuel Newhall to have been arrested at three o'clock this morning along with a male companion, whose car she was driving.

Pleading guilty to an intoxication charge, the man was fined $40 and $4.05 costs, or in default, 25 days' imprisonment.

Three brothers appeared before the bench on various charges arising out of an accident in which they were involved, when the car driven by Timothy Burn crashed into and damaged a switch on the Canadian National Railway tracks last night on Bethune Street, between Brock and Aylmer Streets.

Timothy Burn was charged with reckless and negligent driving, while his brothers, Leo and Edward Burn, all of Kinmount were charged with being intoxicated.

Each of the defendants asked for an adjournment, and made application for bail, and entered pleas of "not guilty" to the charges.

The Magistrate in ordering a remand until Tuesday next, set bail in the sum of $250 on the reckless driving charge, and $100 each on the "drunk" charges.

27 LIVES LOST AT SEA WHEN STEAMER BURNED

BAKU, U.S.S.R., May 31 (AP) — The Russian steamship Sovietsky Azerbaikan was reported to-day to have burned in the Caspian Sea the night of May 27 with a loss of 27 lives. The steamship "Soviet" rescued two of the vessel's crew and picked up two bodies.

The victims, most of whom were believed to have perished in the flames, were 23 members of the crew and the wives of four. The Azerbaikan was en route from Krasnovodsk to Astrakhan with a cargo of 1,000 tons of highly inflammable oil. It had the Soviet, also loaded with oil in tow.

FORD COMPANY ENLARGES EAST WINDSOR PLANT

Factory Operating at Limit of Capacity Since First of January.

TO SPEND $2,000,000.

More Electric Power Required Anticipating Increased Business.

EAST WINDSOR, Ont., May 31.—(CP).—Power house equipment to the value of approximately $2,000,000 will be added to the Ford Motor Company of Canada plant here to provide for increased production expected to take place next year.

President Wallace R. Campbell, in announcing to-day tenders had been asked for the additional equipment, said the company's plant had been operating "at absolute capacity" since the beginning of the year.

"And with the expected continuation of the revival of business in Canada and overseas," added Mr. Campbell, "we have decided it is essential to make provision for more electric power and additional steam supply for processing the plant heating."

It is hoped to have the new equipment in operation early in 1936.

APPEALS HEARD HASTINGS COURT

H. J. Duffort's Assessment on Building Reduced $50.00.

COMPLAINTS WITHDRAWN

HASTINGS, May 31 (Examiner Correspondence) — The Court of Revision for the village of Hastings was held in the council chambers on Monday morning at ten o'clock. Reeve Dr. J. H. Hess and Councillors Kelley, Brooks, Lynch and Fairman present. These gentlemen filed their declaration as members of said Court of Revision and took their seats as members of the said court.

Moved by Kelley, seconded by Lynch that the reeve be chairman and the clerk be secretary of the said court of revision.

The following appeals were dealt with:—

Moved by Kelley, seconded by Fairman that W. C. Allen's assessment be confirmed as it now reads.

Moved by Brooks, seconded by Lynch that H. J. Duffort's assessment on building be reduced $50.

The appeal against G. B. Stevenson's assessment was withdrawn by the complainant H. J. Duffort.

The chairman, Reeve Dr. J. H. Hess vacated the chair while his assessment was being dealt with, H. G. Fairman in the chair. The appeal was withdrawn by the complainant, H. J. Duffort.

The appeals lodged by Mr. Duffort against the assessments of Councillors Fairman and Lynch and assessor G. R. Kerr were also withdrawn by the complainant, Mr. Duffort.

Moved by Kelley, seconded by Lynch that the assessment of Charles Brinklow be lowered $50 on land and $125 on building and that the assessment now read $1,125.

N. M. McCullough of Kitchener representing the Breithaupt Leather Co., addressed the council on their behalf as did G. B. Stevenson who appealed against their assessment.

Moved by Brooks, seconded by Lynch that the assessment of the Breithaupt Leather Co. be confirmed as now assessed.

Moved by Fairman, seconded by Brooks that the business assessment of W. N. Beavis be changed to read $100.

Moved by Lynch, seconded by Brooks that the land assessment of Miss G. Coughlan be reduced $100.

Moved by Kelley, seconded by Lynch that the assessment of H. C. Foster be confirmed as it now reads.

Moved by Kelley, seconded by Lynch that Messrs. Lamey and Quinlan be assessed as owners of the Queen's Hotel.

Moved by Fairman, seconded by Lynch that Mrs. Margaret Quinlivan's name be added to the roll as a M.W.

Moved by Kelley, seconded by Fairman that E. M. Hess be assessed in the W. B. Barry property and it changed to public school.

Moved by Kelley, seconded by Brooks that the property assessed to Wm. Wellman read north of Front and east of Bridge.

Moved by Fairman, seconded by Lynch that H. Peterseil be assessed for the Edgar McKee property as owner.

Moved by Brooks, seconded by Lynch that Wilbert Simpson be assessed as tenant on John Beamish's property and wife as M.W.

Moved by Fairman, seconded by Brooks that Edward Mouncey be changed to Mrs. Brown property and in public school.

Moved by Fairman, seconded by Brooks that this court adjourn to meet again at 7 p.m.

The council met at 7 p.m. pursuant to adjournment, a full council in attendance.

Moved by Kelley, seconded by Fairman that Lot 14 block F be assessed to Cyril Blackbourn, Jr. as owner and that the amount of assessment be $50.

Moved by Kelley, seconded by Fairman that the former assessment of W. C. Allen by this court be amended and now read as follows that his assessment of building be reduced $50.

The council checked over the roll and formed the opinion that there were names on there for the sole purpose of evading poll tax. It was decided to get legal advice and discuss it at the adjourned meeting.

Moved by Brooks, seconded by Lynch that this court adjourn to meet on Monday, June 1 at 7 p.m.

BOUSSION FAILS TO FORM GOV'T

by President Lebrun to form a government succeeding that of Flandin. He undertook the task against his own wishes, but made such demands for coalition support friends said he expected to fail.

Gold Reserve Dwindles

While the government crisis ruled, gold flowed out from the Bank of France in a ceaseless stream. The bank has lost about 13,000,000,000 francs ($858,000,000) in gold since the rush of withdrawals started March 20.

A powerful drive against domestic speculators, charged with gambling on and thereby jeopardising the franc, was launched as government investigation of banks and credit institutions was begun.

Magistrates began inquiries to find out whether financiers and speculators had advised clients to sell French Government bonds to buy gold mine stocks.

Gold buyers lined up at the bank's counters by the score and carried away bars of the metal, sometimes wrapped in newspapers.

St. James' Juniors Swamp All Saints'

St. James Juniors unloosed a hitting attack against three All Saints' pitchers in their Church League softball contest last night to pile up a 22-8 victory, reminiscent of St. James' champions the past two years. The Anglicans' infield was shaky with Mowry, for St. James, wild but effective. The losers pulled some weierd base-running to cut down their count. The first five St. James batters all got on base four times with Webb and Williams getting on often for the losers. The teams:

SEVERAL FINE TROUT.

Seven brook trout caught in the Little Ouse early this morning were being proudly displayed here to-day by Archie Reid of Reid Brothers' Garage. Mr. Reid believes that it is the early worm that catches the fish, to paraphrase the old adage. He used fly and worm bait while casting for the finny prizes.

Obituary

MRS. THOMAS LAPLANTE.

There was a large attendance of the friends of the late Mrs. Thomas Laplante at her funeral service this morning at St. Peter's Cathedral. Father Finn sang the Requiem High Mass and Father Costello preached the funeral sermon, and in the course of his remarks referred to the unselfish, thoughtful service of the deceased all through her long, active life. This service was rendered through her home, her church and the community in which she was born and lived all her life. The service at the grave was taken by Father Carrol and Father McFadden.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Frank Fairen, Fred McFadden, Robert Anderson, W. S. Merrill, Dr. D. C. King, and Gus White. The many spiritual and floral offerings were a testimony of the esteem in which the late Mrs. Laplante was held by her friends and neighbors.

Those from out of town attending the funeral were her son Frank Laplante and his wife and daughters, Misses Irene and Maude Laplante, of Rochester, Miss Nell Trenwith of Toronto, Mrs. M. Tierney and Mr. Harold Tierney of Rochester, N.Y., Miss Josephine Pringle of Rochester, N.Y., and Mr. and Mrs. Buckley of Oshawa.

MISS ANNIE McCORMACK.

The death occurred at St. Joseph's Hospital yesterday, following upon a lingering illness, of Annie McCormack, daughter of the late John McCormack and Joannah Tangney of this city.

A lifelong resident of Peterborough, the late Miss McCormack had been in business as a dressmaker at 8 Victoria avenue for many years. Surviving is a sister, Mrs. Simon McDonald of St. Mary's Ont., and three brothers, Edward McCormack, Montreal, Fred McCormack, Peterborough, and William McCormack, Toronto.

Remains are resting at Lane and Eano's Funeral Home, from which place the funeral is to be held at 8.30 a.m. Saturday to St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Peter's Cemetery.

MRS. ROBERT LONGMUIR.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 31.—Mary Johnston, widow of Robert Longmuir, died last night in her 72nd year at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Roger Lain, Concession 13, Seymour Township. She is also survived by one son, Cecil Longmuir, a teacher in Toronto.

The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to Mount Pleasant Cemetery here.

DIED

McCORMACK—On Thursday, May 30, 1935, Annie McCormack at St. Joseph's Hospital following a lingering illness. Remains are resting at Lane and Eano's Funeral Home from whence the funeral is to be held at 8.30 a.m. Saturday to St. Peter's Cathedral. Interment at St. Peter's Cemetery.

NEW YORK MINISTER SPEAKS AT QUINTE CONFERENCE BANQUET

Rev. Ralph W. Sockman Principal Speaker at Thursday Night's Session.

LARGE ATTENDANCE.

Exemplifying the partnership existing between the ministry and the laity of the United Church was the sumptuous banquet held last night under the auspices of the Laymen's Association.

George Street United Church was the mecca to which over five hundred delegates attending the Bay of Quinte Conference, with many interested friends gathered for this time of fellowship and inspiration.

A spiritual feast was also provided by the eminent speaker of the evening, Rev. Ralph W. Sockman, D.D. of Christ Church, Park Avenue, New York City.

The vast auditorium of George Street United Sunday School hall was filled to capacity and the long tables with their snowy napery were lovely, with centering bouquets of lilacs and tulips.

Community Singing

After the delightful repast served by the George Street ladies, community singing led by Rev. C. D. Daniel was enjoyed with Cyril Rice at the piano.

A musical program of high calibre was announced by E. C. Young of Oshawa, President of the entertaining association who presided throughout the evening.

The soloists included Cyril Rice, whose group was comprised of two of John Masefield's most attractive sea songs "Roadways" and "Cargoes", both winning much applause.

Robert Wagstaff, in an entirely different vein, also delighted the audience with his selections "Friend O' Mine" and "Song of the Highway."

Greater Co-Operation

In his brief chairman's address, Mr. Young urged for greater co-operation between minister and people. He assured the ministers that the people were looking to them for leadership, but warned them that they must keep abreast of the times if they would capture the thinking youth of to-day.

To the laymen, he suggested that they lend a helping hand to the ministers, putting first things first. With Jesus Christ our leader, the next ten years may far surpass the last.

Albert Davis, of Kingston, a pioneer in the work of the Lay Association, expressed his great pleasure at introducing the noted speaker from across the border. He spoke of our common problems and responsibilities, as the representations of two great nations.

A dynamic personality, a keen sense of humor and a compelling message, held the closest attention of Dr. Sockmans' audience who were particularly responsive and appreciative.

Taking as his theme "Partnership, rather than patronage," Dr. Sockman addressed both bodies represented before him. He told of reading in a report of the Rockefeller Foundation, the explanation that when they desire to start philanthropic work in any part of the world, they first enlist local aid, as they desire to become partners and not patrons.

"You as laymen and ministers, should become partners, with neither as patrons, asserted the reverend doctor. Even in our home there is too much patronage. The home should be a democracy, a partnership of free minds where the experience of the elders is blended with the experiments of the younger. The same is true in the school. The old attitude of handing down information is being superseded by the project method where teacher and pupils are fellow-seekers after the truth. Partnership should exist in international life as well. During the first years of the war, the United States was looked upon by Europe as a patron, not a partner. To-day, the peace of the world is in the hands of the great British Empire and the United States, between whom there is a deep feeling of friendship. Coming to the situation in the church, partnership should exist in our educational work. The minister is no longer the dogmatic spokesman to whom the people in the pews will listen supinely. Both the ministry and the lay members must keep studying, for the whole test of our education is that it will tap the artesian springs of interest which will keep us still studying at forty-five and fifty. Too often the college student merely catches the ideas that drip off the eaves of the professor's mind. We must be partners in continuing education, not only religious but cultural. Then, too, we must become partners in a new sense, in our preaching. The original group of disciples were not professionals, they were simply comrades of Christ, telling what they knew of their Lord. What is the church to-day? It is sometimes defined as professional propaganda, financed by silent spectators. We engage our ministers, our soloists and our evangelists, while the laity sit back and pay the bills—and some just sit back. This kind of regime is neither dynamic nor redemptive. If wealthy church members would give but a fraction of their money and a multiple of their time, what might not be accomplished? A patronized church is never a redemptive church. Christ said, "Ye are witnesses of these things," and that is where the church is weak to-day.

Attract Attention.

Within the last fifty years the Christian Science movement and the Oxford Group have attracted attention because of the contagion of the individual witnesses—each is a nucleus of propaganda. No sermon is so eloquent as that preached by a devout layman, and we must make preaching a style of conduct lived by layman and minister alike. We must become partners in our civic life, and we will need less politics in our pulpits if laymen will take more religion into their politics. As we come closer together physically, we grow farther apart spiritually unless we are careful. That is why in great cities there is a sharp social tension and we need the Gospel to bridge these social differences. Our greatest social challenge is how to beget a brotherhood that will stand up in this machine age. To do so will require Christ-like imagination and co-operation. More than these, we need consecration like that on the Cross in order to help the church face her responsibility. Many people are saying that the church is a lost cause to-day, but when we feel the throb of new movements and partnerships, we feel sure that some day the church of Jesus Christ will recover something of her original power with which to face the wilderness of our social problems. This, concluded the speaker, is our common task as ministers and laymen.

The sincere appreciation of the audience was voiced by Mr. Ross Strike of Bowmanville to Dr. Sockman for his magnificent message and his splendid gesture of goodwill in coming to this Conference, to the ladies for their fine culinary accomplishments, to the musicians for their messages in song, to the officers of the entertaining church for their hospitality, and to the officers of the Lay Association who were responsible for arrangements. This anual affair, which was one of the highlights of the Conference, was brought to a conclusion with prayer offered by Rev. J. E. Millyard, pastor of the entertaining church.

Weddings

DELYEA—BAKER

A very quiet wedding was solemnized in St. John's Roman Catholic Church, Plinton, on Wednesday morning by Rev. Father Kinlin, when Miss Lena Baker and Mr. Manley Delyea of Harlow were united in marriage. The young couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Demore. After the ceremony the bridal party motored to their home in Harlow, where a reception awaited them.

REAVIE—FREEBURN.

A quiet wedding took place at the United Church parsonage, Tweed, on Monday, when Janet Edna Albertha Freeburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Freeburn, of Plinton, became the bride of Charles Currie Reavie, son of M. and Mrs. Neil Reavie, also of Plinton. They were united in marriage by Rev. R. R. Nicholson, pastor of Tweed United Church.

The bride was charmingly gowned in blue crepe with accessories to match. They were attended by Miss Susie Simmons of Actinolite, who was also gowned in blue crepe, and Mr. Arthur Reavie, brother of the groom.

DEFINE POLICY ON FIRE CALLS

Appeals From Outside City Left to Mayor and Chairman.

RECENT INCREASE.

Authority to send apparatus of the Fire Department anywhere outside the city remains at the discretion of the Mayor and the chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

This confirmation of an established policy by the Committee last night, with Alderman McIntyre presiding, followed a statement by Mayor Denne that some recent calls for assistance have placed himself and Alderman McIntyre in a rather difficult position.

"I think the citizens desire to be friendly and helpful to their neighbors," His Worship said. "There have been times we have appealed for help. Lindsay sent their brigade down one time, and didn't charge us a cent. Norwood asked for our help a short time ago, and they have offered to pay us something for our services that day. Lakefield has called upon us. A few days ago we had an appeal to send part of the brigade to the Weir fire near Keene, but we learned that there was no water supply near at hand, so we decided that there was no use sending any of the equipment. Then we had a call this evening to a fire at several cottages east of Chemong, and we decided to send one of the machines. But the point is that the citizens are keeping up the department and they have first call for protection."

Alderman Macdonald enquired as to who would pay the insurance if a fire occurred here while any of the equipment and men were out of the city.

"That's hard to say," Mayor Denne replied, "but it is hard to have the responsibility put on Ald. McIntyre and myself."

"There are cases you certainly wouldn't like to refuse," Ald. Cotton said, and it was decided that the Mayor and the Chairman would continue to deal with any outside appeals.

"I am satisfied if the council is satisfied for us to use our judgment," the Mayor concluded.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY BIBLE SOCIETY

Meeting is Attended by Members of United and Anglican Churches.

CENTRETON, May 31 (Examiner Correspondence) — A Bible Society meeting was held recently in the United Church with members of the United and Anglican churches present. F. Wolfraim, presided, and the society's representative, Mr. Tyler, gave an address, his subject being, "The Word of the Lord was Precious in Those Days."

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, F. Wolfraim; secretary-treasurer, Percy Fraser; collectors, Misses Maud Wolfraim, Lillian Eden, Hazel Blogett, Vera Hope, Mabel Webb, Bessie Haines and Messrs. Bruce McKenzie and James Milgate.

J. Delanty and Ora Varcoe of Cobourg were in the village on Monday.

The members of the official Board of the United Church held a meeting on Monday night.

The Rev. Mr. Milman made several pastoral calls on members of the community during the week.

Guests at the home of Mr. Frank Wolfraim on Tuesday for the occasion of his birthday were Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wolfraim, Mrs. P. A. Thompson and Mr. William Wolfraim, Mrs. J. E. Wolfraim and Mrs. Arthur Black, Baltimore, and Mr. George Wolfraim and the Rev. P. H. Neville of Centreton.

235 FLAGS PLACED CITY CEMETERIES

Encouraging Reports Read at 57th Regimental Chapter I.O.D.E. Meeting.

The May meeting of the 57th Regiment Chapter I.O.D.E. was held in the officers' mess, Peterborough Rangers, yesterday afternoon with twenty-two members present.

The correspondence consisted of letters of thanks for flowers, for assistance given in connection with the refreshments for the Warrior's Ball. A letter from Mrs. O. Main, thanking the Chapter for its part in making her a national life member, and a letter from Bible Tract Society for donation to the Sailor's Fund.

Mrs. Sharp's report showed that 66 visits had been made at the hospital since the last meeting.

Mrs. G. R. Melton, convenor for decorating the departed soldier's graves on Empire Day, reported 200 flags placed in Little Lake cemetery and 35 in St. Peters.

Mrs. Fanning reported on Relief and $5 was voted for medical attention on a needy case.

Reference was made to the passing of the mothers of two of our members, Mrs. T. W. H. Young and Mrs. Goodwin suffering bereavement, and letters of condolence were authorized.

As this was the last meeting of the Chapter before the summer holidays plans were discussed for September activities. It was suggested that during the holidays each member make some inexpensive article and that a sale be held early in the Autumn. A raffle on a blanket or afghan was suggested and the matter left with Mrs. C. Newman. The Regent asked Mrs. Newman to give her paper again on Sir R. A. Eden at the September meeting.

Mrs. W. H. Howden gave her report on the May group and that Mrs. Dodds had offered her home for a lawn party during June. This offer was enthusiastically accepted; also the invitation from the Regent to hold their annual picnic at her summer home, Crawford's Grove. It was decided to hold this picnic on July 11th.

Mrs. Newman gave an interesting account of the Girl Guide and Boy Scout Rally held recently in Toronto and suggested that the Chapter assist them in some tangible way. On motion of Mrs Melton and Mrs. Ashby it was decided to donate $5 to this cause. Mrs. Claire Stuart moved that part of the receipts of the Garden Party be given to the Well Babies' Clinic. This was unanimously carried.

Mrs. R. E. Birdsall read the report of Mrs. Goheen of Norwood of the national chapter's annual meeting held recently in Ottawa. It proved very interesting and was much enjoyed. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Birdsall and a letter of thanks was to be sent to Mrs. Goheen expressing the appreciation of the Chapter.

A donation of $5 was made to the Upper Canada Tract Society.

The meeting closed with National Anthem and tea served by Mrs. Mann, Mrs. Wallace and Mrs. Dishart.

UNITED KINGDOM CATTLE.

OTTAWA, May 31 (C.P.).—United Kingdom cattle market was firm this week, according to cabled advice to the Department of Agriculture. No Canadian cattle was offered at Glasgow where the estimated quotation on good kinds of steers was eight cents per pound live weight. Birkenhead reported best lightweight cattle sold for 14½ cents to 15 cents per pound, dressed weight including offal; medium weights from 13 cents to 14 cents, and heavies from 12½ cents to 13 cents. Store cattle were in better demand, and it appears butcher cattle demand will be light for the next few weeks.

Mrs. R. Ralston was hostess at her home on Water Street on Wednesday afternoon and evening at a delightful trousseau tea held for Miss Mary Thomson, whose wedding to Mr. Thomas Lister takes place this week. The rooms were gay with spring flowers for the happy event. Mrs. Ralston, Mrs. Lister and Miss Thomson received the many guests who attended. The trousseau and gifts, which included many beautiful things from relatives in Scotland, were shown by the Misses Marion and Jean Ralston. The tea table was charmingly arranged with a Madeira cut-work cloth and a crystal bowl of pink tulips and smilax on a mirror reflector as a centre-piece. On the buffet and serving-table pink tapers were burning in silver holders. Mrs. A. Archibald presided at the tea-urn, with an assistant in Mrs. J. Kingsbury.

ROBERTA'S CHAT

A column conducted by a reader of The Examiner for her other reader friends. Address all mail to Roberta in care of The Examiner.

"Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, in which smiles and kindness....win the heart, and secure comfort."—Sir H. Davey.

Dear Friend:

I have in mind, the events of a day, in one of my friends' lives, and the way she met them.

She had started the laundry work, and the rain came pouring down.

She hurt her hand, there were numerous phone calls, and a friend decided to drop in on her that morning for a chat.

Peddlers kept ringing the door bell, and took up a lot of her time. The children pulled down a flower-pot, where some water had been split, making a muddy mess.

Everything was very late, and, although she had been working hard, she didn't seem to get anything done. It was just "one of those days." To crown it all, her husband brought a friend home for dinner. What did she do? She smiled!

When I spoke to her that evening she laughed and joked about it, and in doing so, she rose highly in my estimation.

She had come up against a lot of irritating things, all day long, and made the best of them.

How would it affect you?

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

Be Beautiful

BY GLADYS GLAD

As is the custom, on Sunday, Fifth avenue always is thronged with smartly garbed church goers. Women in swanky tailored suits and chic coats, and men in striped trousers and cutaways give a fashion show well worth seeing. But what intrigues me is the fact that the youngsters are just as smartly attired as their mothers and fathers. Although women do not often realize it, little girls have just as much of a yen for new bonnets as their mothers have. They like prettying up. And I've yet to see any little lass that didn't have an overwhelming desire for curls.

There are a number of beauty shops that specialize in designing hair styles for children. And according to them, most of the beauty-conscious little girls who patronize them favor the Shirley Temple hair style. This hair style can be fashioned by the operators in most of the better class beauty shops. But the doing mother who honestly believes that HER little girl is really a second Shirley Temple, can arrange it herself, if she cannot afford beauty shop prices for her offspring.

Shampoo First

Before this hair style is arranged, the hair should first be shampooed, and then the curls should be rolled into place while the hair is still moist. The hair should be about an inch below the ears in length, and while still moist should be blocked into squares, as for a permanent wave. These squares should be about an inch in length and width. Then each squared-off strand of hair should be rolled up on an aluminum curler, and when in position it should be pinned into place with bobby pins, and the curler extracted.

The entire head of hair should be blocked and curled in this fashion. In the back, however, aluminum curlers should be used and left in the hair, to give additional strength to the back curls. The curls should all be made in a vertical position throughout the entire head, pointing from the crown of the head downward. And when the hair has all been properly curled up, it should be permitted to dry naturally. When the hair is thoroughly dry, each curl should be combed out individually and brushed softly about the finger. Then a narrow ribbon should be tied about the head a la Shirley Temple. The soft ringlets then tumble in graceful curls over the entire head, and add piquancy and charm to the tiny youngster's features.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Evening Dress

Rita: No, evening dress is not essential for the parents of the bride and groom to wear at the evening wedding if the affair is informal. For the formal wedding it is.

Cosmetics

L. W. D.: I know nothing of a detrimental nature about either of the preparations you name. I think that a soft peach shade of powder soft orange rouge, and light lipstick would blend harmoniously with your coloring.

Double Chin

Mrs. R. M.: My method of eliminating a double chin, and of refining enlarged pores are too long to print here. However, they are contained in detail in my "Beauty Culture" booklet.

Too Fat

Mary: Of course you feel too heavy if you weigh 200 pounds. Send for my 'New Figure' booklet, which gives you a safe, balanced diet, and start dieting at once. Stick to it if you want to lose weight and feel better.

Powder Base

Miss M.: Cleanse your skin thoroughly with a good cleansing cream and then apply a mild astringent. This will leave your skin in an excellent condition for the application of your make-up.

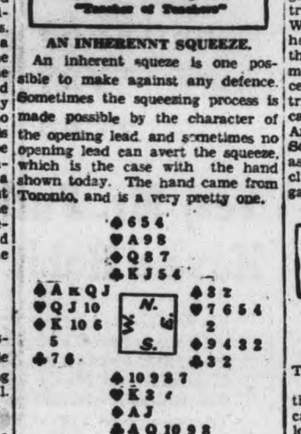
CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. V. Shepard
"Teacher of Teachers"

AN INHERENNT SQUEEZE.

An inherent squeze is one possible to make against any defence. Sometimes the squeezing process is made possible by the character of the opening lead and sometimes no opening lead can avert the squeeze, which is the case with the hand shown today. The hand came from Toronto, and is a very pretty one.



Bidding went: South, 1-club; North, 3-clubs; South, 3-No Trumps, which his partner did not disturb, fortunately, as game cannot be made at clubs.

The opening lead was a winning spade, followed by three more of that suit. It looks as if West should also be able to win either a heart or diamond trick. His fifth lead was a heart, which went to declarer's K. There were in sight of the declarer 2 heart tricks, 1 diamond trick and 5 club tricks, only a single trick short of game. West had doubled on the strength of probable ability to win the setting trick in one or the other red suit, which South knew. The declarer ran off five club tricks, discarding from dummy a diamond on the last club trick. East could not win a trick, possibly. His hand looks as if it had been picked to render him hopeless. West was in trouble on his third discard; he let go his two lowest diamonds for the first two discards, but at the fifth club trick West either had to unguard his hearts or his diamonds. In the first event dummy would be able to win two heart tricks just giving declarer game. If West bared his K of diamonds two tricks could be picked up in that suit by laying down declarer's ace. West was squeezed and the double contract was made.

It appears to a casual observer as if another opening lead than a spade might defeat the contract, but South has at his command the same strength which enabled him to go game against the spade opening. Suppose the Q of hearts is led, instead of a winning spade. Win with declarer's K. Run off five club tricks. West must let go three cards from his hand. He will give South the remaining heart tricks unless both hearts are held. West can let go two diamonds, but he will give South two tricks in that suit if he bares his K of diamonds. Discarding a good spade certainly will cost a defensive trick. An opening lead of hearts cannot defeat the game contract. An opening diamond lead will give South two tricks in that suit and assure game. An opening lead of clubs will be playing the declarer's game.

Menu Hint

Veal and Ham Pie
Green Vegetable Salad
Tomato Soupe Cake Coffee

I suppose most of you have tried the tomato soup cake recipe. In case some of you have not, or have lost it, I am printing the recipe. It sounds crazy, but as a matter of fact, it is delicious.

To-Day's Recipes.

Veal and Ham Pie—Two tablespoons bacon fat, one pound veal, one pound ham, eight green onions, eight small new potatoes. Melt fat in frying pan, add meats, cut in small cubes, and brown. Add water to almost cover. Cover the pan and cook slowly until meat is almost tender. Parboil potatoes and onions. Remove meat from pan and arrange in layers in a greased baking dish, alternating meat with potatoes and onions. Make a gravy in the pan in which the meat cooked. Season well and pour over the meat and vegetables. Put into the oven long enough to heat well. Remove and cover immediately with a rich biscuit crust, leaving space between biscuits or cutting slits in the crust to permit the escape of steam. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees Fahrenheit, about 30 minutes. It is important to have the meat and vegetables hot before the crust is added as this prevents sogginess of the crust.

Tomato Soup Cake—One can tomato soup, two cups flour, one cup sugar, one-half cup shortening, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon cloves, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one cup raisins, prunes, or nuts, chopped. Cream, butter and sugar. Sift flour, baking powder, salt, cinnamon and cloves together. Add soda to soup and stir into creamed mixture. Add sifted dry ingredients, fruit. Bake in two layers 30 to 45 minutes in moderate oven 350 degrees. Cheese Icing—One package cream cheese, two cups powdered sugar, one teaspoon vanilla. Milk enough to moisten to spreading consistency. Cream cheese and sugar, add vanilla and milk gradually to make a mixture that will spread easily.

Dairy Regulations Are Put In Effect

TORONTO, May 31 (C.P.). — Small Ontario dairies which make satisfactory arrangements for weekly payments to producers are now permitted to operate without bond, the Milk Control Board announced to-day, following ratification of the move by the Government.

Permission to operate without bond is also given where the applicant for the license is a producer as well as distributor.

The new regulations stipulate that when a bonded distributor is in arrears to the producer he shall be given a set time by the board to make payment.

BISHOP BEVERLEY TO VISIT DEANERY

Conduct Confirmation in All Saints on Sunday Night.

On Sunday the Right Reverend A. R. Beverley will commence a week's visit to the parishes and Missions in the Rural Deanery of Peterborough. He will be at Lakefield at the morning service and will go on to Warsaw for service in the afternoon and come to All Saints' Peterborough for a confirmation service in the evening. At the evening service the rector of All Saints' will present the second class from this parish in six months and this one will be of adults only and will number over thirty.

Since his election to be Suffragan Bishop last fall Bishop Beverley has been busy getting to know the general outline of his work and now is undertaking a systematic visitation of the diocese spending some time in every rural deanery in turn and as far as possible visiting and preaching in every parish. His record of splendid service as rector of Barrie and archdeacon of Simcoe was recognized when he was elected to be suffragan bishop of Toronto and his popularity has spread over the whole diocese as he has become better known.

Next week he will spend in this neighborhood visiting the clergy and parishes in the district.

CLAMP DOWN LID ON DALY INQUIRY

Dr. Alfred Hall Withdraws From the Inquiry But Must Give Evidence.

CANNOT SEE FILES.

OTTAWA, May 31.—His Honor Judge Daly clamped the lid on any effort to "let in the light" on Kingston Penitentiary affairs when he ruled yesterday that his commission restricted him to establishing the truth or falsity of the allegation that Inspector J. D. Dawson of the Penitentiary Branch of the Department of Justice told Convict 3033 that Miss Agnes Macphail, Canada's only woman member of the House of Commons, "made a —— fool of herself, and when we get through with her she will not be able to lift up her head in the House again."

Protest Voiced.

Counsel for Miss Macphail, one of Toronto's leading criminal lawyers, J. C. McRuer, K.C., protested vigorously against his Honor's militant attitude and his ruling, contending that the investigation would be trivial and a waste of the people's money if they were not to put the whole affair in its proper setting and examine what led up to the incident which occurred during a three - hour interview Inspector Dawson had with Dr. Alfred George Hall of Toronto, who was Convict 3033 in Kingston Penitentiary.

There were two other outstanding features today—one a sharp clash between R. H. Greer, K.C., of Toronto, counsel for the Commission, and Mr. McRuer, who is the Liberal's candidate for Parliament in the Toronto constituency of High Park. Mr. McRuer leaped to his feet in angry protest against Mr. Greer's reference to his political ambitions, which he claimed had nothing to do with the case.

Hall Withdraws.

The other feature was the withdrawal from the case of Dr. Hall, ex-convict 3033, when the judge refused him access to the penitentiary files at afternoon's sitting, a complete reversal of an earlier ruling that Hall might see the files. The ruling followed an interview which Mr. Greer had during the luncheon hour with W. Stuart Edwards, Deputy Minister of Justice, who took the ground that Hall, as a former convict, should not be permitted to see the files. Miss Macphail and her counsel are to have access to the files, but not Dr. Hall.

Another interesting development today was the admission of Mr. McRuer that the allegation complained of, namely, that "Aggie made a —— fool of herself," was made at a private interview at which Inspector Dawson and Dr. Hall were the only persons present. Mr. McRuer contended, therefore, that it was extremely important that all the surrounding circumstances should be looked into, instead of confining the inquiry to the one point whether Dawson made the statement Hall alleges he made.

"It seems to me it is going pretty far to call a whole lot of witnesses here who did not hear the conversation", observed his Honor.

Test of Credibility.

"I am not talking about calling witnesses at the moment," replied Mr. McRuer. "What I'm arguing is, that if I'm not going to be permitted to test the credibility of the witnesses in every way in matters even remotely connected with this inquiry, then we might as well close up our books and say it is one man's word against another's. We are of no use to the public here if we are not going to go carefully into the whole circumstances."

"My ruling," said his Honor, "is that if it is a question of the credibility of these two men (Dawson and Hall) I am not going to allow an investigation into the whole penitentiary administration."

"Even in the narrow scope we are now in I want to be able to determine, as far as I can, which side is right," said Mr. McRuer. "Mr. Guthrie say these penitentiary files are relevant, and I propose to use them. I therefore ask for an adjournment until tomorrow morning."

"I think an adjournment until tomorrow morning is not unreasonable," replied his Honor. "As to the scope of the inquiry, my whole duty, as I understand it, is to find out which of these two people is a liar."

"I would rather put it the other way—which of them is telling the truth " suggested Mr. Greer.

Counsel for the Commission then said that during the lunch hour the Deputy Minister of Justice had suggested to him that Dr. Hall, as a former convict, should not be afforded access to the penitentiary files.

"I have not seen anything on the files that the whole word should not see," observed Mr. McRuer.

"This excessive censorship of documents is impeding me in my efforts to prove the truth of the statements I have made in my affidavit," said Dr. Hall.

"The file contains Hall's record; why should he be allowed to see it?" interjected Mr. Greer.

"My ruling is that Miss Macphail and her counsel may see the file, but Dr. Hall may not," said his Honor.

"Then I ask your Honor to relieve me of the task of attempting to prove the truth of my charges," put in Dr. Hall. "I ask that I be allowed to withdraw from the inquiry."

"If you want to withdraw, that is your privilege," said the Judge; "but it is a peculiar proposition, is it not?"

"You are depriving me of access to the relevant documents," said Hall, "documents which the Government proposes to use against me in this case. It seems like another step in the combination of steps placing obstacles in my path to establishing the truth."

"I have got to follow the terms of my commission," explained Judge Daly. "If you wish to withdraw, all right."

Must Give Evidence.

"Dr. Hall is under a misapprehension," put in Mr. Greer. "There is no suggestion that he is conducting this investigation; such a suggestion is an assumption that is not borne out by the records in any way. He is withdrawing as counsel for himself, but he has got to give evidence. He has been subpoenaed to appear here."

"Keep him here and see that he is paid his conduct money; he has got to be here," ordered the Judge.

Mr. Greer then asked Mr. McRuer to destroy notes of extracts he had been taking from the files during the lunch-hour adjournment, as permitted by his Honor.

Mr. McRuer warmly objected. "That is treating me as a criminal," he exclaimed. "I have never been asked before to destroy notes made in a court. I have my reputation to sustain and shall make no improper use of the notes I have made, which are simply dates of letters on the file to which reference will have to be made in this inquiry."

PUT CUTWORMS ON POISON DIET

Paris Green Treatment for Nocturnal Garden Invaders.

ARE ACTIVE NOW

In several parts of the province cutworms are already attacking plants severely. Professor Caesar of the Department of Entomology, O.A.C. Guelph, states that the indications are that these insects will be unusually widespread and abundant during the next two or three weeks and that if growers of vegetables and other crops are not on the lookout great damage may be done beforg control measures can be applied.

At present the worms are small, one-quarter to two-thirds of an inch long. They will grow quickly and in about three weeks will be full-grown and then about one and one-half inches long.

There are several species of cutworms, but all are similar in appearance, being stout, smooth, hairless caterpillars, differing from each other very little except in color. Most species are dull brown or grayish. Some, however, may be black and others nearly white.

During the daytime all remain concealed just beneath the surface of the ground or under rubbish or other shelter. In the evening they leave their hiding places and feed during the night.

Most species cut the plants off at the ground, but it is not uncommon for them at times to climb up plants and feed upon the opening buds or leaves. In this way they sometimes injure even bush fruits and fruit trees.

The plants most commonly fed upon are tomates, tobacco, cabbage, cauliflower, corn and onions, but when there is a very severe attack many other plants such as oats, barley and clover may also be attacked.

Control

Almost all species of cutworms can be controlled readily and cheaply by the use of a poison bait. The formula for this is: bran, 25 lbs.; Paris green, 1 lb.; cheap molasses, 1 to 2 qts.; water, about 2 gals. or just sufficient to moisten the bran well without making it sticky.

For small garden use: bran, 5 lbs.; Paris green, 3 ounces; molasses, 1 small cup; water, 3 pints.

Mix the bran and Paris green in a large tub, or on a concrete floor until the green is visible everywhere in the bran. (CAUTION:—Be careful in dusting the Paris green over the bran not to inhale any of the dust.) Pour the molasses into the water, stir, then pour the liquid over the poison bran and mix until all is moistened and will fall readily through the fingers much like sawdust.

Apply late in the evening so that the bait will be fresh when the worms find it. The method of application most commonly used is to take a large pailful in one arm and scatter the material over the infested area by hand just as you would sow seed grain. The above amount will usually be sufficient for two acres. It requires only the size of a pea to kill a cutworm. One application is often sufficient but sometimes it is necessary to make two or three at intervals of two or three days.

If the worms are known as suspected to be present before the plants are set out or the seedlings have come through the ground, it is better not to wait but to scatter the bait over the ground before they can do any harm.

Other materials, such as beet pulp, may be used as substitutes for bran, but bran is satisfactory and is usually the easiest to secure. (CAUTION:—Do not allow live stock to have access to the bait and be alert to detect the presence of the cutworms before any appreciable damage can be done.)

BAILIEBORO.

The Young People's Executive of the United Church met at the home of Mrs. Norman Thompson on Monday evening, and made arrangements for their picnic which they will hold at Orono Park on June 15. The Young People also planned a Sunday service to be conducted by the Young People. Delegates were appointed to the Oak Lake Summer School.

The members present were: Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. M. B. Perrin, Misses Fern Rahmel and Frances Watt, Harland Seens, Herbert Dean and F. Barnard.

Herbert Dean closed the meeting with a brief prayer.

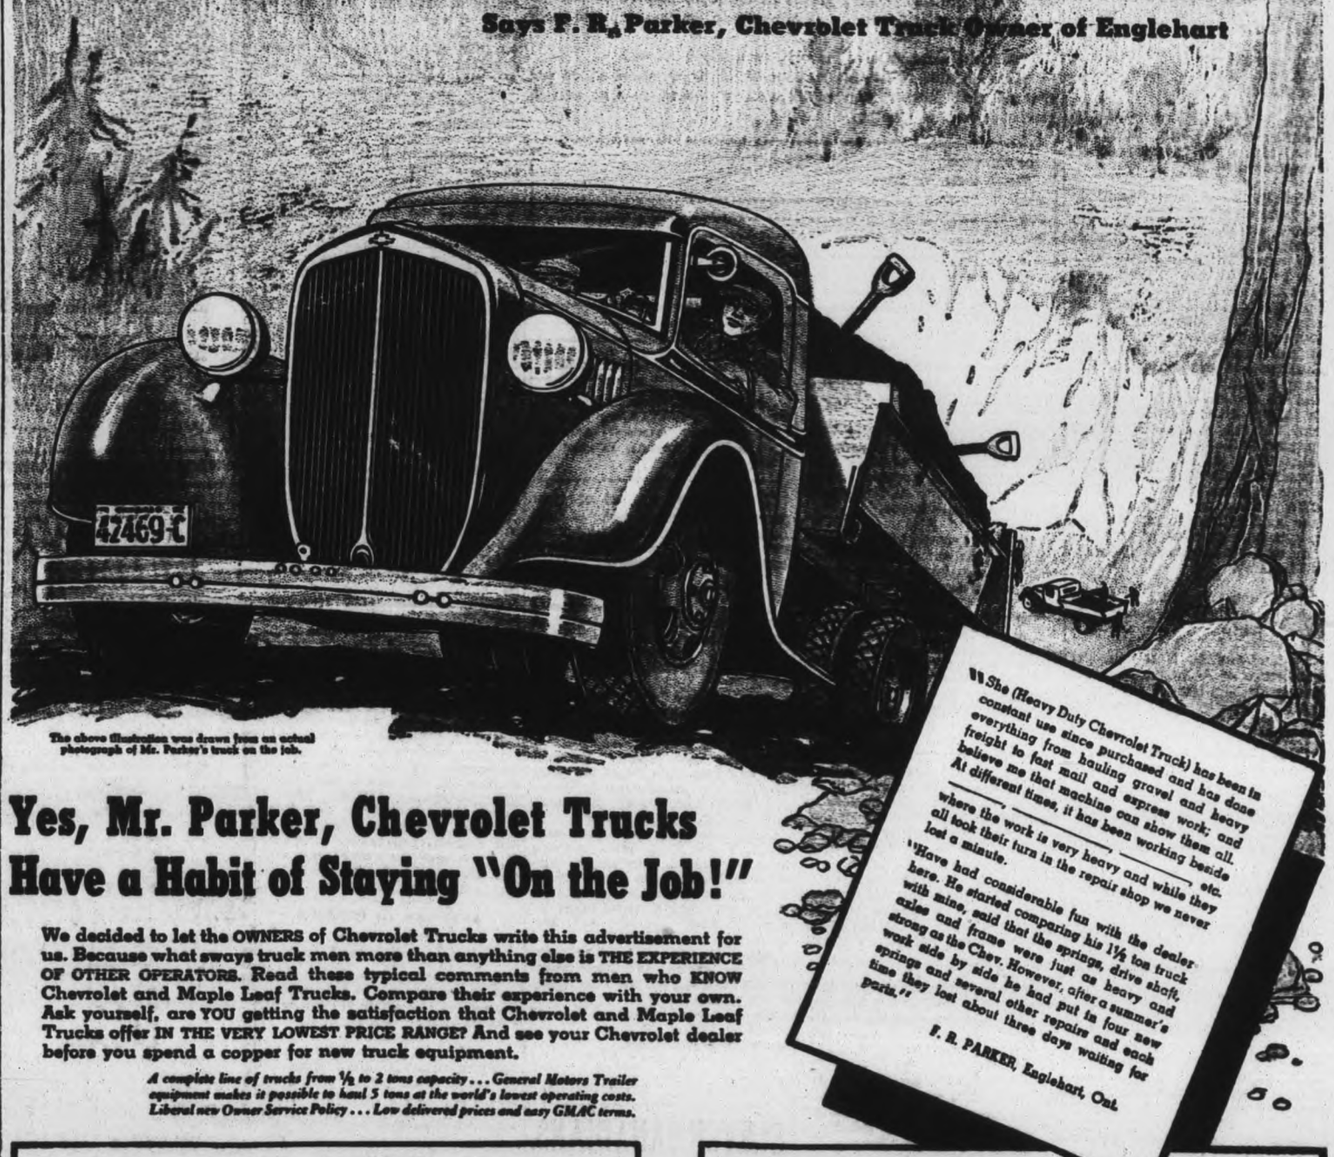
All the others took their turn in the repair shop...
BUT WE NEVER LOST A MINUTE"
Says F. R. Parker, Chevrolet Truck Owner of Englehart



The above illustration was drawn from an actual photograph of Mr. Parker's truck on the job.

"She (Heavy Duty Chevrolet Truck) has been in constant use since purchased and has done everything from hauling gravel and heavy freight to fast mail and express work; and believe me that machine can show them all. At different times, it has been working beside ——, etc., where the work is very heavy and while they all took their turn in the repair shop we never lost a minute.

"Have had considerable fun with the dealer here. He started comparing his 1½ ton truck with mine, said that the springs, drive shaft, axles and frame were just as heavy and strong as the Chev. However, after a summer's work side by side he had put in four new springs and several other repairs and each time they lost about three days waiting for parts."

F. R. PARKER, Englehart, Ont.

Yes, Mr. Parker, Chevrolet Trucks Have a Habit of Staying "On the Job!"

We decided to let the OWNERS of Chevrolet Trucks write this advertisement for us. Because what sways truck men more than anything else is THE EXPERIENCE OF OTHER OPERATORS. Read these typical comments from men who KNOW Chevrolet and Maple Leaf Trucks. Compare their experience with your own. Ask yourself, are YOU getting the satisfaction that Chevrolet and Maple Leaf Trucks offer IN THE VERY LOWEST PRICE RANGE? And see your Chevrolet dealer before you spend a copper for new truck equipment.

A complete line of trucks from ½ to 2 tons capacity... General Motors Trailer equipment makes it possible to haul 5 tons at the world's lowest operating costs. Liberal new Owner Service Policy... Low delivered prices and easy GMAC terms.

"We had a contract hauling logs about thirty feet long, a foot at the small end, taking about thirty to a load, which weighed around seven tons. Trailer, load and truck weighed about ten tons. How is that for a Chevrolet motor? Every winter I have been bucking snow, running to my camp, hauling cord wood—taking a cord and a half to a load, weighing about three tons, up one long hill in extra low about a mile, making six and eight trips a day. Different people here can't understand how this truck is standing up"...
EDWARD WILLIS, N. Sydney, C.B.

"We have been users of Chevrolet Trucks and passenger cars for about fifteen years. During that period we have never had an unsatisfactory Chevrolet. At the present time we are operating fifteen Chevrolets in our different delivery systems. Until some four or five years ago, it was necessary to gather cream in the winter months by horse conveyances, but the power and stamina of the Chevrolet Trucks made it possible to operate for twelve months each year."

SHORTAGE SEEN IN MINISTERS OF UNITED CHURCH

Semple was elected this year by a vote of the Conference without nominations, and without debate. Considerable discussion preceded the adoption of the method. Some delegates felt that the president should be elected by the straight ballot of the Conference so that he would have no doubt of the backing of the Conference. Others felt the submission by nominations from the presbyteries would be more fair. The present step was agreed upon by the Conference, on the understanding that it will not be bound definitely to accept the procedure next year.

The Conference discussed at length the Mutual Benefit Fund for the aid of the Conference ministers and the Emergency Fund for the aid of the ministers in rural charges who are underpaid. It was decided to discontinue the Mutual Benefit Fund with a view to the fact that only 45 ministers are participating in it. After a debate the delegates decided to continue the Emergency Fund, asking ministers with salaries of $1,500 or less to contribute $5.00 and those with larger salaries to contribute $10.

Three Recommended.

Three candidates for ordination were recommended to the Conference by the Committee on Colleges and Students. They were as follows:

Horatio Todd, born in Belfast, Ireland, 1903, and a graduate of Albert College and Queen's University. Recommended by Kingston presbytery.

Charles Robert Wragg, born in Clarke, Ontario, 1902, and received by Oshawa presbytery, 1928. Graduate of Queen's, 1932.

Preston Charles Brown of Millbrook, Ontario, recommended for ordination by Lindsay presbytery. A graduate of Victoria College.

"We want culture and education. That is one of the signs of our times. We want education, yet we don't want to associate our education with religions." This was a challenge of Rev. Dr. Ralph Sockman, of New York, as he addressed the Conference.

The speaker told of the changed attitude toward religion the times have brought. Modern man is living at a highly-speeded tempo. Modern man experiences more sensation in twenty-four hours than his grandfather experienced in years, yet his interests are almost entirely physical. Unless he can ruminate on physical interests, he can not take them into the soul, he declared.

"People want culture but I can't say they want religious instruction with the same avidity." He deplored the fact that certain universities in the United States have not only dropped their connections from their ecclesiastical foundations, but have also dropped their religious instruction courses.

Dr. Sockman spoke of the scene in the great rotunda of the Grand Central station as characteristic of the empty physical activity of the modern world. "It is our task to change the Grand Central stations of mere activity into cathedrals of living."

Rev. Basil Thompson of Kingston voiced an expression of appreciation in regard to Dr. Sockman's address to the conference and to those who made his visit possible.

The speaker said Dr. Sockman's sermons had convinced him that the ministers of the Dominion must act in a living brotherhood and show to the world a concerete reality of what Christianity means. "While some of us receive three times as much as some of our brothers twenty miles away, the world will not believe we are true followers of Christ."

GUELPH, Ont., May 31.—(CP).—Attacked vigorously by members opposed to the sentiments expressed, anti-war resolutions were passed by Hamilton Conference of the United Church to-day after a prolonged debate.

The resolutions urged demilitarization of the public mind and stated we can "never again bless, sanction or support any future wars."

They were presented in the report of the committee on evangelism and social service and stirred the warmest debate of the Conference to date.

"This resolution would ask Englishmen to fight for you," said Rev. Dr. Fothergill of Hamilton. "If you pass that, I say you are a coward. I wonder that anyone would bring this resolution before intelligent men."

The speaker stated pacifists caused the last war and declared Premier Ramsay MacDonald has done tremendous harm to England by reason of his pacifistic principles.

"If England is at war, we're at war," declared the speaker. "If England loses, Canada loses."

Rev. Henry Cotton of Stoney Creek, secretary of the Conference, referred to his own war record and to a medal he had won, but firmly backed the resolution and stated he was glad to obtain the experience from the war but fearful to face his God with the knowledge of what he had done in the battles.

Rev. Dr. William Lee of Wainfleet, moved the resolution be referred back to the committee for further consideration and he supported Dr. Fothergill.

Rev. E. B. Eddy seconded the motion to refer the report back to the committee, but this was defeated.

Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore of Toronto, secretary of the United Church of Canada, was in favor of the resolution and said this was the case despite the fact he had held an important position in connection with the Department of Militia in Canada during the last war and had also sent his son overseas. He could not, he said, again take part in a war nor could he bring himself to again recruit young men for war.

On the vote the resolution carried by a sweeping majority. It was moved by Rev. E. H. Ackert, of Caledonia, a member of the committee that sponsored it.

THREAT TO GET MISS MACPHAIL

of person who gave information to Miss Macphail."

Dawson, the witness continued, had also said Baynes had given out information about an inmate being killed at Stony Mountain Penitentiary while working on the scaffold. Dawson also had said information given to and used by Miss Macphail was false, Hall said.

Proceeding, witness maintained Dawson had said "Aggie made a—fool of herself in the House of Commons; when we are finished with her she won't be able to hold up her head again in the House of Commons."

His answer to Dawson, the witness said, was he held Miss Macphail in great respect. She was interested in social work and was a lady.

"So we take it you thoroughly rebuked Inspector Dawson?" questioned Mr. Greer. Hall answered in the affirmative. He had rebuked Dawson severely and loudly and had told the official if he were not a penitentiary inspector he would "smash him in the nose."

Dawson's reaction was to tell him to "keep quiet," Hall replied.

"You did not use the statement about punching Inspector Dawson in the nose in the affidavit you made," R. L. Greer, commission counsel said. "What was Inspector Dawson's reaction?"

"I think he (Dawson) told me to keep quiet," Hall replied.

"I told Inspector Dawson I would report his statements."

Warm Interchange.

Warm interchange occurred between J. C. McRuer, counsel for Miss Macphail, and commission counsel. "The severe cross-examination of Hall on behalf of Dawson is not to get facts notwithstanding all the statements made by Mr. Greer about how impartial he was going to be," Mr. McRuer declared at one stage. "Well we can go ahead and the public will know where we stand.

"Please do not make such remarks, you have not the right," Judge Daly interposed.

"I think I have a perfect right to make these remarks," Mr. McRuer replied.

"I do not think you have," Judge Daly retorted.

"My friend (Mr. McRuer) is trying to get newspaper publicity," commission counsel declared.

"I am not, but I am going to protest against any unfairness," Mr. McRuer answered.

"There has been no unfairness," Judge Daly said.

Confidence Expressed In Fernand Bouisson

PARIS.—Political circles to-day were confident Fernand Bouisson would form a new cabinet to-night. It was widely reported Joseph Caillaux had accepted the post of Finance Minister in the new cabinet and Marshall Henri Petan had agreed to become war minister.

SLEEPING CHILDREN NOT GIVEN CHANCE

Mrs. Scott was taken to a neighbor's home and given medical attention for her nervous condition.

"We were all in bed," Scott related brokenly. "I guess it was about 5.30 when my wife woke me up. The fire seemed to have started in the middle room upstairs. I don't know how. I shoved my wife out of the window on the verandah roof and took Douglas, who was sleeping with me.

"I couldn't get back in the house for the flames. I ran out without dressing. We could get only the one child. It was too hot to get in the house again. Firemen tried but couldn't do anything."

Mrs. George Loftus, a neighbor, said she was awakened by the screaming of the children and when she ran outside, flames were shooting from all windows of the Scott house.

Body Behind Piano

Firemen found the body of little Bobby behind the piano. He had been sleeping in the front room downstairs.

Mrs. Loftus said she could see the oldest girl, Vera, trying to fight her way through the flames with the baby.

Jack McFadden, one of the first to reach the fire, said he tried to enter the upstairs with a ladder but dense smoke drove him back. Later he found the body of Victor Scott, his friend.

"Flames were gushing out of every window when I arrived," said McFadden. He told of attempt to enter the building and how, after Victor's body was found, a physician attempted unsuccessfully to revive the suffocated youth.

Deputy Fire Chief Ernie Weal said five minutes after the call came in the six-room house was a mass of flames and firemen could not enter. It took three firemen, he said, to hold back the father.

Overcome by Smoke

Chief John O'Connor and Fireman Bill Weal were overcome by smoke and given First Aid.

"You couldn't get within 15 feet of the place," said the deputy chief. "We tried once to get in the building but the door was just a wall of flames. At seven o'clock just a shell of the house was standing. We played two full streams on the building for an hour and a half before it could be entered with any safety."

Harry Scott is a trustee of the Alderwood Fire Brigade that answered the alarm. The bodies of his children were taken to an undertaking parlor.

A second outbreak of the fire at 9.30 was quickly extinguished.

Inquest Is Held Into White's Death

WINDSOR, Ont., May 31 (CP)—Partial responsibility for the death of Frank White, 20-year-old motorcyclist, was laid upon Burt L. Elmes by a coroner's jury. Elmes was driver of the auto which collided with White's motorcycle at an intersection May 17, and caused injuries which indrectly led to the latter's death from pneumonia a week later. He is at present waiting trial on a charge of manslaughter.

Piles Go Quick

Under Dr. Leonhardt's Internal Method.

Large numbers of sufferers from itching, bleeding or protruding piles have learned that quick and lasting relief can be accomplished with an internal medicine, when salves do not help and wish is to escape operation.

Bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel causes piles. The veins are flabby, the bowel walls weak—the parts lifeless. To end Piles an internal medicine should be used to stimulate the circulation and help to heal the affected parts.

Dr. Leonhardt was one of the first to discover a real internal Pile remedy. He called his prescription HEM-ROID, and prescribed it for large numbers of patients with a fine record of success and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEM-ROID tablets from their own druggist, with money-back if not joyfully satisfied with the help one bottle gives.

So isn't it wise when other ways fail to go to McDermid & Jury and Bond's Drug Store, who says, "No matter what kind of Piles you have, one bottle of HEM-ROID tablets must show you the safe, clean way to get rid of your Pile misery or money-back."

Star Rider With Seagram Stable Booting 'Em Home on Canadian Tracks.

STRIKE 'WASHED UP."

JOCKEY LINDBERG is still the riding sensation of our tracks. Despite a bad fall on Tuesday last while aboard Eddie Seagram's Biography, he came back on Wednesday and rode three winners. This shows he has nerves of steel as most jockeys require a week or more of rest to get their nerve back . . . Thorncliffe is keeping up its reputation as a self-advister with daily double of over $1200 on Tuesday, one of $1400 on Thursday and oneto winner on Wednesday of over thirteen hundred for a two dollar ducat. Nothing will draw fans to a race track in larger numbers than a couple of winners like that.

As we predicted earlier in the week the strike among the horsemen is petering out and every race is filling in good shape . . . This horse Union is coming along in nice style. He is always a slow starter in the spring but this year seems to be regaining his best form earlier than usual. Flying Heels find is another that we figure will win a race before many moons. He is in rare fettle and also is in smart hands.

HARRY GIDDINGS has shipped Horometer back to the McLaughlin farm near Oshawa and it looks like the finish of what was thought would be one of best Canadian bred horses that ever ran over our tracks . . . . Racing across the border is enjoying a big revival of interest this year. Rockingham and Washington Park at Chicago especially are catering to wonderful crowds. Detroit is also doing a good business.

The new track at London, Ont., which Abe Orpen is opening in the near future is said to be a dandy. It is just a half-mile oval but he has put in every convenience for his patrons and it will probably be called Little Belmont. With so many cities and towns so close to London it should draw patrons from all over Western Ontario. Billy Devonshire overhauling the Devonshire plant at Windsor after its year of inactivity in 1934. This track should also have a good season as all the horses now racing at Detroit will be available.

OLD GRANITE Rock who was second in his last start will probably do the needful on his next trip postward. This old rogue with the bobbed tail has a lot of racing left in him yet. Top Hattie is just waiting around for a sloppy track which is his long suit now that Lloyd Gentry has been given a trainer's license. Harry Hatch has two of the best trainers in America. Silent Billy Pringle is the other one. The stable will likely be split in two divisions with one trainer in charge of each.

Petes Drop Close Decision to Cobourg

BISONS OVERTAKE TORONTO CLUB BY COPPING DOUBLE DECISIONS IN DECORATION DAY PROGRAMME

Ollie Carnegie Teams With Pitchers Carroll and Jacobs Dominate Double Bill.

BEARS BREAK EVEN.

Rochester Redwings Get 12-8 Win But Lose Second Game to Royals 5-0.

(By Associated Press.)

The first five clubs in the International League pennant race still are only two games apart, but the Buffalo Bisons and not Toronto Maple Leafs occupy the top rung to-day.

The Bisons vaulted into the lead yesterday when they turned back the Leafs in both ends of the holiday double-header, winning the opening contest 8-2 and the nightcap 7-5. The defeat dropped the Canucks to third place, one game back of Buffalo and three percentage points to the rear of Newark Bears.

Ollie Carnegie teamed with Pitchers Owen Caroll and Jacobs to dominate the double bill. The veteran outfielder drove out two home runs, one in each game, to run his total for the season to 13. He sent three runs across the plate in the opener while Carroll was holding the Leafs to six hits, and drove in two in the second as Jacobs kept Toronto's seven hits well scattered. Marvin Ilson also hit a homer in the night cap and Wes Schulmerich accounted for three of the Leafs' runs in the same game with a circuit swat.

Bears Split Bill.

After dropping the first game, 4-2, the Bears came back to whip Baltimore Orioles 2-0 and get an even break in their bargain bill. The Orioles tied the score at three-all in the first encounter and finally won out in the ninth when Eddie Mayo found Kemp Wicker, third Newark hurler, for a single. The second game was a pitching duel between George Darrow and Ted Kleinhans, with the former granting four hits and the latter five. One of the blows off Darrow, however, was a fifth inning single, which drove in both of the Bears' runs.

George Puccinelli, Baltimore outfielder, walloped his 20th home run of the year in the first game, and in addition cracked out three singles, a double, and a triple in the two contests.

Get 12-8 Victory.

Rochester Redwings battered the Montreal Royals to a 12-8 decision in the first game, but Pete Appleton hurled one-hit ball in the second to give the Canadians the nightcap 5-0. The Wings blasted 15 hits off Ray Fritz for a big lead in the first, but the Royals came back strong and drove Tony Kaufman from the mound in the eighth when King, Bissonette and Seeds hit home runs. Jimmy Brown got the only hit, a single, off Appleton.

Syracuse was the only other team able to win both games, defeating Albany Senators 5-2 and 10-3. The Chiefs drove out five home runs in the two encounters, Hamel hitting one in the first and Moore, Savino Niemiec, and Dallesandro one each in the second. Hayes also connected with a homer for Albany in the nightcap.

Marvel Returns

THE MASKED MARVEL

The 220-pound mat mystery who meets Bull Findlay of Detroit in the main match of the three-bout pro grappling card in the Armouries next Tuesday night. Their bout is two out of three falls with a time limit of one hour.

Petes Seek Revenge For Kingston Defeat

Smarting under two straight defeats to Oshawa and Kingston within the past week, the Petes will step out on the diamond here Saturday against Kingston full of fight and determined to get back their winning stride. Knotty Lee and his charges are plenty peeved and will stir up the hard feeling always existing between these rivals at three o'clock Saturday afternoon in Riverside Park. Another huge crowd is expected on hand to see the 1935 edition of the scrappy Kingston Ponies, with Compeau and McQuaide back in the lineup.

Yammy Jamieson and Lefty Lepper will do the hurling and it shapes up as a pitchers' battle, provided Lepper's control is right. He should handcuff the lefthand Pony hitters with his fast-breaking southpaw slants, while Jamieson has started off as if in for a big season. Whatley will likely be catching again, with Ash, Hollingsworth, Murphy and Calladine in the infield. Outfield will no doubt remain unchanged. The locals are due to break out in a rash of hits behind good heaving and they are predicting a victory by a clear margin. The Ponies are just as confident.

Indian River Cops Verdict Over Warsaw

The postponed game of Tuesday evening was staged Wednesday with Indian River taking a 15-12 verdict over Warsaw. Jack Walsh hurled for the winners and had Warsaw at his mercy most of the way. Indian River was in front 10-3 at the end of the third but Warsaw went to work with the bat and climbed right up on their rivals' heels before the end. The teams:

MASTERSON HURLS SUPERB BALL IN HOLDING PONIES TO ONE HIT BUT VISITORS GAIN 1–0 VICTORY

Elliott Scores Game's Single Run on Hit By Goody in Second.

PERFECT BASEBALL.

Casey Strikes Out Five While Lefty Campbell Goes Great Guns on Cobourg Mound.

Despite Casey Mastersons' one-hit hurling effort, Cobourg Ponies outlucked the intermediate Petes in the Exhibition Grounds last night to squeeze out a 1-0 victory in the first Lakeshore Baseball League game of the season here. A small crowd was treated to a pitchers duel and a great ball game which was terminated at the end of seven innings because of a league ruling to this effect for twilight contests.

Masterson twirled superb ball, allowing one single in the second frame—hit by Goody to score Elliot, who had walked and stolen second. Casey struck out five and issued but one free base, his fast ball and sharp hook holding the Ponies in subjection in all but that one frame. Archy (Lefty) Campbell also pitched a good game, allowing five hits while fanning four but giving three walks. His support was perfect while the Petes had just one error which did not figure in the score.

The local infield and outfield looked snappy, grabbing off everything that came their way to give Casey fine backing. Dallin roped in three neat catches in centre while Bailey and Corbett had feature fielding plays, the former on a hard running catch in left and the latter with a one-hand stab of a sizzling liner. Without a regular catcher on hand, Doug. Moore's squad filled in satisfactorily with McGillen as a receiver. Cobourg had two nice double-plays with Rollings and McMadden going all evening. Cobourg led the hitters with two for three.

Both sides went out in order in the first stanza. With two out for Cobourg in the second, Elliott drew a walk and pilfered second. Goody's single over short scored him but Brooks struck out. With one away in the homesters' half, Corbett singled and Dallin walked, but the next two rolled out. The Ponies were turned back one-two-three the next four frames. In the Petes' third Masterson singled. He moved up on Padgett's hit. Next batter popped out but Hillier scratched a hit to load the sacks. But Len Hollingsworth hit into a double-play. They went out in order next three innings, a double-play helping in the fifth.

Mitchell was safe on an error in the seventh for the visitors and got to third on two wild pitches but died there. In the local's final, Corbett's hit, a wild pitch and a walk failed to produce a marker.

GIANTS TAKE DOUBLE BILL

Casey Stengel's Brooklyn Dodgers Come to Grief at Polo Grounds.

ATTENDANCE RECORDS.

By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

The first holiday program of the baseball season, bringing doubleheaders all around and an outpouring of fans that shattered all of this year's attendance records and a good many of those set in previous seasons, has gone a long way toward backing up Mickey Cochrane's recent statement that the best doubleheader clubs will find success in the 1935 pennant campaign.

Four clubs in the two major leagues won both games of yesterday's bargain program and this is how they fared:

Increase Lead.

New York Giants, trimming Brooklyn 8-3 and 6-0, increased their National League lead to 4½ games and incidentally shoved the Dodgers down to fifth place. St. Louis Cardinals, who bowled over Cincinnati 12-6 and 4-2, hopped from a third place tie with Brooklyn to second in the senior circuit standing. New York Yankees, trouncing Washington 4-0 and 9-3, captured the American League lead from Chicago, which split with Cleveland. The Phillies, slamming out 11-6 and 9-3 triumphs over the Braves, pulled 2½ games ahead on the cellar struggle with Boston.

The Giants had an exceptionally profitable day. In addition to the two triumphs they reaped the benefit of the largest crowd in National League history, 63,943 paid admissions. Several thousand more fans were turned away. They teed off against Van Mungo for six runs in the first inning of the opener and finished with a two-hit hurling feat by fat Freddie Fitzsimmons.

The Cardinals were less spectacular, hitting steadily to collect 16 blows in the first game and rallying in the eighth to win for Dizzy Dean, who contributed nine strikeouts. The Phillies scored seven times in the eighth for their first victory and kept on slugging to pile up an overwhelming lead in the second clash.

BASEBALL GATE RECORD

NEW YORK, May 30.—(AP)—All baseball attendance records for the Polo Grounds were shattered today when 64,000 fans turned out for the double-header between New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers. The crowd not only set a new high for the Polo Grounds but likewise represented the biggest baseball gathering of the major league season.

Yesterday's Stars

(By Associated Press.)

Joe Medwick, Cardinals — Hit five doubles, triple and single, driving in six runs, in double victory over Reds.

John Whitehead, White Sox, and Willis Hudlin, Indians — Whitehead won eighth straight mound victory in first game, Hudlin blanked White Sox with two hits in second.

Dolph Camilli, Phillies—Made five hits, including seventh homer, scored six times against Braves.

Ben Chapman, Yankees — Cracked out five hits, knocking in four runs in twin triumph over Senators.

Roy Henshaw, Cubs, and Red Lucas, Pirates — Pitched brilliantly as teams split doubleheader.

Rollie Hemsley, Browns, and Tommy Bridges Tigers— Hemsley made four hits in opener, Bridges pitched three-hit shutout.

CARD LINED UP FOR GRAPPLE SHOW

Matchmaker Ivan Michailoff Has Several Headliners on Bill.

Professional wrestling returns to Peterborough Tuesday night, June 4th, for one appearance after an absence of two years. An all-heavyweight card of three bouts, starting at 8.30 o'clock, marks the pro grapplers' return. Matchmaker Ivan Michailoff has lined up several well-known headliners for this show in order to make local mat fans wrestling-conscious once more. The colorful Jack Forbes will referee, and the Rangers' Band will be in attendance at the Armouries were the bouts are staged. Seating accomodations for nearly a thousand people are planned.

Headlining this Cadillac A.C. card here is the Masked Marvel, weighing 220, against Bull Findlay of Detroit, scaling 218. They wrestle two out of three falls with a time limit of one hour. In the semi-final, Don Petroff, rough Russian 211-pounder, tackles Walter Parnall, 228-pound St. Catharines mastodon. They have a 45-minute one-fall bout. The preliminary scrap sees Johnny Gyroffy, 205-pound Hungarian, meeting Jack Pearl of Toronto, tipping the beam at 200 even. Followers of wrestling will recognize these matmen as being outstanding performers who are sure to put up a great show here. Admission is 35 cents general and 75 cents ringside, tax included.

Birthday Greetings

KEENE HURLER FANS SIXTEEN

Westclox and Keene Girls Play to a Tie in Pitchers' Duel.

KEENE TOOK EARLY LEAD.

Keene fans thrilled to a spirited pitching duel last night when Westclox and the village team hooked up in a Ladies' Softball League battle that wound up a 10-all tie. Marilyn McCarthy, first string hurler for the homesters, pitched beautiful ball, fanning sixteen batters. Margaret Snowden opposed her and also turned in a good performance, striking out four.

Keen took an early lead stretching four hits in the first two frames into as many runs. After that the visitors straightened away and only allowed Keene two runs until the sixth, and at the same time they stepped into the offerings of McCarthy for ten hits in four innings, counting ten runs. Five of these came in the fifth when the first two batters walked, three singles and two costly errors in the outfield ran up the total before the innings ended. The Westclox were held scoreless for the last four frames, but the Keenesters kept plugging away. They added one in the seventh, two in the eighth, and pushed the tying run over in the ninth. The game was called at the end of the regulation time due to darkness.

McCarthy fanned the first three Westclox batters to face her and retired the side on strike-outs in the second also, although the opposition scored once in this frame on two errors and a single. She made at least one player fan the air in every frame. Her team-mates wobbled in the fourth and fifth, kicking in with four expensive miscues, when the Westclox bunched their hits making a real bid for victory. She walked four. Snowden showed good control, with four strike-outs and three walks. The infield showed a few bursts of wildness, bnt snapped out of it usually to nip the runner before a run was tallied. The errors were scattered and far from being as costly as the Keene miscues. Mortimer and Sturgeon led the Westclox hitters with three singles apiece, while Genevieve Mann at second turned in a brilliant fielding effort. Helen Nelson, Grace McCarthy, and Irene Short were the mightiest clouters for Keene. The teams:

Westclox — Mortimer 1b, Ferguson ss, Sturgeon 3b, H. Mann lf, Snowden p, Crary cf, G. Mann 2b, Tucker c, Harris rf.

Keene — Nelson 2b, Manley ss, McCarthy p, Irene Short 1b, Isobel Short, G. McCarthy cf, Gall 3b, Michardson lf, Gainor rf, J. Nelson 3b, E. Nelson lf.

Score by innings:
Westclox ..... 011 350 000—10 10 10
Keene ..... 31$ 101 121—10 11 7
Umpires—Frick at the plate, Galbraith on the bases.

Mel Ott and Fred Fitzsimmons — Ott made four hits, including ninth homer; Fitzsimmons blanked Dodgers with two hits.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

DAY BY DAY

(By C. J. P.)

Tomorrow being Saturday, we will meander over to Riverside Park to welcome the Ponies of Kingston to our fair town after an absence of practically a year. We will put out the welcome mat for them—but we will line it with banana skins! And when the Kingstons step on it, and nature takes its course, we will cheer them up with the Bronx cheer in B flat. But this wont bother ye Ponies a whit. They will be busy razzing the Petes, stepping on their toes on the bases, bumping them on the paths and, in general, injecting as much personal feeling and feudism into the game as possible. They're like that—scrappy and looking for trouble. And they don't like the Petes. Haven't for years, in fact.

• • • • • • •

Consequently, there was much gloating in the Limestone town Wednesday when the Petes took a 9-4 walloping. But we expect the tables will be turned here tomorrow. For one thing, Lepper will pitch and he is a speedball southpaw with a fast-breaking curve. As Kingston's main hitters are lefthanded, it stands to reason that Lepper should worry them plenty. Another thing, the Lee crew is due to snap out of their losing ways and get some hits and do some smart fielding. Yeah, they look like tomorrow's winners to us.

• • • • • • •

What a sweet struggle that opening game here of the Lakeshore Ball Loop was last eve! Cobourg took a 1-0 nod over the intermediate Petes at the Exhibition Grounds but they were knee-deep in horse shoes and four-leaf clover. Casey Masterson—always some shucks of a twirler—started the year off by flinging one-hit ball while fanning five. The Petes collected five hits off Lefty Campbell, yet the visitors got the lone run. A walk, a steal and that lone single gave Cobourg the money marker. It was rotten luck for Casey and his gallant teammates, who put up a swell scrap. They didn't have a regular catcher or first-sacker, though the substitutes did okay. The team will be plenty strong when at full strength.

• • • • • • •

Cobourg, with four or five ex-seniors aboard, look on paper like the toughest team in the Lakeshore League. Campbell pitched good ball, too. But the Petes last night were better but simply had no luck. They had seven men stranded, to two for the visitors, and twice they hit into double-plays, once with but one out and the bases full. Cobourg's only hit produced the only run of the game. Bailey ducked a bad throw in the seventh with a man on second and the doggone ball ticked his bat and popped up for a soft fly for the receiver. Things like that all through showed where old man Jinx was laying his dough. But there'll come a day, boys, there'll come a day! Next game is in Cobourg June 8th.

• • • • • • •

The game only went seven innings—although we're still not sure if that's what the loop rules call for—and the advertised draw for cleaning and pressing of a lady's dress and a gent's suit by the Burial Cleaners was not announced. Lady's lucky ticket number was 010031 and the guy's ticket was 27037. Holders may collect any time. The Petes will practice at the Exhibition Grounds at six tonight. Incidentally, Bill Prindible tells us that he is not calling another E.P.L. meeting as both Raybestos and C.G.E. are entering the Trent Valley League. We might point out that players who have signed with the intermediate Petes in the Lakeshore League cannot play for any other team without a release.

• • • • • • •

Bill Murphy, with the assistance of Moon Ridley and Pat Todd, went to work the other day and fixed up a good ball diamond at the west end of the Exhibition Grounds for City League use. They had permission to do so, but showed lots of ambition and elbow grease. Bill manages the Maple Leaf juveniles and is lining up a strong squad. They play Naborhood Colts a tilt ala exhibish down there tonight at six. They're looking for someone now to donate a screen backstop. Won't be long till the juvenile and bantam schedules are drawn up and the kids are hard at it again. There will be four bantam outfits and three juveniles. A junior team is entered in the Lakeshore Circuit.

• • • • • • •

Westclox gals journeyed to Keene yester gloaming and battled it out to a 10-all draw. With Marilyn McCarthy doing some swelegant gunning on the Keene hilltop to fan 16 batters, the Alarm Maidens were lucky getting a tie. They bunched hits better and their errors weren't so costly. The village flinger struck out the first three to face her, and in two innings fanned seven—the catcher missing the third strike once to let the batter reach first. That's lovely twirling. Tonight in the Bowl, Bailieboro makes its debut against C.G.E. at six, while tomorrow at 5.30 in the Bowl Westclox and C.G.E. tangle in a replay of their postponed opening fixture.

• • • • • • •

Lillico Motors got their first men's softball win at Central last p.m. with a 12-8 verdict over Fashion-Crafts, it being the latter's second setback. The Dormer crew rated plenty high from the start, and still do, but the Payne gang will give 'em lots of trouble—not to mention the Hood and Cummings' team and Omemee. Lillico's earned last night's game with their hitting and fielding while Elliott went fair in the box. Chuck Butcher was no mystery on the other side and Collison relieved him finally. Fashion-Crafts go to Omemee tonight while Monday sees Hood and Cummings tangle with Lillico's in Central.

Plate o' hash: Don't forget the Norwood-Auburns lacrosse game tonight at 6.30 in the Auburn Field . . . . Oshawa scribe, who is still talking hockey, has suddenly heard Covert and Geddes moved here some time ago, and cracks wise at the O.H.A.'s expense . . . . For his info, we might say that there is now an O.H.A. ruling which permits the importing of two intermediate players a year; you're welcome, dope! . . . . Belleville and Kingston writers sympathize with the Petes 'cause Konopka was refused a transfer . . . . Yet we know three clubs in the loop who were ready to protest as soon as Sig was used . . . . Church Softball League games tonight: St. Luke's vs. St. Paul's Juveniles at Queen Mary, umps from Mark St. and Murray St.; George St. Bantams vs. St. John's at Queen Mary; and Knox Bantams vs. Park St. at King Edward . . . . In Lindsay last night, Rama Indians lost to the Petes' lacrossers, 14-3 . . . . Dinty's Inn go to Millbrook tonight, while on Monday, Dinty's Inn and Port Hope play in Millbrook with Auburns in Lindsay.

Last Inning Count Wins For George St.

Weir's hit in the last inning drove in the winning run to give George Street a 15-16 nod over Mark Street in a classy senior Church Softball League game last night. Mark scored 10 runs the first two frames, but a change of George Street hurlers held them after that while the other side made its hits count with runners on to put up and ahead. Weir led the George Street stickers with Parsons best for East City. The win puts George Street in second place ahead of Mark Street. The teams:

Mark Street — Ferguson, c; Parsons, ss; Brady, 1b; M. Hunter, p; Darwin, lf; G. Hunter cf; Sager, 2b; Townsend, 3b; R. Hunter, rf.

George Street — Kingdon, ss; Barnard, c; Ketheeson lf; Weir, rf; Burnham, 2b; Wells, 3b; Gunsolus, cf, p; McKee, p, cf; McClellan, 1b.

Mark Street	460 020 2—14
George Street	133 60! 1—15

FASHION CRAFT HURLERS HIT HARD IN MOTORS' 12-8 WIN

Winners Give Neat Fielding Display, Run Off Two Fast Double Plays.

32 HITS IN ALL.

Lillico Motors won their first game of the season last night at Central when they handed the Fashion-Craft outfit their second defeat of the season, 12-8, in a free-scoring affair. The winners had an edge in the play at all times having two big innings, the third and fourth, in which they batted around each time, scoring first three and then, four runs. They continued their assault in the seventh, bagging two more and winding it up in the ninth with three to win handily.

The pitching for the Motormen was well taken care of by Elliott, who, although hit rather hard, came through in the pinches forcing his opponents to pop up easy flies with men in scoring positions. Butcher, for the opposition, went swell for two innings, wobbled in the third and blew up completely in the fourth, his exit being caused by a triple from the bat of Ellis with the bases crowded and an overthrow to account for four tallies. Collison, his successor, was likewise pounded hard, but managed to stagger through the remaining frames.

The batting punch for Payne's boys was supplied by Weir, Starr and P. Calladine with three bingles apiece while Gardner and Ellis garnered two safeties, all of which helped to make Butcher's and Collison's evening rather large. Playford again shone at the bat for the losers bagging a total of four out of five to account for one quarter of his team's total hits. Bill Calladine, making his first appearance of the season in a Fashion-Craft uniform, socked a nifty triple in the final frame and later on brought in one of the two runs scored in that stanza.

The fielding by the winners, was a treat to watch, being errorless through and running off two fast double plays, the first coming in the fifth going from Starr-to-Wilshaw-to-Ellis with the next in the ninth going the same way to stop a Fashion rally and end the fun for the night.

The teams:

Lillico Motors: Wilshaw, 2b; Weir, lf; Starr, ss; Calladine, c; Ellis, 1b; Newson, 3b; Gardner, cf; Elliott, p; Price, rf.

Fashion-Craft: Smith, 1b; Abbott, ss; W. Calladine, ss; Playford, cf; Montgomery, lf; Currie, rf; Butcher, p; Collison, p; Gainey, c; Stanger, 2b; G. Dormer, 3b.

Score by innings:

Lillico Motors .	003400203—12 16 0
Fashion-Craft .	000000122— 8 16 4

Umpires—Weir at the plate, Weese on bases.

Freddy Earle who played at inside right for the Canadian General will be back in his position in the team in the near future. He was unfit but now reports that he is fit to take his place as usual.

There were about fifty players down at the practice game on Wednesday evening on King Edward Park, while over at the Brinton ground the usual number made their presence known.

The referee has full power in any game scheduled and when a player is injured there is nothing in the rules which states that he must stop the game. A player or players must be removed outside at once, to the nearest goal or touch-line. Referee Downer was justified in his action when George Blowers was hit with the ball.

No game is scheduled for Saturday, June 8th, when the touring Scots play a selected team in Toronto. Many fans are going to witness the internationalists.

Saturday's soccer bill is the semi-final of the White Challenge Cup between Canada Packers and the C.C.F. on King Edward Park. Referee, A. Frick; linesmen, Wilfred Jones and Ben McMaster; kick-off at three o'clock prompt. On Tuesday night, C.G.E. play Brinton on Brinton grounds at 5.30 in a White Challenge Cup game.

Arrangements have been made that, in future, all referees must be attired in white sweater, black pants, so that his garb will show a distinctive color from the participants.

Canada Packers expect to trot out Jimmie Buchanan and Willie McCracken in their line-up for the cup tie to-morrow. Dave Leether, junior, who played in goal and at inside left for Lindsay last season, is still unsigned.

SIGNS WITH LEAFS.

HAMILTON, May 31 (C.P.). — Norval Fitzgerald speedy right winger of Hamilton Tigers, and member of two championship teams during his three-year stay here, has signed a two-year professional contract with Conny Smythe's Toronto Maple Leafs.

THE
GAME

Although the Schedule has been running for two nights, still we notice that a lot of our regular boys are absent. We know that these boys intend to bowl but we want to see them out on the greens. Maybe a little 'phone call by the skips would help. Maybe some have not got warmed up to the idea that the bowling season has commenced. However, we would like to see a full quota out on Monday night.

We Suggest to the Skips and Vices that they read the last paragraph on page 7 of the schedule book. You will just be surprised how much good can be done by a 'phone call or a friendly talk. We are going to put the skips on the spot and see the results on Monday night.

Now, Don't Forget the Friday night jitney tonight. Let everybody start these weekly affairs off right by being on time. Telephone your name in early and then start for the clubhouse. Give the boys who make the draw a break and you will find out how smoothly things will work. And the time is 7.30 p.m., and the fee is 25c to members.

CHISOX'S SENSATIONAL ROOK TAKES EIGHTH STRAIGHT WIN

Homers Aid "Silent" John Whitehead Register Victory on Indians.

YANKEES ON TOP.

Vito Tamulis, young Yankee southpaw, rang up his second straight shutout, holding the Senators to six hits in their first clash. The Yanks produced 18 blows to back up Johnny Broaca in the afterpiece.

Chicago's White Sox, with 42,000 fans looking on, slammed out enough home runs to beat Cleveland 8-4 for 'Silent' John Whitehead and give the rookie his eighth consecutive mound victory. Jimmy Dykes, Zeke Bonura and Rip Radcliff all hit for the circuit in the opener but they couldn't touch Willis Hudlin's two-hit hurling as the Indians took the second game 4-0.

Two more attendance marks went tumbling at 40,430 fans turned out at Pittsburgh to see the Pirates move into fourth place by getting an even break with Chicago and 30,000 overflowed the Detroit Park when the Tigers and St. Louis Browns split. Detroit never had a bigger crowd and Pittsburgh only at world series games.

Pittsburgh's rookie mound ace, Oy Blanton, was knocked from the hill for the first time as the Cubs smashed out a 6-4 victory but Red Lucas evened it by pitching six-hit ball to win 4-1.

The Browns belted out 16 hits and took one game from Detroit 10-7 then were limited to three blows by Tommy Bridges as the Tigers won 2-0.

Wes Ferrell was both winner and loser on the mound in the even break between the Red Sox and Athletics. He pitched the full first game, winning 7-4 then came in as a relief hurler to run into the A's five-run burst in the 11th and went down 13-8.

CRICKET NOTES.

As neither the Peterborough C.C. nor Whittaker's C.C. have a match arranged for to-morrow, the clubs will combine to play "Married vs. Single" at the Oval at 2 o'clock sharp. All members of both clubs are requested to be on hand—teams to be chosen on the ground.

GYPSY GIRL

THE STORY OF AN IMPASSIONED ROMANCE

By DONALD FLADER

CHAPTER 39

Indeed, it seemed that Consuelo might have drunk from a fountain, for when she returned to the dressing room from the finale, the heavy mood had left her and she was buoyant. She danced into the room and whirled on her dainty toes and threw him a saucy kiss from the tips of her fingers.

"Ah, how loud was their clapping! It is better than the wine New York serves." She tore the scarf from her hair and stripped her wrist of the bracelets. "I must hurry. What dress shall I wear, I wonder?"

"I like you in white best," Stewart volunteered.

She glanced at him and looked away quickly.

"I've reserved a table for us at the night club you like the best, the one with the fathead waiter who pays so much attention to you and makes you laugh."

She was cold creaming her face now, hair pinned back.

"Now, that is too bad, but I am going out with Mr. Dave Davis, who owns half a dozen boats and has promised me a sail. I have never sailed in a boat, nor have I been on the water, but he has named the boat the Gypsy Girl, and surely it would be a friendly craft to me with a name like that. He has told me the Gypsy Girl should belong to the gypsy girl, but I have not been quite sure about that. Now, whatever would I do with a boat?" she inquired.

"Don't you care a thing about the fact that I have reserved a table for us?"

She shrugged her shoulders.

"You did not ask me."

"I would like to think that you cared enough for me after all I've done for you to break another date."

She wiped the cold cream from her face and lightly ran a powder puff over it. Then she unpinned her long hair and began to brush it.

"You have told me that one must not break engagements — that only gypsies do that. And besides, my friend, you have cared nothing at all about me. You have not seen me for a week. When I came to New York I was not even good enough for you. I was just a dirty gypsy —"

"That is not true. I was busy."

She laughed.

"Busy with the lovely blonde woman, who is less than a dog! Ah, now you have lied to me long enough." She faced him. "When you go out with me again, white man, you will not return to her!"

"So that is your price, is it?"

"No! Only half my price! When you go out with me again I will be star of Goldberg's Follies! Now is my price high enough to suit you? Now am I a cheap gypsy? You have taught me this, white man, that for value received there must be value in return —"

"This Davis and his yacht, is that his price or your price?"

"You are a liar! You are the only man in New York that I have loved. What have you done for me? Nothing! If you love me you would make me star of the Follies. But no, you don't do that. You do nothing and expect everything. You do not see me for days and then you come and say 'we are going out tonight' — like that! You think I should break a date to go out with you? Why? Why? You are a conceited fool! For one kiss, Marcu the gypsy would have given me anything I asked. He was a man, but you are only half a man, your money is the other half. You think that when you speak everyone will obey your word, eh? No, they are obeying your money. Money! Bah! You rest behind it as a turtle hides nder his shell. I spit on your money! When first I met you I loved you for yourself, but you have made me hate you! You said that I was too free with myself, so now, white man, I have set my price and you may take it or leave it and I shall not care!" The flaming anger went out of her. She put her hands on his shoulders. "Why have you made me hate you like this? Why do you treat me like a dog, my dear one? I have missed your arms about me. I have missed your lips kissing mine. I have been lonesome for you." She buried her face against his coat. "I have been lying to you," she murmured, so low he could scarcely hear. "Those words I spoke in anger and they were not true. Kiss me, Stewart, and forgive me."

"You're a charming little devil, gypsy girl," he said, after a moment. "No one else has ever had the courage to say the things you have said to me." He kissed her lips lightly. "So you think I'm an old turtle hiding under a shell of gold — ' He kissed her lips again, not so lightly. "You twist me around your little finger and I like you for it." He kissed her lips again — and again, passionately. "I will not see Louise any more," he muttered.

She returned the kisses with equal passion.

"Ah, now you are my darling."

His arms were tangled in her long loose hair. Her body was warm and fragrant.

"And I shall be star of the Follies?' she asked.

"Yes."

"When?'

His answer was a kiss.

"When?' She was insistent.

"Sometime."

She whirled away from him.

"I will dress quickly. My white dress, and I will wear the pearls you have given me and we will go and have a good time at the night club where you have reserved a table and I shall not care what that Davis thinks about me, for now I have you, my darling." She was stripping her costume from her.

"I don't care about going to the club. We'll go home."

She was already half in the white gown.

"Now we can't do that," she protested. "I want to go where there is music, and besides I am hungry."

"A little supper in the suite —'

"No, no. The fathead waiter would be so disappointed and I am wanting to dance with you again. We will go, eh? I promise not to flirt with anyone, I am mad in love with you, my darling."

He kissed her again.

"I'm an awful fool where you're concerned, my dear."

"Let's go!'

Let's go!

Let's go!

Stardom!

The next morning at 11 o'clock Ann opened the door for two gentlemen and ushered them into the drawing room of Consuelo's suite. There she left them. They were newspaper reporters.

The gypsy was touching her lips with rouge when Ann came to her.

"They're here, miss."

The girl did not answer. She turned before the mirror looking at herself, but so bright were her eyes that it is doubtful if she saw the reflection before her. She breathed deeply, almost chokingly, and went into the other room.

"Good morning, my friends." She walked toward them and it seemed to her that she was walking on air, so light were her feet.

"Good morning, Consuelo. You're looking more beautiful than ever. If you could tell us how you do it, it would be worth a million dollars in publicity for you."

"I am going to give you more than that."

"What?" they asked in the same breath.

"I have had one dream," she said slowly, "that dream was to be the greatest dancer in the world. I came to New York to fulfill that dream. Mr. Goldberg saw me dance and put me on in the Follies, that you know. You know, too, that because L'Ville had a starring contract they could do no more than feature me. In your papers you have asked why L'Ville continued when I was the recognized dancer over her. Well, gentlemen, you need ask no longer. Louise L'Ville has withdrawn from the cast of the Follies and I am to take her place tonight!" She could hardly speak words, so fast was her heart beating.

"Good Lord, what a break!"

"You're going on tonight?"

"Yes, it is true!"

Musical Dental Chair Is Latest Invention

DETROIT, May 31 (AP)—A new dental chair which plays music into the back of a patient's head while the drill bores his tooth, is being tested here.

The music, by travelling through the bones, masks the grinding noise and lessens wincing and cringing.

Tipped back, the patient's head contacts two plates fixed in the headrest. They are the new sound bone conduction plates and are attached to a phonograph by wires leading into another room.

No sound is audible to the ears. But when the head touches the plates they transmit the music, clearly and perfectly through the bones.

More than 2000 unlicensed firearms have been surrendered recently to London police.

Canada's Tea Imports Down By One-Half

OTTAWA, May 31 (CP)—Imports of tea during the month of April were less than half of that of the corresponding month last year, while there was also a decrease in the imports of coffee, according to a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Tea imported during April amounted to 2,583,963 pounds against 6,713,873 pounds in the same month last year while imports of coffee totalled 2,102,154 pounds compared with 3,304,095 pounds in April, 1934.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, June 1

A very active and strenuous day, but one without much accomplishment, is presaged by prevailing planetary conditions. While there may be very energetic and enterprising efforts to put over ambitious plans and projects, yet many obstructions and difficulties may be encountered. Subterfuge and underhand work in many directions should be guarded against. Safeguard the physical health which also may prove a thwarting factor.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of much well-directed effort in the launching of important plans and undertakings. But they may find themselves confronted by tenacious obstacles and situations difficult to negotiate.

A child born on this day may be energetic, resourceful and practical, but may find it necessary to cope with obstacles in order to achieve success.

Electrics To Enter Trent Valley Loop

C.G.E. expects to enter an intermediate team in the Trent Valley League, according to information given The Examiner this morning by an official of the C.G.E. Ball Club. They have been invited to attend a meeting of the T.V.L. in the hotel at Marmora on Monday night at 7.30 (Standard Time), along with any other Peterborough teams interested in entering this circuit. Abbie Rose will manage the Electrics, identified so long in the East Peterborough League, and the canny ex-senior pitcher and infielder expects to line up a strong squad. The team will hold a practice to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock in the Exhibition Grounds, and all players wanting a tryout will be welcome. All positions are still open.

BOB RANKINE WINS U.S. RUN

Preston Star Leads by Five Yards in Thrilling Final Dash.

FIELD OF 30.

NORWICH, Conn., May 31 (A.P.).—In as thrilling a final-lap duel as has ever been witnessed here, Robert S. (Bob) Rankine of Preston, Ont., yesterday captured the United States Amateur Athletic Union 15-kilometer championship run, finishing the grind in 49 minutes 31 2-5 seconds. A field of 30 started.

Making his debut here, the Canadian youth with a courageous heart had to withstand a home-stretch challenge from four other marathoners, including Paul F. Mundy of Philadelphia, who was defending the title.

The five—Rankine, Mundy, Eino Pentti of New York, Lou Gregory of Osone Park, L.I., and Leslie Pawson of Pawtucket, R.I.—pounded down the last circuit neck-and-neck, with Rankine spurting in the final metres to win by five yards. Mundy crossed the finish line seven seconds behind the winner. Pentti's time was 49 minutes 41 4-5 seconds, and Gregory was clocked in 49 minutes 42 1-5 seconds.

Ten thousand people saw Ellison Brown, of Westerly, R.I., take the lead at the start and hold it for four kilometres before being overtaken by Rankine, who stayed up front the rest of the way.

Murray St. Seniors Upset Softball Dope

The last place Murray Street Seniors upset the Church Softball League dope last night by pulling out a 10-9 verdict over the leading Knox outfit when Foster drove in Young with the winning run in the last inning. It was a close, exciting scrap, with both pitchers looking smart. Young and Smythe hit homers with Palmer and Archibald also good at bat. The teams:

Knox: Gatfield, 2b; Morrison, 3b; Smythe, rf; Archibald, ss; McDonald, cf; Masters, c; W. Wedlock, 1b; Charlton, lf; A. Wedlock, p.

Murray Street: Wells, 3b; Foster, lf; McVabb, rf; A. Mann, ss; K. Mann, 2b; Palmer, cf; J. Mann, 1b; Watkins, c; Young, p.

LACROSSE TEAM GETS 14–3 WIN

Experience Counts as Petes Defeat Rama Indians Ala Exhibish.

PLAYED AT LINDSAY.

In a snappy exhibition lacrosse game in Lindsay last night, the Peterborough Intermediates defeated the Rama Indians, 14-3, before a fair crowd. The Petes had too much experience for the Indians and led from the start. They were in front 3-1 in the first quarter, 8-1 going into the third and 9-2 as the fourth started. There were no individual standouts, all the winners looking good, with Anderson, Douglas and H. Williams effective for the losers.

R. Creighton notched the first goal, and A. Anderson got it back on H. Williams' pass. Miller tallied from LeBarr and E. Creighton notched one on King's pass. In the second, King took Dundas' assist to score and Ira got another alone. Creighton went in to bulge the hemp on Dundas' pass, with King repeating on Miller's and Magee got one alone to end the frame. H. Douglas scored the Indians' second on A. Anderson's assist but Jones got it back, aided by Magee. The final Rama tally was hung up in a scramble by A. Anderson. King scored twice in the fourth on Miller's pass first and then aided by Magee and Creighton. E. Creighton and Dundas then scored on King's passes, with Gardner getting the final one on another assist by Pete King, who was playing heady lacrosse.

The teams:

Rama—Goal, Wellington; defence, Benson and Simcoe; rover, Shilling; centre, G. Benson; wings, A. Anderson and Williams; subs, Douglas, Sawyers, H. Shilling, St. Germain, Austin, J. Anderson and Stinson.

Petes: Goal, Lefebvre; defence, Miller and LeBarr; centre, Dundas; rover, R. Creighton;; wings, E. Creighton and King; subs, Magee, Jones, Ellis and Gardner.

Referees—H. Tudhope and R. Fawn.

Queen Mary School Again Victors 20-15

In a wide-open School Softball League game on the west-end diamond, Queen Mary continued its winning streak by taking a 20 to 15 decision over Central. A total of 16 runs in the first two innings put the tilt on ice for the Q.M. boys, but Central fought back doggedly and made it a good scrap. The pitching wasn't very good on either side and the fielding just so-so, but both crews took toeholds at the plate to bringle the ball hard and often. The teams:

Central: Ascott, c; Millen, p; McKinnon, 1b; Currie 2b; R. Clarke ss; Copperthwaite, cf; Sage, lf; Duggan, rf.

Queen Mary: Merrett, 2b; R. Crary, lf; Robson, p; D. Crary, 3b; Easton, cf; Mortimer, 1b; Neiman, c; Moncrief, rf; McGregor, ss.

HOOKS BIG FISH

ST. JOHNS, Que.—Charles Brouillette, fishing in the waters of the Richelieu River for over, 63 years, "hooked" the biggest and heaviest bull-pout ever captured in this district. The fish weighed 10 pounds and 10 ounces. A bull-pout weighing 3 pounds is considered a good catch.

EXTEND FENCE AT RIVERSIDE

Board of Works to Complete Improvement on North Side.

"Retread" On Two Streets.

Completion of the fencing of Riverside Park was authorized by the Board of Works last night on Alderman Cotton's motion, seconded by Alderman Ellis.

The Board has already put up a new fence on the east side of the Park, and the unfinished job on the north side left a contrast that virtually demanded the extension of the fence from the northeast corner to the river. Some opposition cropped up in the committee, but the majority of the members favored immediate action.

Canadian National Telegraphs proposed rental of ducts at one cent a foot a year for their lines on Simcoe street from Bethune to George street and south to the company's office near Charlotte street. The distance is approximately 1200 feet, which would yield a rental of $12 a year to the city.

On Alderman Macdonald's motion the Company will be informed that the city cannot accept less than $100 a year.

Improve Two Streets

Resurfacing of Park Hill Road from George street to the C.N.R., and George street from Park Hill road to Barnardo avenue was authorized by the Board on Alderman McIntyre's motion, seconded by Mayor Denne. The estimated cost is $900, although Ald. Macdonald said he expected it would be much more than that sum. These two stretches of road will be resurfaced with "retread."

Purchase from the Ford Motor Company of three motor trucks, two for the Board of Works and one for the Parks Committee, was recommended by a special committee of the Board and adopted.

To Prepare Plans

Alderman Cotton's campaign for the installation of sanitary conveniences at Nicholls Oval succeeded last night to the point at which the Board instructed City Engineer Parsons to prepare plans and an estimate of the cost of the work, which the chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee has been urging for several years.

Alderman Cotton also declared that the city should provide similar accommodation for the public at King Edward Park.

Miss Lottie Hogan's request that the Board repair the curb at 51 Hunter street east was referred to the City Engineer.

If the trustees of the Nicholls Hospital give their consent, the city will remove the bank of earth immidiately west of the hospital, as an improvement at that point and especially as a means of providing work for some of the unemployed men. City Engineer Parsons estimated that 1,344 cubic yards could be removed at a cost of $632, the earth to be placed west of George street and north of Aylmer street.

Alderman Ellis spoke of the need of some shelter at the corner of Armour Road and Park Hill Road for citizens of that vicinity who have to wait there for bus transportation down town. Some enquiry will be made, but nothing definite was decided last night.

To Discuss Fuel By-law

The Legal Committee with Alderman Sloan presiding decided to defer discussion of a by-law proposed by the fuel dealers of the city to a meeting of the Committee of the Whole.

"We are not taking by-laws handed out from anybody," one of the aldermen said, "but there are some points in this draft that are worth considering."

MOVING BRANCH EMPLOYING 16

C.G.E. Company to Transfer Luminous Tube Department to Toronto.

COUNCIL INFORMED.

Intention of the Canadian General Electric Company to transfer to Toronto a small department engaging sixteen employees was contained in a letter read at last night's meeting of the Manfacturers' Committee by its chairman, Alderman Cotton.

This department manufactures luminous tubes and ignition transformers used in Neon lights. Two automatic winding machines for making small electric coils are included in the apparatus that is to be removed.

Mayor Denne remarked that some representations should be made to the company regarding the city's prospective loss of this department.

"Every sixteen workers count," said the Mayor.

"If they need the department in Toronto they'll go anyway," Alderman Ellis commented.

"If we could get a new factory employing sixteen we'd all jump at it," Mayor Denne replied.

"Sure, that's the idea," Ald. Ellis said.

A subcommittee composed of Mayor Denne, Alderman Wilson and Alderman McIntyre was appointed to interview C. A. Salmonsen, Works Manager and, if it was later thought available, to appeal to the general manager of the company in Toronto.

"We got one piece of good news today from the Westclox," Mayor Denne remarked, "but this news isn't so good."

Hostess Tea Is Held By The Cavan W.M.S.

CAVAN, May 31.—(Examiner Correspondence). — A very enjoyable hostess tea was sponsored in Cavan United Church on Wednesday afternoon by the Cavan W.M.S. Nineteen tables looked very attractive with their pretty cloths, each one centred by a vase of apple blossoms, tulips and pansies.

Mrs. J. R. Trumpour and Mrs. J. C. Swain poured tea from a long table, whose centrepiece was a black bowl holding pansies. Silver tea services were used. The menu was appetising and daintily served.

Approximately one hundred ladies were present, including guests from Ebenezer, Mount Pleasant, Fairmount, Springville and Millbrook, as well as the community.

During the program Mrs. R. S. Staples and Mrs. A. B. Kennedy sang an enjoyable duet; Miss A. Tinney contributed a well rendered solo; Miss Audrey Hill, piano solos, and little Peggy McNeil delighted the ladies with a recitation.

There was a sale table where home-made articles were readily disposed of.

The afternoon added nineteen dollars to the W.M.S. and a very sociable time was spent.

BAILIEBORO Y.P.S. HOLDS MEETING

Plan to Hold Annual Picnic Early in June to Orono Park.

BAILIEBORO, May 31.—(Examiner Correspondence).—The young people of the United Church held their final regular meeting of the year in the church on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. M. Perrin, the Christian cultural convenor, was in charge of the program, and was assisted in the worship service by Misses Hilda Thompson and Frances Watt and Fred. Barnard.

The final young people's monthly paper was presented by the society editor, Miss May Earl.

The young people decided to discontinue their regular weekly meetings during the summer months and re-open their organization again the second Tuesday in September. They also decided to hold their annual picnic on June 9 at Orono Park, when the young people will have an opportunity of viewing the reforestration section at the back of the park.

Game Postponed.

The initial softball game in the Senior Girls' Softball League was scheduled to be played on the local diamond on Tuesday evening between the girls from Keene and the local club. The visitors were on hand, but the wet weather hindered some of the local girls from arriving at the field. A bout the time the game was to commence the rain poured down in torrents, and the affair was postponed until a later date.

Rev. Fred. Jobblin, of Stirling, will preach at the Sunday School anniversary service on Sunday morning, and Rev. Fred. Lane, of Frankford, will conduct the evening service. The choir from Baltimore United Church will be present at the service and assist with the music.

Ottawa Will Take Hand In Pacific Coast Strike

OTTAWA.—Steps to set up a board of conciliation to adjudicate on the disagreement on wages and working conditions which gave rise to the present strike of longshoremen at Vancouver were taken to-day by Minister of Labor W. A. Gordon. The Vancouver Shipping Federations and the Longshoremen's Union at Vancouver are being asked by the minister to nominate one representative each on the board. Following naming of representatives of the two disputing parties, a chairman will be selected. About 900 men are involved in the strike, it was said.

Canuck Held At New York Attempts To Cash Cheque

NEW YORK.—George W. Hunter, 29, of Minden, Ont., was held by police to-day on a charge of forgery after his arrest yesterday when he attempted to cash a $22 cheque drawn on the Department for Northern Development and signed with the alleged forged signatures of G. H. Cooper and T. E. Swartman, Ontario officials. Police said Hunter told them he stole the cheques from the Northern Development offices while employed as a clerk. Police said Hunter was also wanted by Canadian authorities on similar charges.

Beet Harvest Strike Not Taken Seriously

CHATHAM.—Inquiries instituted in various parts of the country would seem to indicate preparations for the coming sugar beet harvest are proceeding apace. Reports that a strike among the beet workers in endangering fields of beets cannot be verified, nor can any evidence be secured of violence. An effort is still being made by labor organizers to induce workers to quit the fields in some sections but representative farmers do not appear to regard the beet workers' strike very seriously.

Archie Hyatt Connected With Pt. Burwell Robbery

ST. THOMAS.—Provincial Police believe Archie Hyatt, Kingston prisoner, captured near Lucan Thursday following an 11-day search perpetrated the burglary of the A. N. Wright hardware and sports goods store at Port Burwell the night of May 22. Taken from the store were three guns, two .22 calibre rifles and one single-barrelled shotgun. When Hyatt was arrested he had in the car with him a loaded .22 calibre rifle and a shotgun. When Bernard Leavy, Hyatt's accomplice, was arrested he had a .22 calibre rifle. For the purposes for attempting identification of the guns taken from Leavy and Hyatt, Mr. Wright went to London to-day.

Nebraska Floods Claim 250 Lives

TORNADO HITS FLOODED LAND WESTERN STATE

As Flooded Rivers Go Over Their Banks Tornado Hits County.

FAMILIES MAROONED.

Whole County is Without Power, Light or Communication.

By ED YINGER

(Copyright, 1935, by the A. P.)

McCOOK, Neb., June 1. — Relief workers in the flood and tornado devastated area of Southwestern Nebraska today estimated the death toll may reach 250 persons and confirmed reports that the villages of Max and Parks had been swept away by the flood waters.

The casualties followed after a tornado had cut a half mile wide swath through Red Willow county late yesterday and after all rivers and creeks in the territory, swollen by heavy rains and cloudbursts, suddenly went over their banks.

First authentic word of the disaster to reach the outside world after the tornado had severed all communications was received at Lincoln, Neb., after an Associated Press staff man had surveyed the stricken territory by airplane.

Approximately 25 persons in the McCook area were missing but no deaths from the flood have been listed by rescue workers. A violent tornado struck this city leaving three dead and nine injured.

No word has been obtained from Parks and Max to show what became of their inhabitants but reports here were to the effect most citizens of those communities were safe.

Wireless reports told of 12 deaths at Benkelman, six reported deaths at Alma and another Associated Press staff writer listed 28 persons missing in the Oxford area.

The tornado whirled in from the

WHITE SEEKING TO STOP PROBE

Scope of Probe Into Defunct Company Widened By Orders-in-Council.

RECONVENE JUNE 10.

TORONTO, June 1 (C.P.).—Attempt to halt the public inquiry into the affairs of the defunct Manufacturers' Finance Corporation will be made by Peter White, K.C., counsel for Senator J. Anthony McDonald of Shediac, N.B., former president.

Mr. White argued against the widened scope of the inquiry as empowered by an Order-in-Council yesterday but Ontario Securities Commissioner J. M. Godfrey told him he would have to reserve his argument until the commission reconvened June 10.

Powers of Mr. Godfrey to inquire into collapse of the company seven years ago were enlarged by Order-in-Council yesterday to permit him to investigate "circumstances surrounding the prosecution and proposed prosecutions arising out of the bankruptcy of the company and into recommendations made by law officers of the Crown concerning the said prosecutions or proposed prosecutions."

Just before the order was brought into the commission, Joseph Sedgwick of the Attorney-General's Department, who made a report on his investigation into the company's affairs when it collapsed, said he had made no recommendation for prosecution of Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Minister of Trade and Commerce; Col. Robert Stark of Montreal, or W. J. Westaway of Hamilton, all former directors of the company.

STOPGAP PLANS TO RESCUE NRA TO BE REJECTED

Age-old Cry of "State's Rights" is Being Revived By Liberty League.

LET PEOPLE DECIDE.

WASHINGTON, June 1 (CP) — High scources close to the White House indicated plainly to-day President Roosevelt is likely to reject all plans for stopgap NRA legislation for the present and await the country's reaction to the question which he posed as the most momentous peace-time issue ever to confront the United States.

Opposing forces already were lining up on the issue which the President raised in the form of a [illegible] whether the Federal Government shall deal with major economic and social problems or whether they shall be relegated to the 47 States. His hint of an effort to revise the constitution as a result of the Supreme Court decision smashing NRA aroused opposition among Republican critics of the New Deal and among some Democrats, while others supported him.

Be Historic Battle

There were indications the issue, if pressed to the ultimate conclusion, would mean a historic battle with incalculable effects upon party lines and in the opinion of many observers, a tremendous influence on the course of American history.

Already the age-old cry of "State's rights" was being raised—with assertions and denials the Democratic party's tradition stand in favor of such rights was being violated.

Work Is Suspended On Crowland Sewer

WELLAND, June 1. (CP).—Operations at the Beatrice street sewer in Crowland, scene recently of a strike by relief workers, have been postponed for a month because of a shortage of relief labor.

Under the relief plan the unemployed work according to the amount of relief received. QUETTA, India, June 1 (AP).—The number of dead in this earthquake-stricken area was unofficially estimated at 30,000 to-day as relief work went forward under martial law, proclaimed to facilitate rescue of the injured and burial of the victims.

Bodies Burned Or Buried.

The bodies of those who died in the catastrophe were burned or buried as soon as they were recovered to avoid the risk of an outbreak of disease.

One of the disaster's most tragic incidents was the taxing of the general hospital, killing 200 to 300 patients.

Floods outside the city added to the horror within

Water gushing from fissures caused by the quake in some places flooded to a depth of several feet.

Moans of Injured Heard.

The moans of the injured could still be heard as British and Indian soldiers attempted to reach them. After hours of digging scores of the soldiers dropped in the streets from exhaustion.

Jackals from the surrounding hills slipped into the debris-choked streets last night, adding a new horror to the ruined plateau area.

Following twenty-seven years service on the Canadian National Railways, Fred Elliott, 48, of this city was the victim of a fatal accident while discharging his duties as brakeman in the railroad yards at Trenton yesterday afternoon.

It is believed that Elliott was attempting to recouple a snow plow which had become detached from the locomotive which was hauling it in the yards at the time that he met with the accident. He was dragged several feet before the engineer J. Labelle, noticed his plight and could bring the locomotive to a halt, it is stated.

Mr. Elliott sustained a badly lacerated skull, crushed ribs and a punctured lung which resulted in his death at Belleville General Hospital at 5 p.m. yesterday. An inquest has been ordered.

The beverage rooms increase the incentive to the consumption of liquor; a report of the Evangelism and Social Service Committee held.

"The insistence on spiritual wealth in personal life must be carried over into our ceaseless conflict with the evils associated with liquor," the report read. "Our aim in that field is the liberation of life from every servitude to fashion or indulgence; and this can be achieved only in the new creation of a God-filled life.

"The economic power of groups interested in the sale of liquor now works through mass suggestion and organized publicity until Christian freedom is imperilled. In this situation we view with strong disfavor any increase in incentives to the consumption of liquor, especially in those beverage rooms which exist solely to promote indulgence in the

KARPIS GANG IS BEING BLAMED FOR KIDNAPPING

Little Lad is Freed in Lonely Country Spot—Tramps Miles.

EIGHT DAYS A CAPTIVE.

Youth Brought to Tacoma By Farmer Whose Home He Called At.

BY LELAND HANNUM

(Copyright, 1935, by the A. P.)

TACOMA, Wash., June 1. —Little George Weyerhaeuser was freeed early today after nearly eight days captivity by his kidnappers, believed to be the notorious Alvin Karpis gang, who got $200,000 ransom as the price of the boy's freedom.

No sooner had the nine-year-old lad been restored to his overjoyed parents, than the greatest manhunt of the Pacific Northwest, was unleashed to capture the abductors.

Identifies Captors

The boy identified three of his captors as "Harry, Bill and Alvin—who must be that fellow Karpis."

George referred to Alvin Karpis, widely sought gang leader born in Montreal.

Federal agents clamped immediate silence on all details of the search while Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser offered prayers of thanks and clasped their son in the seclusion of their home. The ransom was paid by F. Rodman Titcomb, uncle of the boy seized from a Tocoma street May 24 as he returned homeward from school during a noon recess.

Get Full Amount

When or how the money was paid could not be learned but apparently the snatchers were given the full amount they demanded for release of the boy, a sum which has been paid only twice before — in the kidnapping of Edward G. Bremer and Charles F. Urschel.

The boy was released about four miles from Issaquah, 25 miles northwest of here, and made his way as dawn broke to the farm of George Bomomi.

Bomomi bundled the lad into an automobile and rushed him toward Tacoma. Enroute, he stopped at a gasoline service station and telephoned the family but could raise no one.

Then he called Tacoma police who first revealed the boy had been found.

Bomomi said the child was unharmed and cheerful when he trudged into the farm home about 4 a.m.

Sources close to the Washington state patrol revealed a 1934 sedan was being sought as the kidnap car. The patrol notified all its widespread officers to be on the lookout and halt the car.

George's reference to his kidnapers' name as "Harry, Bill and Alvin," recalled Harry Campbell is the name of another widely sought gangster lieutenant of Karpis.

Numerous Tacoma residents in the past few days identified pictures of Volney Davis, Karpis lieutenant, as resembling a man seen here last

FLOODS TAKING BIG DEATH TOLL IN NEBRASKA

Scores of Families Are Unaccounted For as Rivers Go on Rampage.

VILLAGES WIPED OUT.

Property Toll is Already Estimated at Millions of Dollars.

OXFORD, Neb., June 1. — (AP)—Fear for the lives of scores of farm families of the Republican river valley of Southern Nebraska was expressed today as a broad expanse of muddy water hid their fate. The cascading waters already have taken a property toll estimated at millions of dollars.

Scores of families were unaccounted for in the eight counties swept by the torrents of water from recent cloudbursts and heavy rains. The Republican River here, normally 100 to 10 feet wide, was more than two miles wide.

Rescue work was handicapped by lack of boats, only one small boat being available here. In Furnas county alone more than 2,700 bridges and culverts were washed out.

Livestock Drowned

Thousands of cattle and other livestock drowned and the loss to farmers will run to millions of dollars.

No word came today from the villages of Max and Parks in the southwestern corner of the state which unverified reports said had been swept away, and no reports were received concerning two Burlington railroad passenger trains marooned by flood waters, one between parks and Fort Morgan, Colo., and the other near Red Willow, Neb.

Reports from McCook before wires went down said six men plunged into the torrents when a bridge collapsed and 14 men were marooned atop a power plant.

DENVER, Colo., June 1. (AP).—Devastating flood waters moved slowly out of Colorado and Wyoming to-day as more than a score of communities in the two states took up the burden of rehabilitation.

Danger still lurked in the surging waters of the Platte river in northeastern Colorado and there were fears the state's list of 15 known deaths would mount. Wyoming reported seven deaths and search was renewed for two Denver women reported missing near Glendo where a motor car overturned in a washout.

Damage $1,500,000

Colorado Springs, applying for federal funds to aid rehabilitation, listed losses of more than $1,500,000, including about half a million damage to private property.

Pueblo's loss went into six figures, incuding damage to the state hospital. The numerous small Colorado towns that likewise suffered as swollen tributaries coursed tumultuously toward the Platte and Arkansas, brought the total figure to an imposing sum.

Livestock deaths will add to the final figure, casualties have been heavy among cattle.

U.K. BACON

OTTAWA, June 1 (C.P.) — The United Kingdom market for imported bacon was unchanged this week, according to cabled advice received yesterday by the Department of Agriculture. Danish was firm but other classes were quiet. Canadian bacon sold from 82 to 86 shillings.

Canadian ham was steady from 91 to 94 shillings.

HOG PRICES ADVANCED

TORONTO.—Hog prices were unchanged at Winnipeg yesterday. That was the only major Canadian live stock market open. Outside points were quite irregular.

Bacon hogs were higher on major Canadian live stock markets during the current week. Winnipeg led the upswing with an advance of 60 cents per cwt., while Montreal came next with a gain of 25 to 40 cents per cwt. Toronto finished about 5 to 25 cents higher after gaining up to 40 cents per cwt. Outside points were irregular throughout the week.

Bacon hogs gained 5 to 25 cents per cwt., locally during the past week. Bacons sold at $9 f.o.b., $9.15 off truck, and $9.75 weighed off cars. Butchers, lights and feeders sold at a discount of $1, with heavies $1.50 per head. Selects brought the usual $1 premium. Packers' bids for week-end loadings were down to $8.71 per cwt. Receipts for the week-end totalled 3,367 head, compared with 3,017 the previous week, and 4,768 head the same week last year.

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, June 1.—Lower prices for wheat yesterday followed reports President Roosevelt viewed the Supreme Court's NRA decision as a national reversal to the horse-and-buggy era.

Attention of traders focussed especially on the fact that the President was reported as indicating the Supreme Court's opinion, if it blocked any Federal control of agricultural production, might result in 36-cent wheat and 5-cent cotton under present world conditions. With heavy selling pressure in evidence toward the last May and July wheat reached a new low price record for the season.

Talk of a possible squeeze in the month-end settlement of May corn contracts fizzled out completely. Wheat closed weak, ⅝c-¾c lower than Wednesday's finish; July 84c-84¼c. Corn unchanged; ⅛c higher; July 78⅝c-78¾c. Corn ¼c off to 1c up, and provisions varying from 2c decline to a rise of 30c.

Five Children Die as Flames Sweep Alderwood Home

Five children were burned to death in the home of Harry Scott, at Alderwood, Ontario, when flames gutted the interior of the frame structure, leaving only an empty shell. Only the mother and father and three-year-old Douglas were saved. The dead are: Victor, 19; Vera, 12; Bobby, 8; Dorothy, 4; and Sadie, 15 months. When the fire was discovered the parents leaped to the verandah, with Douglas. Mr. Scott jumped to the ground and caught his wife and child. Efforts of three firemen were required to stop the frantic father from rushing into the inferno of flames. Layout shows the house, Mr. Scott and son Douglas, and the scene of the bedroom, where three of the children were burned.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, June 1. — The May future ended its life for this crop year in an uneventful manner yesterday with a closing price of 81⅝c, to show a loss of ½c from the previous close on the Winnipeg Exchange. July closed at 82⅞c

Market action was disappointing in view of the strength at Liverpool and an opening rise at Chicago. There appeared to be a lot of wheat for sale here, and buying was restricted. Export sales were made on the decline, and estimates placed these at beween 300,000 and 500,000 bushels. The session was not an active one.

Liverpool strength was attributed to firmness at Winipeg on Thursday and the need of rain to aid seeding in Argentina and Australia. Liverpool finished at 1d to 1½d higher per 100 pounds. Export of wheat from both Australia and Argentina this wek was smaller, and clearances from Black Sea ports amounted to only 128,000 bushels. The Chicago market started out strongly, but finished weak. Buenos Aires was down fractionally at noon

Demand for lower grades of cash wheat continued fairly good at spreads mostly unchanged, but the offerings remained light. Interest in other grades continued indifferent.

Trading in coarse grain futures was fairly active at times, and the prices displayed an erratic trend.

KING SUFFERS SLIGHT CHILL

Illnes sof King George is Described as Being Not Serious.

STAYS IN PALACE.

LONDON, June 1 (CP Cable)—A slight chill kept the King within doors to-day and interrupted part of the heavy Jubilee program which has occupied him for the past month.

Official announcement was made last night that His Majesty had contracted a slight chill. As a precautionary measure, the King was remaining within the palace until he has regained normal health. The illness was described as not serious.

It was believed the chill was contracted yesterday when His Majesty drove to St. James Palace to hold a levee at which he received officers of the army, the navy and the air force.

70th Birthday Monday

In court circles the hope was expressed the King would have completely recovered by Monday when he will celebrate his 70th birthday.

A constant stream of functions has kept the King and Queen occupied since the silver Jubilee celebrations began May 6, the 25th anniversary of King George's accession to the throne. It was presumed fatigue reulted from heavy round of duties might have played a part in bringing on the chill.

An official statement was issued with the remark further statements were unnecessary.

"His Majesty's cold remains alight," said the official statement. "The King is working, although remaining indoors," it added. "The King was seen during the morning by his medical advisers and it was afterwards decided that he would remain indoors to-day."

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wolfe and two boys, of Peterborough, were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Thorndyke, on Sunday.

Mr. William Snelgrove, of Weyburn, Sask., and formerly of Millbrook, was in the village on Tuesday renewing old acquaintances, and was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Pendrie during his brief stay in town. It is twenty-five years since Mr. Snelgrove moved to the West, after selling out his bakery and confectionery business which he had successfully carried on here to G. W. Sayles, now of Kirkland Lake, Northern Ontario. Mr. Snelgrove was called East owing to the serious illness of his sister, Mrs. Lemay, of Lakefield.

The male quartette of George St. United Church, Peterborough, Messrs. Lillow, Thompson, Cunningham and Rowe, of Peterborough, who led in the worship of song at the Men's Bible Class anniversary last Sunday, with their wives, and the guest speaker, Rev. Dr. P. Bruce Thornton, of Winnipeg, were entertained at the parsonage after the evening service as guests of Rev. A. L. and Mrs. Sisco, when refreshments were served, wives of members of the class assisting the hostess.

Miss B. M. Turner, B.A., attended the meeting of the Mothers' Allowance Board for Durham County at Bowmanville recently. The secretary, Mrs. A. L. Nichols, read a communication, stating that the board may now receive applications from mothers with but one child, a recent ruling of the Ontario Legislature making such eligible for the allowance.

A study of the "Great Commission," by means of Scripture passages, read by various members, featured the devotional period of the May meeting of the Golden Links Mission Circle on Wednesday, at 8 p.m., with a further study of the constant care of the Saviour for His own, followed by the prayer-hymn, "Breathe on Me, Breath of God," sung softly with heads bowed. The president, Jean L. Burnham, was in the chair, and ways and means discussed of raising money to reach the allocation included the idea of holding a "hostess tea" next month and an open-air social in the form of a raspberry festival in July. Eleanor Bigelow and Christina Reid sang, "Abide With Me," and Mrs. D. Lunn gave a reading covering the experiences of Rev. D. Southam in "One Year on the Labrador Coast."

Veteran Railroad Man Retires After 46 Years

CAMPBELLFORD, June 1 (Examiner Correspondence).—After 46 years' railroad service, Salem Hoard retired on Friday night. Mr. Hoard started in as a track-man out of Hoard's Station at the age of 19, in the days of the old Grand Trunk. For the past 20 years he has been road boss in this section, and with the exception of one year spent in the Lonsdale district with the C.P.R. has served continuously with the G.T. and C.N.R.

Cleric With Axe Outdoes Farmer

LONDON, Ont., June 1, (CP) Resenting an insinuation he worked but one day a week, Rev. D. J. Lane, Presbyterian cleric, accepted a challenge of ex-Reeve Albert Goldthorpe, township to a wood splitting and sawing contest. Going to where workmen were engaged in cutting down dead trees, the pair peeled off coats and fell to. After vainly trying to keep up with the clergyman, the farmer threw down his axe and admitted defeat.

BUDGET CHANGES PASS COMMONS IN SHORT NOTICE

Little Debate as Minister of Finance Has Changes Pass Commons.

MARKETING ACT ASSAILED.

Liberal Members Go After Hon. Robert Weir When He Presents Estimates.

OTTAWA, June 1. (CP).—Breaking records of long standing for speed in putting through a budget the House of Commons has just ended a week of rapid progress in enacting legislation. In an agreeable mood the House last night pushed through all the resolutions of the 1935 budget at a single sitting.

Usually the budget which includes tariff and taxation changes occasions lengthy debates. This year the tariff changes were few but higher taxes were levied on corporation and personal incomes. Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, made his first appearance in the House since his recent illness to find the task of explaining his financial proposals a simple one.

Act is Assailed

Heavy weather was encountered by Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture, however, when he sought approval of the House for his estimates for the Natural Products Marketing Act. Liberal members assailed the act. J. P. Pouliot (Lib., Temiscouata) said it would ruin the farmers and A. E. MacLean (Lib., Prince) claimed it had already ruined the market for

Sabbath Message For The Shut-Ins

Written for The Examiner by REV. EDWARD R. JAMES.

THE ASCENT OF MAN.

"While they beheld He was taken up and a cloud received Him out of their sight."—Acts 1:9.

A SMALL group of Jews are "lifting up their eyes," and "while they beheld, He was taken up and a cloud received Him out of their sight." It happened just outside the city of Jerusalem on Mount Olivet. With the physical eyes they saw Him no more.

"He was taken up." Science tells us there is no such thing as "up" or "down," but on account of our limitations of thought and speech like children, we have to say, "He was taken up" into the spiritual world which is all around us.

Perhaps it may surprise you to remember that the very first words our Lord spake after His resurrection to Mary Magdalene was about His ascension, and His message to His apostles is about His ascension also. He does not mention His resurrection at all. He does not say, "I have risen." The ascension seems to be the uppermost thought in the mind of the risen Lord. He longs to ascend. His human soul looks forward passionately to the moment when He would find Himself face to face with the Father. He longs for the Beatific vision of the Father. Simply and calmly, He said to His apostles in the upper room, "I come forth from the Father and am come into the world; again I leave the world and go to the Father."

The inspired writer in using the words "taken up" would teach us that our Lord's work on earth was entirely satisfactory to the Father. "This is My Beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Moreover He takes up with Him that which had never been in heaven before, our human nature. There stands in the presence of the Father the perfect man. Whose character had been perfected in the only possible way through stress and strain of temptation and trial. He had the choice of choosing the good instead of the best, and He chose the best at a tremendous cost. He is clad in the best robe. Perfect humanity. That best robe had been woven by Him through pain, sorrow, tears, agony and blood. It is in very truth the best robe of perfect righteousness. As the Blessed Son looks back upon that life on earth and the joy that was set before Him, His human soul is satisfied; the words of the ancient prophecy are fulfilled, "He saw the travail of His soul and shall be satisfied." He has taken that best robe into heaven, not for Himself alone, but that through His Spirit He may cast the robe on everyone who shall accept Him as Saviour and Lord.

Over and over again in the New Testament Scriptures we are told that our Lord has sat down on the right hand of God. It is good for us to remember this truth, this symbolic language that Jesus Christ is seated at the right hand of God. A man is seated there upon the throne of God. It means that Jesus Christ is not absorbed into the God-head, as Buddhism would strive to teach. He has not ceased to be man. He is still a man with a distinct human soul. As Westcott says, "He has only passed into another mode of existence." He has the same human name JESUS by which we address Him, the name which brings to our mind all His tenderness, His compassion, His patience, His wisdom, His sympathy and the fact that He suffered, died and rose again. "This same Jesus," said the angels to the apostles on the Mount of Ascension. It is good for us to remember that He who passed through all this is the God-man, Jesus Christ. What a comforting thought this is to the dying man as he looks back upon his life, its faults, its sins both of ommission and commission, and looking into the future, he knows he will stand before the judgment seat of the God-man, bone of our bone, flesh of our flesh, and that he will be judged by one who has been "touched with the feeling of our infirmities" and is "not ashamed to call us brethren."

Once more think of the Lord Christ standing before His Father's throne in all His human perfection. When God the Father looks upon the Son He sees in Him all the perfections of humanity which He had in His mind when He said, "Let us make man in our own image." And if there were no other soul saved God would be satisfied in beholding in the Son the perfect man.

But that is not all. "He is taken up" to come back again as He never did before. The ascension is not the end, but the beginning of a new race of men and women whose lives are being truly changed and transformed into the very image of the Lord Christ through His indwelling Spirit. It is the fulfillment of the ancient question, "What is man that Thou art mindful of Him?" It means that man is intended to rise to the very highest rank of created beings, to be on the right hand of God. In Christ's ascension we get a glimpse of the glory that shall be in the ascent of man. For the humanity is not separated from the divinity and Christ Himself, praying to the Father, has said, "I will that where I am there they may be also."

"He has raised our human nature
On the clouds to God's right hand;
There we sit in heavenly places,
There with Him in glory stand:
Jesus reigns, adored by angels;
Man with God is on the throne;
Mighty Lord, in Thine ascension,
We by faith behold our own."

Your Problems

Religious and Social Questions Answered By DR WYLIE CLARK

Is it sensible to honor Darwin?—B. X.

All men, who are honest students, seeking to find the explanation of life deserve the gratitude of thoughtful people. They are the only road by which we may travel to make progress and be sure that we know where we are going. The trouble has been and still is, they have been slow in advancing and have never been able to show us the whole scheme at once. Thus seeing only a part, and sometimes a very small part, we fail to see how it will fit in at the end, and consequently we are apt to condemn instead of to praise them.

Dr. Wylie Clark

What attitude should Christians take toward secular science?—B. X.

They should gladly join in the pursuits of science. They should know that all may be known about the universe, this world and human relations towards material things. The truth that is reached through science cannot contradict the truth which is revealed through the Spirit. It is the same God which is the source of both. Wrong ideas of truth may do a lot of mischief and truth itself may cause confusion to preconceived ideas which were not true, but in the end truth is truth.

Should churches make their opinions clear with regard to political issues?—B. X.

Church as denominations and congregations are not agreed on political matters. Church members as individuals hold their political views, and it would be almost an impossibility to get any congregation which would be united behind any one party. I know, for instance, a congregation where the members for Ottawa (a Liberal), the member for the province (a Conservative) and a candidate for the C.C.F. are all members of one church board.

While congregations and denominations may not be able to declare themselves, yet members may, and I think should, take an active part in the government of their city, town, province and Dominion.

Was Jeremiah written before Genesis?—J. A. D.

The Book of Jeremiah is composed of the sermons and oracles of Jeremiah himself, bits of history of the times by Baruch, his secretary, and some additions made at a later date. He was born about 650 B.C. and died after the deportation to Egypt.

The first six books of the Bible are the most wonderful bit of literature known to men. They were likely put in their present shape sometime about 350 B.C. The material contained in them was found in the traditions, history and literatures of the writers of the two kingdoms. They are the sum total of life among the Hebrews.

Is the word "presidents" found in the Bible?—D. R. F.

Five times in the Book of Daniel, chapter six in the first seven verses.

Is presenting found in the Bible?—D. R. F.

Once in Daniel, chapter nine, and verse twenty.

CATHEDRAL MUSINGS

IT is a hard saying that "he that loveth his life shall lose it" and "he that layeth down his life shall find it." Like most of the sayings of the Master, these two variants of the same fact are pregnant with a truth that lies deeper than most realize. On the face of it, there is a paradox, but when we meditate upon the inner significance we see there is no paradox, but a clear statement of fact. For if the entire personality be centred upon this life, or in other words the affairs of the self that struts about for a while on earth and then is no more, how much is there in such of what may be termed "survival value" when the scene of action shifts to the next phase of existence at so-called death? For that which is of the lower self is of the earth earthy, but that which is spiritual of us alone has life when we enter the spiritual phase of existence. The conditions of being are different in the two phases, just as much as the conditions of life in air and water are different. Hence to have any survival value in a spiritual world our personalities MUST BE SPIRITUAL in nature. Hence also, the lower self which most of us in blind ignorance think is our real self must be laid down, so that we may find our true higher self, and so that our true self may so function and mould the personality that when the change called death takes place for us it will have no existence beyond being a mere passing from one chamber of the house of life to another. Our only enemy is self, and that self must be slain by the SELF, for in our Adam nature we all must die, and only in the Christ shall we find Life.—Frater IX., Rosicrucian Order, San Jose, Calif.

Our Day of Worship — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell And Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Gen. 2:2, 3; Ex. 20:8-11; Ps. 100; John 4:20-24; Acts 20:7; Col. 3:15-17.

When God gave the Ten Commandments to the nation through Moses on Mount Sinai he said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy, six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work: but the seventh day is a Sabbath unto the Lord thy God."

The 100th Psalm teaches us how and why we should worship God. "Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands, serve the Lord with gladness: come before his presence with singing. . . . For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting and his truth endureth to all generations."

To the woman of Samaria at Jacob's well Jesus said that true worship must not be limited to any special place, but that "God is a Spirit and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."

On his way to Jerusalem Paul stopped at Troas and when the Christians were gathered together to worship on the first day of the week he preached to them. Writing to another group later he encouraged them to worship "in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs."

CHASING THE HITCH-HIKERS.

Hitch-hiking still continues to constitute itself a major nuisance along the highways, although those who engage in this cheap but bothersome way of travelling report that drivers are becoming increasingly hard-hearted and free rides are correspondingly more difficult to obtain.

After all, why should motorists be expected to pick up individuals along our roads and supply them with free transportation?

In this connection Captain Wilson C. Price, of the Pennsylvania highway patrol, put the thing in its true light when he declared recently that "a hitch-hiker and a panhandler are the same, except that the panhandler whines for a dime and the hitch-hiker wants a ride that is often worth a $10 bill."

This view of the individual who begs a lift on the highways being really a panhandler on a large scale is new, but few will venture to claim that it is not accurate.

The hitch-hiker is sometimes a danger, and is always a nuisance, and it is not surprising to find the authorities in many sections of the continent declaring war on the persons who beg free rides.

Thumbing transportation is henceforth to be an obsolete custom in Pennsylvania, for the state highway patrol has announced that those who try to travel in this way are to be chased off the highways of the state, with a jail sentence or a fine awaiting everyone convicted of such an offence.

It is a campaign that might be copied by other jurisdictions, including our own province.

THOSE BRANCH LINES.

In an editorial on the wiping out of branch lines —including the Peterborough-Port Hope branch—the Globe goes right to the centre of the problem when it remarks that "apparently a loss of some kind is inevitable unless the volume of traffic is increased substantially," and that "the only point seems to be whether the loss should fall on the community or the railway."

There is a widespread opinion, however, that the railways cannot expect to do business unless they give service, and that the trend in recent years has been to more and more curtail the service, until so far as Peterborough at least is concerned, our present railway accommodation is much inferior than that provided 20 years ago.

Nevertheless, it is evident that the districts threatened with the loss of branch lines will have to do something more than merely protest if they expect to save the services that are to be cut off; they will have to see to it that enough passenger and freight traffic is provided to make it good business for the railways to keep these lines in operation.

If we are all going to travel by private automobile and ship by motor truck, there is only one logical end so far as the railway is concerned, and while The Examiner feels that the proposed abolition of the Port Hope-Peterborough line is a backward step and certainly not one that we can contemplate unmoved, we must confess that unless something is done to restore to the railways some of their lost business our protests are not likely to save the day.

THE RELIEF CAMP BOGEY.

The theory that relief work camps, operated under the Department of National Defense, are in reality training quarters for the next war was advanced in some detail by a visiting orator, Sam Scarlett, of Toronto, who addressed several score more or less interested citizens on the Market Square on Thursday night.

Such charges really need no denial among those who know anything about these camps, but for the benefit of others who may not be so well informed it may be pointed out that the camps are not conducted on military lines; there is nothing that suggests military training; the men sheltered there are perfectly free to leave at any time they desire, and the idea that there is some sinister connection between this method of dealing with unemployed single men and militarism is a bogey, conjured up by Red spokesmen who hope thereby to create trouble for the authorities.

These camps were established to look after unemployed transients and to provide them with food and shelter, a spending allowance of 20c a day being provided in addition.

It may be that in some cases there are legitimate complaints in regard to the operation of these relief shelters, for bad cooks can make good food bad and bad supervision can cause endless trouble, but to seriously advance the proposition that the camps were established for the purpose of manufacturing "cannon fodder" for the next war is to insult the intelligence of the public.

It is about as silly as a Canadian Communist waxing eloquent about free speech, a free press, the right of assembly and the right of organization, when he knows very well that in the very place in the world where Communism is in the saddle there is no free speech, no free press, and the right of assembly and of organization works only one way.

A Russian who believed in Capitalism and who started a speech in a public square in Moscow, urging his hearers to organize to upset the Communist system, would soon find how much freedom of speech exists in that country.

ABOUT A POPULAR FALLACY.

Apropos of a statement in these columns the other day that Canada could not afford to take British Columbia's relief camp workers and employ them at full wages upon unnecessary works—we asked where the money would come from—a correspondent, obviously sincere, writes as follows:

"I would be greatly obliged if you, or any reader, would enlighten me on the following suggestions, correcting any misunderstandings on my part:

"To start with, if war was forced upon Canada, or if Canada voluntarily entered any war, then all these men in relief camps, and many thousands more, would be immediately employed and paid, and no man would be idle, nor one family really want.

"This apart from the enormous sums Canada would cheerfully expend solely on the manufacture of destructive materials which are destroyed in destroying.

"Could not those who would put this money to work for destruction evolve a plan whereby the same money would be put to work for true peace?"

Our correspondent has been victimized by a very popular fallacy. To-day, everywhere one goes, one meets with sensible people who ask: If we could finance a tremendous war by printing bonds and printing money—by creating credit—why can we not finance an enormous expansion in peace time consumption by the same methods?

The answer, if one thinks the thing through, is simple. It is that we could print the bonds and the money in peace just as we did in war, and perhaps with similar temporary benefit, but that what would ultimately happen to the thing in peace would be what ultimately happened to it in the war. A new disaster would be piled upon an old one.

The war left us with a colossal debt. That is what is wrong with us. While that debt was being created, production was being expanded. Inflation—credit inflation—did seem to be creating wealth. We were paying our armies with pieces of paper, buying food, munitions and other things with other pieces of paper. What we forgot was that some day the paper had to be redeemed—our Victory Bonds paid for.

We are redeeming that paper now—or trying to. Trying to escape from the consequences of inflated prices, defaults, enormously increased taxes, general confiscation of capital; trying as well to deal with the re-shifting of creditor-debtor relationships, with their problems baffling man's wit. They are the things that produced—and which maintain—world-wide depression.

So that when our correspondent asks us why we don't do what we did during the war, we ask him merely to look at the consequences of the war. Ask him to consider what happened because of all the credit issued then. To remember that between financing something and paying for something there is a vast difference.

No, we can't help one set of debts by piling upon them a new set of debts. That doctrine is so mad, the wonder is that so many sane people entertain it at all.—Ottawa Journal.

BRANCH PLANTS IN CANADA.

M. J. Patton, tariff consultant and economist, writes in the Financial Post upon the subject of branch plants in Canada, and in particular in reference to a somewhat hostile attitude he has noted. A few years ago, he points out, every effort was being put forth, even through Government channels, to get outside money to come into this country. Now a querulous note is sometimes sounded, and items appear in the press begrudging foreign investors the return they get for use of their money.

The writer stresses the fact that this country has been very much dependent upon foreign capital—could not have developed without it. There has been larger investment from the U. S. because that country is next door, and also because the British business man has been slower to venture. The latter favors bonds, debentures and mortgages.

To-day, Canada has 1,500 to 1,600 branch plants, compared with 1,200 in 1930 and 200 in 1919. The acquisition of the accumulated technical and administrative knowledge of other countries which they bring here is of incalculable value to this country, and, as Mr. Patton states, is often too little appreciated. Incidentally, it is worth noting that the management of firms controlled by outside capital is largely Canadian, and tends to become more so as they grow. In the case of the Borden Company, for example, virtually all its executives are Canadians. Each of the managers in the various Canadian centres is in complete control of his company, and is held responsible for its success, although he has the advice and experience of the central executive to draw upon whenever he wishes. He is like the captain of a ship in complete command and with full responsibility even when the owner is aboard.

Beyond an occasional allusion to the returns on invested capital which go across the line, we must say that in our experience and observation, the critical attitude to which Mr. Patton refers has seldom been encountered. Certainly, in these days the establishment or expansion of a branch plant would be as heartily welcome as at any former time. The employment so provided is exceedingly acceptable, and in respect of personnel transplanted this country has gained many good citizens. It is true that the British preferential tariff, with its effect upon export trade, has had much to do with establishment and expansion here of industries which originally developed in the United States; and perhaps in some cases the over established Canadian concerns. But in respect of their pay-rolls, expenditure for material, and share in contribution to taxation, they are an asset to the country regardless of their origin. In any event, the capital thus invested has as much right to respect as the estimated $1,700,000,000 which Canadians have invested outside their own country.

"Every dollar of outside capital invested in Canada means more employment for Canadians," Mr. Patton writes. "As a young nation, we are greatly in need of more foreign capital, and with millions of dollars worth of wealth yet undeveloped, and as yet useless to us in forest, farm, mine, factory and waterpower, we shall require hundreds of millions of additional capital as soon as the channels of international trade are cleared of the obstructions placed in them by economic nationalism. That day will come as surely as the sun shines. It is bad policy for us, in the meantime, to do anything that would estrange the outside capital we so much need."—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Vancouver relief camp workers are planning a march on Ottawa, which looks like a spectacular way of getting into trouble.

The size of the audience which greeted "Comrade" Sam Scarlett on the Market Square on Thursday night must have convinced that eloquent visitor that Peterborough is not much interested in Communism.

When the Minister of Justice throws doubts upon the validity of some of the Government measures, the public may be pardoned for not being able to arrive at an opinion concerning the legislation.

After all, an investigation of the MacPhail charges can scarcely be turned into a wide-open inquiry into penitentiary administration. It was never intended to be that.

NEWS OF OUR OWN VILLAGE

2 flying machines will be in our midst this week end carrying folks up into the ozone to get a glimpse of the berg from aloft. Sun bathers on the roofs is warned to govern themselves accordingly, point out we.

Some of the village fans report the new fence at the ball yard is so high you can't even look over with a periscope. Still if you get a glimpse at all, you're ahead of the game, lads, for you don't hawta pay Mitch Hepburn's new amusement tax, say we consolingly.

Doc Murray Fraser give pasteurization quite a boost talking to the Rotarians when they et at Graham's Hotel, Mon. The Hear Hears was supplied by Geo. Gillespie, your scribe notes.

Jack Vernors clock works, over on the lift lock hill, is going to have a $60,000 lean to added unto it, we hear with satisfaction. This village mill is certainly keeping the Empire awake, say we proudly in passing.

Our village ball has absorbed a couple bumps at the hands of the Oshawas and the Kingstons recently, but it's a long season, say we hopefully, and it's a long lane that gathers no moss, or something.

Doc Embury was nominated by the Tories at Marmora, east of here, Wed., to run in Hastings-Peterborough and him and Rork Ferguson will battle it out if they don't both get lost somewheres in that 100-mile riding before election day.

ALL OF US

(By Marshall Maslin.)

"I'LL NEVER SPEAK TO HIM AGAIN!"

SHE WAS A very pretty young lady, but she was bursting with rage....So at the moment she wasn't at all pretty. She was ugly....And I could not help hearing what she was saying to her friend. How could I help hearing? And who WOULD stuff his ears with cotton when a pretty young lady is pouring out her woes and her rage right alongside of you? (Not I!)

She was furious with "him." He said he'd meet her at half-past eight, and she waited and she waited and she WAITED. And he didn't show up until half-past NINE with some silly story about a flat tire....Flat tire? He was the flat tire!....And he didn't even telephone....And she told him a few things and, furthermore, SHE WAS NEVER GOING TO SPEAK TO HIM AGAIN! Never, never, NEVER! as long as she lived.

So that's it, is it? So, pretty lady, you're never going to speak to him again....He's out, is he? Out of your life, out of your dreams, out of your future, out of everything, forever and forever?....When you see him you're going to tilt your charming nose. If he's in the same room you're going to look right through him. And won't HE be upset, humiliated, furious? And won't HE come around and ask for forgiveness?

No, he will NIT! He'll shrug his shoulders and find another girl. He'll say to himself: "What do I care? What difference does it make to ME whether she ever speaks to me again or not? I'm lucky, I am! What did I ever see in her, anyway?" (He will if he has any sense.)

So you see, pretty lady? Or don't you see? And perhaps after a while you'll see that you can't do this sort of thing. You can't be so high and mighty, you can't be so sensitive, you can't be so quick tempered and proud!....Because, after a while, you won't be speaking to anybody and nobody will be speaking to YOU .... and how will you like that? (And how am I doing as a volunteer adviser?)

Your Health

By Dr. LOGAN CLENDENING

The most valuable contributions to medical progress of late years have been made in the field of infant nutrition. Most valuable because practical and real, and not theoretical, and because they save humanity at the source.

The ways we have of determining whether nutrition is improved are various. One good index is the teeth. A few years ago, in a large children's hospital associated with a state university, one of the physicians began to be impressed with the fact that the teeth of the children showed a hardening, whereas they had previously been soft. It was curious that these children were diabetic, and the reason for the result was apparently due to the fact that their diet had been carefully selected in order to make it "complete." Nutritionists now use the words "complete diet" to indicate a diet which has all the necessary elements for growth and health in it.

There are a number of complete diets which will arrest tooth decay, some high and some low in fat, and others high and low in sugar. Arrested tooth decay has been observed with such regularity when the diet has been well controlled, that some physicians are confident that healthy teeth can be produced in all instances by dietary means alone. Most of us, and certainly most dentists, however, are unwilling to say that cleanliness is not also necessary. The tooth brush and tooth paste and the tooth brush drill are still part of the health program.

While various people have emphasized one or the other element in the diet as affecting tooth health and decay, the consensus is that there is no single food deficiency responsible for tooth decay, and the individual nutritional factor should not receive undue emphasis. In other words, a general, well-balanced diet will make healthy teeth.

Vitamin D milk is certainly one of the substances which is responsible for the prevention of tooth decay. There are many forms of Vitamin D milk on the market, nearly any one of them as good as the other so long as they are approved by the Certified Milk Producers Association of America. The so-called irradiated Vitamin D milk has not been found, according to a well-known pediatrician of my acquaintance, to be any better than the other certified Vitamin D milks.

Another portion of the body which is receiving attention from a nutritional standpoint, is the blood. Experiments have been done to show that animals living solely on a milk diet develop nutritional anemia, which can be cured with a combination of copper and iron. These findings seemed, at first, to be merely of experimental interest, and children's specialists, in general, did not feel that they saw very much of this nutritional anemia, but careful check-ups of large children's clinics have shown that in a large number of cases the blood is deficient, and this deficiency is rectified by the use of copper and iron salts.

What's in the Name of Canadian Cities and Towns?

DRYDEN, ONTARIO

This town was founded by the Ontario government in 1896 at the time of the construction of the transcontinental railway. It first was known as "Barclay's Tank," presumably for a man prominent in rail construction work, then renamed "New Prospect," and eventually christened "Dryden", in honor of the then Ontario minister of agriculture.

Incorporated in 1909, Dryden is the site of a big paper plant. A. B. Orvis, one of the pioneer settlers, still lives there and has made a hobby of growing plums, crab apples, cherries and other small fruits.

ON THIS DATE

A DAY IN CANADIAN HISTORY

By Fred Williams

A DAY OF POSTAL ANNIVERSARIES

June 1 is an important date in the history of the Canadian Post Office. On that date in 1857 a money order exchange was established between Canada and Great Britain, the limit of a single order being fixed at $20.00. This reform had long been asked. As early as 1852 the colonial secretary pointed out the increasing emigration to the colonies and the desire of persons prospering there to assist their relatives to follow them. He estimated that over £1,000,000 was sent yearly through the agency of private firms for that purpose and he asked the postmaster general of Great Britain to consider the question of extending to the colonies the system of money orders which had proved so successful in Great Britain. It was not, however, until 1855 that money orders were introduced into the Canadian postal system, but two years later came the reciprocal interchange with London. In 1932 money orders to an amount exceeding $132,000,000 were issued in Canada, of which $11,000,000 were payable in foreign countries while orders in excess of $9,000,000 were received from other countries to be paid in Canada.

On this date in 1871 the first postal cards were issued by the Canadian post office. At first there was considerable objection to them because they enabled postal officials, especially in rural districts, to become acquainted with other people's business; but this objection gradually wore off. In time came the picture postcard as a souvenir of a holiday, but few anticipated the enormous use to which postcards would be put in business, especially since the letter rate has been increased. The reply postcard, a great favorite in England, has never been popular in Canada, but still several thousand of them are sold each year and in certain cases they prove a great convenience.

Peterborough's Possibilities

By HOMER MOORE

ARTICLE 23

The students of Peterborough schools will soon be asking parents to buy plenty of gasoline for the car so the whole family can go exploring along the roads of northern Peterborough County. If such is done it will be the means of not only providing a real holiday but also information secured by observation which may later be of value to both boys and girls as our county starts on its real development program.

Everybody likes to explore. It is not necessary to go to Africa or some other far off place in order to be an explorer. You can be an explorer near home.

ou can be an explorer right in Peterborough County and in doing so you will find many wondrous bits of scenery and peculiar-looking rock formations which will be useful knowledge for students and parents. These short trips here, there and everywhere in our county will, if the occupants of the car are observant, be of value in schools, in home conversation, in various ways. Perhaps such trips may bring to light the fact of the presence in this county of some mineral at present unknown. Such trips may bring to the front some latent ability in the art of writing books which of itself could help picture to the outside world, the beauty and resources of our county. This of course would help our printers, book-binders and dealers in stationery supplies.

So, to help develop any latent ability in the mind of your child, fill up the tank of your car with gasoline and explore your own county. The gasoline tanks on our streets are ready to supply any quantity. The garage men will see that your car is in good shape for those trips. The grocers and provision stores will suply food suitable for healthy appetites which those pine-scented hills will produce. If you find the food supply low before your trip is finished, there are people throughout the area who would be glad to get some money for supplying food to hungry explorers!

What other area in the whole world can offer such a combination of interests for holiday seekers as can Peterborough County? American tourists have discovered the beauties of Stoney Lake and come every summer, but while they are content to remain at "the lakes," we here in this city should go beyond the lakes and see what is in those districts which might be worth knowing. Careful driving is necessary but the scenery is worth any bumps one may get. There is a right-angle turn in one road. At that turn you can look down hundreds of feet and see the tops of trees which block your view of deeper depths. As you view that mysterious valley, an impulse sweeps over the mind to clamber down into it, but "reason" comes into action and the decision is to seek for another road which may take you into that valley. It uses up more gas to find that road but in that case "the longest way 'round is the shortest way."

The shortest way because the easiest way—the quickest way. Those little lakes either side of the road have a lure all their own but the motorist bent on exploring that valley he saw a few minutes before, decides to visit those lakelets on some other trip. Soon his car sweeps 'round a curving road and the valley is his to explore. The car stops. The occupants gaze in wonder. Now they are looking upward—up the same rocksy "mountain" they had previously wanted to clamber down. "What a height it appears to be! Here and there the sun shines through the tree-tops. It glints the rocks until moving branches blot it out! But there it is again! Up the explorers go, holding on a rock here, a tree there. Foot by foot, yard by yard, up that rocky hill-side. There is is again. The climbers climb faster eagerly, excitedly, for just beyond is a yellow ribbon in the rock. What does that mean? How can it be reached? The rock just ahead is about seven feet high, straight up and down like a wall. How can that be climbed? A family council is held. The problem is solved. The boy of the family gets on his father's shoulders and is soon "over the top." He finds a wind-blown tree-limb nearby. This he rolls down and dumps it over the rock to his parents on the lower ledge. They all shinny up that pole—over the seven foot height where deer scratches plainly indicate a deer had sometime made the leap in one bound! The walking becomes easier but where is that yellow ribbon seen from below? It has disappeared! Was it really a yellow ribbon in the rock? Maybe it was only the sun shining on a piece of quartz? Maybe it was an optical illusion?

There is is again—farther up—just over that little rock. How tired and hungry human beings can become but the sun is going down and Peterborough lights will soon be glimmering. That yellow ribbon must be found. There it is—and it's gold! There is a nugget over there and another over there but what good is it in those rocks! It must somehow be secured!

Is it government land or somebody's farm? Gold in the rocks—and found by a family playing explorers! Gold all around but of no use! It brought to mind the old saying "Water, water everywhere, but not a drop to drink." Gold everywhere on that hillside or on that mountain side but of no use to the finders because no license to hunt for it or no deed to the land and gold must not be highgraded!

However, it is found and that perilous climb was worth the experience and the thrill and the future possibilities for building a new house, paying off the mortgage and giving the city council some—plenty—for development purposes for the City Beautiful—the city of Peterborough. Well, such won't happen again. That gold will be safe in those rocks until legal documents of various kinds enable its possession."

The foregoing is a purely imaginary trip and conversation which could happen to any Peterborough family bent on seeing much and learning much. While it has been a description of an imaginary trip and its possibilities, it it is based on a similar trip which was actually taken in a similar area and at the top—gold!

This article is written to enthuse students and parents as to Peterborough's possibilities and to remind them of the saying: "To get to the TOP you must CLIMB."

Commission To Buy Capacitor Off C.G.E.

Decision to purchase a capacitor from the Canadian General Electric Company at a cost of $4,840.00, which is an installation for the correction of the local power factor, was made at a meeting of the Peterborough Utilities Commission under chairmanship of Gordon S. Matthews, yesterday afternoon.

Ross L. Dobbin, general manager of the Commission, received sanction of the Commission to purchase a trailer for carrying poles at a cost of $540.00, plus sales tax.

Authority was given to the Gas Department superintendent to contract with the Sanitary Ice Supply Company for steam coal requirements at the same price as in former years.

Harry L. Beal, manager of the Gas Department, was authorized to attend the annual convention of the Canadian Gas Association to be held in Quebec on June 10 and 11, and was further empowered to give a turn-in allowance of $10.00 for old refrigerators and a special 10 per cent discount on the first of the five new gas refrigerators sold by the Department.

Regarding motor truck insurance it was decided to place insurance through A. A. McIntyre to include passenger hazards also.

Penny Bank Deposits Show Big Increase

The amount which the public school children of Peterborough (including May's and Confederation schools in North Monaghan), had on deposit at the end of April last in the Penny Bank, was $16,942.30, an increase of $1,039.45 as compared with the same period a year ago.

Average weekly percentage of pupils depositing during March and April at the various schools was as follows: King Edward, 72; Queen Alexandra, 64; May's, 46; Confederation, 46; South Central, 45; King George, 42; Queen Mary, 39; Central, 32; Prince of Wales, 31.

For the entire 476 schools in the province which are saving through the Penny Bank, the total on deposit at the end of April was $1,337,377.82 as compared with $1,297,796.21 at the end of April last year.

Boxed Plants in Plentiful Supply—Broilers Bring 30 Cents Pound.

Eggs could be bought at a late hour at 15 cents a dozen in the open section of the market, to-day. Upstairs, they sold from 16 to 16 cents a dozen.

Broilers were 30 cents a pound, young birds that could almost be put in the same category were 20 cents, while chickens sold mostly at 17 and 18 cents a pound and hens at 15 and 16 cents.

The most plentiful of this morning's offerings were in the boxed plant class, with pretty nearly everything in the line of small vegetables and flower on sale. The odor of lilacs in fragrant bunches also pervaded the basekt section today, and gorgeous purple iris lilies were 25 cents a dozen. Tall green ferns could be had for a dime a root.

Maple syrup was offered at $1.50 a gallon; asparagus sold at 2 bunches for 15 cents, or 4 for 25 cents; potatoes were plentiful at 50 cents a bag (and good quality), and little pigs were $12 a pair.

Alexandria, Egypt, will spend $1,250,000 in modernizing its airport.

Consolidated Smelters Closes With Net Gain of Two Points.

NICKEL STEADY.

TORONTO, June 1.—(CP)—Slow and heavy throughout the morning industrial section of Toronto exchange displayed firming tendencies just before the close.

Imperial and International Petroleum eased about ⅛ each. Consolidated Smelters was down at the opening but improved as the session progressed, closing with a net gain of two points. Nickel was steady to strong.

Walkers common edged up to a stronger close. Brewery stocks displayed the same sluggishness. The only price adjustment in the group was a loss of ¼ for Brewing Corporation common. Steels posted a few losses including 1¼ on National Steel Car, and ⅝ for Dominion Bridge.

FOUR INJURED NEAR ORILLIA

Truck and Car Collide on the Atherly-Orillia Highway.

DRIVER CHARGED.

ORILLIA, Ont., June 1 (CP) — Four men were injured, one seriously, when a motor truck westward bound on King's Highway No. 12, between Orillia and Atherly, was involved in a head-on crash with an automobile.

Robert MacFarland, 19-year-old member of the Royal Canadian Air Force, stationed at Camp Borden, one of the passengers in the auto, was most seriously injured. He is suffering considerable loss of blood, a dislocated hip, severe cuts about the head, and face, shock, and undetermined internal injuries.

Maurice Laroche, 25, also a Camp Borden airman, owner and driver of the auto, has cuts, bruises and severe shock, and is also in hospital. Rupert Kritch, 24, the third occupant of the Laroche car, is in hospital with a deep cut over one eye.

William Cannon, 21, of Drumheller, Alta., driving the truck, has two broken ribs, cuts and bruises, but was permitted to leave the hospital.

Constable Lewis Carr, who investigated, charged Cannon with reckless driving. Frederick Davison, Sudbury, described by police as the proprietor of the Davison Motors, and Cannon's employer, was charged with permitting Cannon to drive without an operator's permit.

SHARP DECLINES CHICAGO GRAIN

Prices Tumble Into New Low Levels For Season Early To-day.

UNSETTLED MARKET.

CHICAGO, June 1 (AP)—Tumbling into new low levels of the season, grain prices dropped sharply early to-day in a wave of liquidation that swept a nervous and unsettled market.

Pit observers said President Roosevelt's reference to possible severe tumbles of wheat and cotton prices had a notable bearish influence on the trade.

Wheat broke more than three cents to below 82 cents a bushel for July. All wheat, rye and oats deliveries as well as December corn established new record lows but recovered fractionally at the end of the first half hour of trading.

GOLD ISSUES LEAD ACTION

Firming of London Price on Bar Silver Gives Support to White Metal.

OILS STEADY.

TORONTO, June 1 (C.P.). — The mining section of Toronto Stock Exchange staged a mild recovery in slow trading to-day, volume showing moderate shift to the gold issues.

Noranda dipped moderately and recovered, while Big Missouri, Base Metals Corporation, Sudbury Basin and Falconbridge merely held their ground. Firming of the London quotation on bar silver gave support to the white metal. Eldorado, Bear, Castle and Peterson-Cobalt had 1 to 4 cents as gains for the day. Hollinger Gold weakened 20 cents, and Bralorne was up 5. Ventures dropped about 5 cents and St. Anthony was active but unchanged. The oils were steady, with little business in the group.

KARPIS GANG IS BEING BLAMED

week-end. The identifications gave rise to widespread belief the Karpis gang was involved in the kidnapping.

Authorities generally and Federal officers in particular would not say whether they were interested in these report.

As Bomomi started for Tacoma in his decrepit automobile, he was met outside the city limits by John Dreher, Seattle newspaperman.

Dreher gave Bomomi back a pair of shoes the farmer had loaned the boy and brought the child to the Weyerhaeuser home in his taxi. The farmer said he needed the shoes for his daughter, so George made the rest of the trip in his stocking feet.

"Did they hurt you, George?" Dreher asked the boy.

"No, they didn't hurt me—because they all kept saying, 'He's too valuable to hurt'," the boy replied.

"They told me once we were in Oregon and I remember once we were in Aberdeen," the boy continued.

He said his abductors put him in a trunk while travelling, but said he was not uncomfortable, because there were air holes.

George said he had been kept in a house three nights and four days and was allowed to read newspaper accounts of the search for him and his kidnappers.

George said he believed the house he was confined in was about a mile and a half north of Issaquah.

The boy told the newspaperman his uncle paid the ransom shortly before his release.

"Your Pa will pick you up," George said he was told as he was let out on the road about four miles from Issaquah.

For hours George walked in the darkness, he told Dreher, until his shoes were sodden and "squishy." George said he thought he walked about six miles before he saw a farm house.

Farmer Answered

Plodding up to its door he knocked and the farmer, Boniface, opened it.

"I'm the little boy who was kidnapped," George told the farmer.

Fed and clothed and his feet encased in the shoes of the farmer's daughter, George was bundled up and started for home in the farmer's automobile.

Dreher and his charge reached the Weyerhaeuser home at 7.45 a.m.

At one time George was taken to the bank of a river and feared, he said, he might be thrown into the water. When he expressed his fear, he said, one of his captors assured him cheerfully:

"Don't you worry, Kid, you're worth too much to be thrown away."

Speeding to the Weyerhauser home, the taxicab swung into the basement driveway and Dreher leaped out with his small charge.

A door opened and Balcom, a family friend who had kept the long vigil with the Weyerhaeusers, stepped out and took the boy in his arms, hastening into the house with George.

A joyful reunion with the distraught and tearful family followed.

As if by telepathy, the news spread through Tacoma, ending the eight-day watch of local State and Federal officers, friends, an army of newspaper writers, and the general citizenry.

The arrival at the home found photographers and curious onlookers pushed aside from the doorway by Balcom as he drew the curly-haired boy within the door.

Government men, now unleashed, set in motion the most elaborate man-hunting machinery ever assembled in the West. Sheriff's police and State patrol officers throughout the region took up the hunt.

At the home George's return caused wild joy.

Dreher said the boy identified three of his captors as "Harry, Bill and Alvin—who must be that Karpis fellow."

Ever since the boy was kidnaped, the army of Federal, State and city officers have been attempting to connect members of the Alvin Karpis gang, sought for the kidnapping of Edward G Bremer at St. Paul, Minn., with the Weyerhaeuser abduction.

Many witnesses said they had seen members of the Karpis gang in Tacoma at various times during the past year and even during the week-end at the Yeyerhaeuser abduction.

Details of Kidnapping.

Detail sot the "snatch" which was well planned, were related by the youngster on his speedy race to his home and parents.

He verified the deductions of the private investigators when he said he walked past Annie Wright Seminary to the Tacoma Tennis Club Grounds on the day of his abduction and "climbed a flight of steps to a curbing. Two men were waiting there.

They were standing near an automobile, the boy said. One wore a brown suit and one was the man whom George came to know as "Alvin."

"Come over here, son, can you tell me where Stadium Way is?' he was asked, as he neared the men.

"I don't know," George said he replied.

'Why so shy?' one of the men countered as George approached.

Both men then grabbed him, he said, and hustled him into a sedan, while one of them clapped his hand over the boy's mouth.

In the automobile, which started up at once, George was blind-folded and covered with blankets, he said.

During the eight-day period he was held captive, he said the kidnappers used two automobiles, a "tan sedan and a big grey Buick." He said he saw six men of the gang while he was in the kidnappers' hands.

When he was led into the "hide-out house" near Issaquah for his long stay he was blindfolded, and when he was led out early to-day he also was blindfolded, he said. He was taken for a "little ride" before his release in a forest-lined road.

MINING STOCKS

ST. ANTHONY

Exploration work being carried forward on the 500 foot level in an easterly direction at the St. Anthony Gold Mines, Thunder Bay district, during the current month, has opened up new ore for a distance of 35 feet up to May 24th according to H. P. Bellingham, president. The vein averages from three to five feet in width and is of an excellent grade. The ore coming from this heading is being sent direct to the mill and averages $12.24 per ton. According to Mr. Bellingham, the important feature of this work is the fact that the level above is at the 350 feet horizon so that the new work is adding 150 feet of vertical ore.

CANADIAN MALARTIC

Canadian Malartic Mines, controlled subsidiary of Ventures Ltd. and Sudbury Basin, are preparing to install an additional 300 ton mill unit, according to wire advices from Noranda. The company recently shipped its first gold brick. The construction engineer left Noranda for the property yesterday it is stated.

CHORAL SOCIETY TO GIVE CONCERT

Recently Formed Society Will Present Second Program on June 3rd.

The Cathedral Choral Society, the recently-formed singing organization of fifty mixed voice, will present for the second time their choral concert in the Canadian Legion Hall on the evening of the King's birthday, June 3, at 8.15, in the Canadian Legion Hall.

This concert is being sponsored by the local Council K. of C. Charity Welfare Club, to assist the needy in these lean depression years.

The choir will again be assisted by the Searles Instrumental Trio, whose superb musicianship needs no introduction to Peterborough. Musical critics of the city have been most enthusiastic in their praise of this choral group, and a most enjoyable evening can be anticipated by those who anticipate attending this choral and instrumental offering.

Market Closing On All Exchanges

WALL STREET.

NEW YORK, June 1 (A.P.).—The stock market continued to point downward to-day as traders, after an overnigh: study of the President's views on the NRA court decision, apparently found little to promote bullishness.

Some of the metals improved, but declines of fractions to a point or more ruled. The close was heavy. Transfers approximated 700,000 shares.

RELIABLE PRINTING no order too small

MUSICAL PROGRAM IS MUCH ENJOYED

Entertainment in Mount St. Joseph by Senior Pupils of St. Mary's Convent.

On Tuesday evening, May 28th, in the Auditorium at Mount St. Joseph, a very high class musical entertainment was enjoyed by more than one hundred guests. The program, presented by the senior pupils of St Mary's Convent, gave evidence of talent on the part of the students who rendered the selections and of care in teaching. The variety of the program lent an added charm, there being numerous piano, violin, violoncello and harp selections, interspersed with elocution and vocal solos.

The program of the evening opened with an orchestral rendering of the Vivat Pastor Bonus to greet the clergy who were present. These were Rev. Paul Costello, rector St. Peter's Cathedral; Rev. J. J. O'Brien, P. P., Sacred Heart; Rev. J. T. Finn, Rev. C. Carroll, Rev V J. Masterson, D.D., all of St. Peter's Cathedral staff.

The other members of the program progressed in the following order:

Beaudoux ..... Greeting
Lieurance ..... Carnival
Violin—Joseph Nolan (1st violin), Clarence Collins (2nd violin).
Violoncello — Miss Josephine Lynch, John Sheehan.
Harp—Miss Marion Best.
Piano—Miss Alma Duffy.
Rosewig ..... Ave Maria
Vocal solo by Mrs. Leo Picard, Accompanist—Miss V. Scollard.
Strauss-Schultz—"The Blue Danube Waltzes"
Miss Marion Best, Miss Josephine Lynch (two pianos.
Bishop .....Should He Upbraid
Phillips ..... Wake Up
Two vocal solos by Mrs. Leo Picard.
Di Capua ..... O Sol Mio
Violin—Joseph Nolan (1st violin), Clarence Collins (2nd violin).
Violoncello — Miss Josephine Lynch, Joseph Sheehan.
Harp—Miss Marion Best.
Richmond, Dance of the Honeybees
Misses Claire Quarry, Rose Bilinsky, Misses Alma Duffy, Marion Best (two pianos).
Nesbitt ....The Monks' Magnificat
Recitation by Miss Helen Ross.
Boisdeffre ..... The Brook
Cadman ..... Memories
Violin—Joseph Nolan.
Violoncello—John Sheehan.
Piano—Miss V. Scollard.
Behr ..... Dance of the Winds
Misses Ella Meagher, Agnes Mayock, Misses Doris Strickland, Phyllis Perdue (two pianos).
Sanderson .... Be Still Blackbird
Spross ..... Will o' the Wisp
Vocal selections by Mrs. Leo Picard.
Tschaikowsky ....Overture of 1812
Herbert .....March of the Toys
Misses Josephine Lynch, Marion Best (two pianos).
God Save the King.

Each production was greeted with ardent applause from the appreciative audience, and the young musicians who so skilfully executed the different numbers on the program, have reason to be gratified with the success of their entertainment.

The stage of the auditorium was gaily decorated with ferns and cut flowers, which setting seemed to conform with and enhance the beauty of the program.

Those who were privileged to be present on that occasion are generous in their words of commendation and appreciation of the program which they so thoroughly enjoyed.

STOPGAP PLANS TO RESCUE NRA

President's pronouncements was a clash between the American Liberty League and Senator Robinson, Democratic leader.

Upset Pet Plan

Jouett Shouse, President of the league, said the President "renounced" States rights "entirely" and sought to "abolish our dual form of government and the system of check and balances." He said the decision the President called for should not wait, but "be made at the earliest opportunity." Attacking the President's stand he said Mr. Roosevelt condemns a Supreme Court decision "which upset one of his pet plans to assume unwarranted power."

Robinson's statement declared the President "has not renounced the Democratic theory of States' rights at all." He said, "If mining and manufacturing, and even farming, are to be classified as intrastate enterprises merely because the point of production is in one locality, though the products radiate all over the country, the ability of the government to legislate as to purity of food, etc., is hampered if not destroyed."

SEVEN ADOPTIONS A DAY OTTAWA SOCIETY REPORTS

OTTAWA, June 1 (C.P.).—Miss Janet Long, executive director of the Children's Aid Society here, said to-day the success of Hon. David Croll's "adopt-a-baby" week was indicated by a marked jump in the number of adoptions from the society's shelter.

Miss Long said the normal average number o. adoptions was one a day in Ottawa, but that since the Ontario Minister of Welfare launched his campaign the number had risen to seven a day.

FINANCIAL NEWS BRIEFS

J M CONSOLIDATED

John W. Shaw, consulting engineer of J M Consolidated Mines, in a dispatch to company officials states that an important ore body was cut on the 250 foot level. The ore appears to be the downward extension of the new ore body recently opened up on the first level. Full details as to the width and values are expected in a day or two.

ASHLEY GOLD

Ashley Gold Mining Corp. operating in the Matachewan area have commenced an extensive diamond drilling campaign both from surface and from the 800 foot level according to advices over brokerage wires. The drilling is being done in an endeavor to relocate the original Ashley vein, it is stated.

COLUMARIO CONS.

Columario Cons. Gold Mines, Usk, B.C. is working in good ore at three different places in the mine, according to a letter received at head office from J. Willman, engineer in charge. Mr. Willman makes special mention of a new raise on the No. 5 vein where assays as high as 2 ounces were secured across a width of ranging from 18 to 24 inches. On the lower levels this vein was split in three stringers which now appear to come together. It is from 200 to 300 feet yet to the surface from this raise and the vein averages about three feet wide for a length of 400 feet on surface. No. 4 vein on the third and fourth levels have developed to carry good ore in shoot from 2 to 4 feet. The company recently resumed milling operations and at last report the mill was treating 25 tons per day but this is to be increased to 50 tons at an early date.

DOMINION STORES.

The last dividend payment of 30 cents a share by Dominion Stores was made on January 2, 1935, at which time the directors announced that future payments will be on a semi-annual basis, and that dividends would be paid only out of current earnings. The next payment, therefore, is due July 2 if earnings will warrant a distribution.

In the year 1934, Dominion Stores earned only 6 cents a share. In the first 16 weeks of 1935 to April 20, total sales of the company were $5,382,232, a decrease of $505,920 as compared with the same period in 1934, so that unless operating expenses have been reduced, net earnings are lower at the present time. This leads up to the question as to what action the directors will take when they meet to consider the dividend within a few weeks. There is practically no doubt whatever that the old $1.20 annual rate will not be continued, as the issue is selling to yield over 14 per cent. on that basis. In all likelihood an appreciable reduction in the dividend will be made. A payment of 20 cents for the six months, indicating a 40-cent annual rate, would return a yield of 4.80 per cent. at current market quotations.

Dominion Stores is two-thirds owned in the United States, is Canada's largest grocery chain with about 495 stores in operation, and the stock is held by 2,800 shareholders.

MONTREAL POWER DEBENTURES.

The high regard of investors for Montreal Power Debentures is evident from the fact that the security is currently selling close to its call price of $50. Those desiring a short-term investment have been purchasing "Power" debentures as they are subject to redemption at $50 from July 1, 1937, and are due July 1, 1939. The yield at prevailing prices is just over 3 per cent., which is not unattractive when it is considered that the chartered banks after June 1 will be paying 1 per cent. on savings deposits of corporations and institutions.

The stability of Montreal Power is evident from the fact that those customers of the company who purchased the debentures in 1930—at the beginning of the worst depression in history and the greatest market decline—now find their capital intact and have been receiving better than bank interest in the interval.

CANADIAN GRAIN.

Canadian wheat in store for the week ending May 17, 1935, shows a decrease of 2,501,438 bushels as compared with the previous week and an increase of 8,213,234 bushels when compared with the same week in 1934. The visible supply was reported as 208,778,459 bushels as compared with a revised figure of 211,279,897 for the previous week and 200,565,225 bushels for the same week in 1934.

Canadian wheat in the United States amounted to 10,468,249 bushels, a net decrease of 546,524 bushels from the previous week when 11,014,573 bushels were reported. United States wheat in Canada was shown as 546,912 bushels as compared with 132,760 bushels a year ago. Wheat in transit on the lakes is reported as 1,002,702 bushels compared with 884,138 bushels for the previous week.

Wheat marketings in the Prairie Provinces for the week ending May 10, 1935, amounted to only 686,259 bushels, a little over half the amount of the previous week's total when 1,250,689 bushels were marketed. During the corresponding week a year ago, the receipts were 1,071,769 bushels.

southwest at almost the same time the Republican river leaped its banks and flooded the lowlands here, leaving the city in darkness.

Toll Will Reach 250

Dr. J. M. Willis up all night giving first aid to injured, said he believed the death toll might reach 250. No attempt was made to estimate the number of injured and no reports had been received from more than a score of small cities and villages.

He said his estimate might be high but it will be several days before true conditions would be known due to lack of communication facilities.

Rescue crews worked feverishly to reach 38 men marooned by flood waters on the roof of the Nebraska Light and Power Company for 36 hours. Every attempt to reach them failed and at 11 a.m. they remained atop the wrecked structure. The plant, valued at $300,000 was demolished and McCook was without power and lights.

No trace had been found to-day of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Miller and five of their six children seen yesterday floating down the roaring stream in their house.

The Aristocrat, Burlington railroad fast Denver-Chicago passenger train, was marooned at Benkelman and railroad officials said the passengers must remain aboard the cars at least until to-morrow night. The number of passengers aboard was not determined.

ONTARIO HOG PRICES.

TORONTO, June 1 (C.P.).—Hull bacon hogs sold 25 cents lower to-day, while four other reporting points held unchanged. Supplies sold in a range of $8.75 at Chatham to $9.25 at Hull. Peterborough and Kitchener levels were at $8.85 and London at $9.

Twenty-one talkies in English were shown at one time in Paris recently.

Magistrate's Court

West Hart, 38, of R.R. 4 Havelock, to-day pleaded "guilty" to being drunk in charge of a car, and upon his own request was remanded for sentence until Wednesday, bail being set in the sum of $1,000. The accused sought a remand in order to attend to some urgent business, which he said, he had in Toronto. He is a butcher. Following a minor accident in which he was involved he was arrested yesterday by Constable Chris Roberts.

Two transients, who gave their names as James McGregor and Malcolm Martin were convicted as "drunks" the first being fined $10 and $4.50 costs of ten days, and the latter $15 and $4.50 or 15 days.

Robert Anderson pleaded "guilty" to being drunk as a second offender and was given the option of $50 and $4.50 costs or a month's imprisonment.

CAMPBELLFORD

SEYMOUR MAN IS ACQUITTED THEFT CHARGE

Magistrate Langley Dismisses Cassidy Case in Campbellford Court.

CAR DRIVER FINED.

CAMPBELLFORD, June 1.—(Examiner Correspondence.)— Friday was poultry and grain day at Campbellford police court, one lonely chicken in a crate and parcels of barley and oats featured as exhibits, in a long drawn out case in which if the chicken could have spoken, the evidence might have been conclusive.

Here is the story: William Cassidy of Seymour township, was accused of theft of grain and chickens from the farm of Harold Rowe. Provincial Constable Gordon Campbell received the complaint on Sunday, May 12th, investigated, found certain chickens and grain in the Cassidy barn and laid the charge. The accused, who was ably defended by Frank G. Cushing, of Belleville, stated in his sworn evidence that he had not been in the barn for the past month, that he was working for a Mr. Horkins building a cottage and that he knew nothing about the grain or chickens in question. He had seen Rowe on the Sunday morning and told him if they were his chickens to come and take them.

Cross-examined by Col. F. D. Boggs, of Cobourg who represented the Crown, accused, under oath, was asked: "Did you steal these chickens?" Answer, "No." "Did you steal that grain?" Answer, "No, I have no idea how it got there—no idea at all."

Col. Boggs then pressed for conviction on the grounds that the goods were found in his possession and that the accused had received the goods knowing them to have been stolen.

In making his appeal, Lawyer Cushing pointed out that in all the evidence submitted nobody had definitely said that anything was stolen. Magistrate Langley dismissed the case.

Charged with operating a motor vehicle without a driver's license, George Demorest of Codrington was fined $10 and costs, making a total of $12.75. Information in this case laid by Chief Constable Hardy.

The case of Wm. McDonald, Trent Bridge, charged with operating a motor vehicle without license plates was adjourned until June 7th.

Bowling Gossip

AT HASTINGS.

HASTINGS, June 1 (Examiner Correspondence).—Hastings dropped their first four games in the Trent Valley Bowling League on Friday night on Norwood greens. The locals were bowling for the first time this season, as the local greens are not quite ready yet.

In the first pair, Cutcliffe pulled off a lop-sided win over Lynch by a 16 to 4 count. The winner lost the first end, but took the next five to pile up a count of thirteen. Dr. Carleton won his game from Johnson in the first end, when he counted a five, the margin he had at the end, with a 13 to 8 count.

In the nightcap fixtures, Johnson and Cutcliffe had a close game, the latter getting home on the long end of a 9 to 7 count. The losers won six out of the ten ends, but a four in the fourth and a three in the fifth gave Norwood the win. Five ends proved to be a specialty with the Carleton rink, getting one in the third end in their game with Lynch which they won by a score of 11 to 6.

Clerks Easy Victims For Hastings Tanners

HASTINGS, June 1, (Examiner Correspondence).—Since the Hastings and District Softball League was formed last year, Dr. Hay's Clerks have played some loose ball, but on Friday evening they eclipsed all records in absorbing a 24 to 8 count at the hand of the Tanners.

The Counter Dusters could do nothing right while the Tanners batted Whitred and Hay all over the lot.
